

Industrial park plans proceed

Westside offers hope for lost jobs

BY MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Ernie Hope owns and operates one of the last surviving blacksmith shops in Long Beach.

He's never shod a horse. But because of the unique nature of his dying craft, he does a lot of specialized jobs, taming metals over an old-world brick forge he built himself many years ago.

Jobs such as welding and bending steel, threading bolts and rods for oil-well equipment and forging springs for racetrack sulkies and buggies that run on real live horsepower, not gasoline.

It's the only business he knows and he's doing well, thank you, plying his trade in what generally is called the Westside Industrial Area.

It is the same area—roughly from the Los Angeles Flood Control Channel west to the city limits and from Eighth Street north to Pacific Coast Highway—which the City Council, several months ago, labeled "blighted" and earmarked for study as a proposed redevelopment area.

This came after the Chamber of Commerce spearheaded formation of the Economic Development Corp., a non-profit coalition of 26 local business and civic leaders formed to stimulate industrial, commercial and residential growth in Long Beach.

Operational since April, 1974, the EDC—with Dan Ridder, publisher of the Independent, Press-Telegram, as chairman of the board, and Jim Hankla as executive vice president—has contracted with the city and the redevelopment agency to serve as the planning and marketing arm for the Westside project.

It is envisioned that—by reassembling existing businesses, providing additional building sites through acquisition of housing units and closure of superfluous streets and alleys and furnishing landscaping and improvements—they can create a modern industrial park providing 10,000 to 15,000 additional jobs in the area.

THIS, the EDC and city officials reason, would help offset the loss of 19,000 jobs in the recent phase-out of the Long Beach Naval Station and also stem the rising tide of job attrition in the area.

Economic studies by Real Estate Research Corp., a consultant firm hired by the city, have indicated that the area's proximity to freeways, railroads and the port makes it the most highly valuable resource in the city for increased employment opportunities.

Hope, the area blacksmith, is open-minded about all this but...well...up to now, the Age of Technology has passed him by completely for maybe it's the other way around) and he's not sure there would be a place for his kind of business in a fancy new industrial park.

BESIDES, he resides in the area, too. Hope and his soft-spoken wife, who does his bookkeeping at an antique roll-top desk in an adjoining metal shed, moved there 27 years ago when the area had more homes than industry.

They own a cement-block house ("you can't find those anymore") next to their blacksmith shop at 1735 Cota Ave. The paint is chipping on the house, but it's paid for. And it's home.

"I guess it doesn't look so good—the house," Mrs. Hope apologized. "But it doesn't make much sense to paint it now. We don't really know what's going to happen."

AND THEN there's Robert Cavin. His graveyard

FBI said dispatching foreign agents

By JOHN M. CREWDSON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—the FBI periodically dispatches American citizens on intelligence-gathering missions outside the United States, according to a 42-year-old Florida man who says he and others have been used for that purpose.

Joseph A. Burton, an auctioneer and antiques dealer who lives in Tampa, said that for two years he posed as a Marxist in order to infiltrate revolutionary groups in the U.S. and Canada. He told the New York Times that during that period he made "about 10" trips to Canada at the FBI's direction.

Another undercover operative, a woman with whom Burton occasionally worked, confirmed in a separate interview that she made a month-long visit to China nearly four years ago in connection with her work for the bureau.

The FBI, according to one of that agency's former high officials, has "no right to run (intelligence) operations in a foreign country—that's the CIA's jurisdiction."

But neither he nor legal authorities in and out of government who were asked about the practice could point to any statute prohibiting the FBI from gathering intelligence overseas.

"I couldn't really say that there's any law being violated, or even any spirit of law," remarked John T. Eliff, a professor of politics at Brandeis University and a leading expert on the FBI's history and practice.

But Eliff pointed out that the FBI was charged with investigating federal crimes, and he questioned the advisability of the bureau political intelligence operations, especially in foreign countries that are by law the province of the CIA.

A spokesman for the CIA said his agency would have no comment on FBI operations.

James Murphy, a spokesman at FBI headquarters here, confirmed in a telephone interview that the bureau has in the past sent Ameri-

AF reservists fly Phnom Penh run

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The head of the American airline flying war supplies to Cambodia said Saturday about half his crewmen were recruited from U.S. Air Force active reservists and most of the others were ex-Air Force men, many recently off active duty.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman said the airmen do not get reserve credit for their work in Indochina.

William H. Bird and his Bird Air cargo service, using C130 cargo planes furnished by the U.S. government, took over Cambodian supply flights last October from the U.S. Air Force, whose presence in Cambodia had been limited by law.

The Pentagon spokesman said she did not know which government agency supplied the planes, but it was not the Air Force. She said Bird Air was paid from U.S. military assistance funds.

The air supply runs into Phnom Penh have been increased in recent weeks because of an insurgent offensive that has cut off most land and water supply routes.

Bird said the flights require navigators and crews trained in high-altitude parachute drop techniques, even though so far the Phnom Penh airport has remained open and the planes have been able to land their loads.

"One of the reasons we don't want people who are not current is the tremendous cost of training them," said Bird. "By going out on the original five crews and getting people who were current we saved the government over $500,000 just in flight time during training."

"Presently we are combing the reserve units for people who would want to take civilian employment doing the work they are trained to do," said Bird.

They haven't been beating down the door, he admitted — even for up to $3,000 a month — "because we cannot offer them a long-term contract. Presently this surge is only for 60 days."

Hughes burglary: who's spying?

By JACK V. FOX
United Press International

A two-story building at 7020 Romaine St. in Hollywood has become the focus of another cloak-and-dagger chapter in the saga of Howard Hughes.

The building is the "communications center" of Hughes' operations. Known as "Romaine" throughout the billionaire's empire, it has a 24-hour switchboard for relay of messages to and from subordinates around the world.

It has been a nerve center going back more than 25 years to the time when Hughes was making movies and designing aircraft. The headquarters of the parent Hughes Tool Co. was — and is — in Houston, Tex. It is now known as Summa Corp.

Equipped with sophisticated electronic security devices, "Romaine" is also believed the repository of personal files of the eccentric recluse who in recent years has flitted from Boston to Las Vegas to the Bahamas to Nicaragua to London to Vancouver, B.C.

He is now reported holed up in a luxury hotel on an island in the bay off Nassau in the Bahamas.

Around dawn last June 5, the Los Angeles Police Department received a call from the center reporting a burglary.

The police investigation reported that a gunman disarmed a security guard outside the building. The guard was forced to admit the burglars. Then he was trussed, gagged and blindfolded.

The intruders apparently spent four hours in the building. They burned open two safes with acetylene torches, ransacked files and desks without alerting others on duty.

The original report said the bur-

Faisal listens to U.S. oil plan

Chief aim: cut cartel-set price

By BARRY SCHWEID

BONN (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger discussed with Saudi Arabian King Faisal a U.S. plan for long-term oil deals between producers and consumers and then flew here Saturday for energy talks with West German leaders.

Newsmen traveling with Kissinger were told that at least one unidentified producing country had expressed interest in the plan. The chief purpose is to bring down oil prices from the current cartel-set price of $10.50 a barrel to around $6 or $7.

U.S. officials said the consuming nations are not yet in a position to negotiate a long-term deal at a fixed price, but there are signs of support from West Germany, Britain, France and Japan.

INITIALLY the impression was that the United States was seeking bilateral deals with individual producers. But on the plane en route to Bonn from Riyadh, Arabia, newsmen were told that was "without foundation." The secretary of state, in a brief comment to the American Broadcasting Co. at the Cologne-Bonn airport, said "there is no new policy."

Kissinger planned a day-long series of meetings today with German officials, beginning at breakfast with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who met him at the airport. He will lunch with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and then fly to Geneva for a dinner session with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

U.S. officials were guarded in describing Faisal's reaction to Kissinger's "floor price" proposal during their 90-minute meeting. Newsmen were told the king did not register any complaints about it.

Kissinger has proposed a minimum "floor price" that could range from $6 to $7 a barrel to force a drop from current levels while encouraging development of alternative energy sources.

Sir Julian Huxley dies; 'Public Scientist No. 1'

LONDON (AP) — Sir Julian Huxley, a distinguished biologist with an enormous range of interests whose books and broadcasts in plain language earned him the reputation as Britain's "Public Scientist No. 1," died in his London home Friday night. He was 87.

"You couldn't call him Britain's greatest scientist of the 20th century because he was intent not to specialize in any one direction," said Sir Alfred Ayer, Oxford professor of logic and a leading British scholar.

"He belonged to an older generation, and in some ways a better one, which took a much broader view of humanity."

Huxley's death coincided with that of another famous Briton, P.G. Wodehouse, a prolific writer and humorist, who died Friday in a Remsenburg, N. Y., hospital. Wodehouse was 83 and was knighted by Queen Elizabeth last month.

SOUTH KOREA CLAIMS SINKING OF RED SPY BOAT

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korean forces reported sinking a 50-ton North Korean spy boat Saturday as President Chung Hee Park's government began releasing political prisoners in a conciliatory gesture three days after Park won a referendum on his one-man rule.

The Defense Ministry said South Korean shore batteries, naval vessels and jet fighters opened fire on the Communist boat after it failed to halt near Kojin on the east coast.

It said North Korean naval vessels also joined the battle, in which one South Korean boy was killed and another wounded by stray bullets. The ministry did not list North Korean casualties.

A survivor of the sunken boat was reported found on a rubber raft along with three North Korean military uniforms. He was rescued by a South Korean boat.

Stolen car in possession of red-faced cops

DETROIT (UPI) — Ida Williams may have some pointers for police in tracking down stolen cars — if red-faced officers will listen.

Recently, Mrs. Williams was driving in the city when she spotted a familiar car, identical to the one stolen from her home last February.

She followed the car and its three male passengers until it entered a garage in downtown Detroit. That garage was at police headquarters and the three occupants in the car were undercover officers.

Mrs. Williams told police that the car was her's and was told to bring down registration papers to prove ownership. She did, and the car was returned to her—but police left unexplained where it had been for a year and how it turned up to be an unmarked police car.

Dying girl living her last wish

Combined News Services

For any girl it would have been exciting. But for Heidi Biggs, 14, it was a dream come true.

Heidi, who doctors say is suffering from a rare form of terminal cancer, boarded a plane for Hawaii Saturday to see that island paradise before she dies.

"I've been so excited about the trip I haven't been able to sleep for two days," she said, smiling from a wheelchair at Lambert-St. Louis airport.

"What I really want to do while I'm in Hawaii is ride horses, see the aqua world and the big zoo with all the beautiful tropical birds."

Heidi discovered last summer that she had only a short time to live, and newsman learned of her plight after her mother, Lucille Biggs, sought rides from their Belleville, Ill., home to a St. Louis hospital for therapy for Heidi.

After that, letters, prayers and donations began pouring in from across the country.

HEIDI BIGGS AND MOTHER BOARD PLANE FOR HAWAII —AP Wirephoto

Heidi told one of the wellwishers, Russell Penny, of Sudbury, Ontario, that what she wanted most was to see Hawaii before she died. She got the idea from a television travelogue.

Penny, who made a special trip to the Biggs' Southern Illinois home, helped raised nearly $2,400 in a trust fund for the trip.

The frail teen-ager, who weighs just 54 pounds and wears a wig to cover her bald head, may live a few months longer, according to doctors, but her mother was afraid to delay the trip.

Earlier this week about 360 persons in Sudbury sent her a nine-foot telegram wishing her well on the flight.

"My mother has about 20 rolls of film and we're going to take pictures of everything we do there," smiled Heidi, who wore overalls, a multicolored blouse and two pink flowers.

"I just hope I can keep up with her," said the girl's mother, who had admitted earlier this week that only Heidi's desire to see Hawaii seemed to keep her alive. "I haven't been on a horse since I was a young girl myself."

Even keel

According to Bob Dylan's brother-in-law, the singer's marriage is on an even keel.

Jules Noznisky said Saturday in Wilmington, Del., that he talked to his sister, Sara, recently and "as far as I know she says everything is all right."

Noznisky said he has no idea of the whereabouts of either of the Dylans.

Songs of unhappy love on Dylan's latest album, "Blood on the Tracks," has led some Dylan followers to believe that his marriage was on the rocks.

Lawmaker

Maude Elizabeth Kee, the only woman elected to Congress from West Virginia, died Saturday in Bluefield, W. Va., after a long illness. She was 75.

Mrs. Kee, a Democrat, accompanied her husband, the late John Kee, when he first entered Congress in 1932, serving as his administrative assistant. On his death in 1951, she won a special election to fill the unexpired term. She was reelected six times to full terms and retired in 1964.

John Boy

Richard Thomas, who plays "John Boy" in the television show "The Waltons," has been married to Alma Gonzalez in ceremonies at Manhattan's Central Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of the late Francisco Gonzales and Guillermina Gonzales of Los Angeles. She was given in marriage Friday by ballet dancer Royce Fernandez, who was best man 25 years ago at the wedding of Thomas' parents.

Thomas is the son of ballet artists Richard Thomas III and Barbara Fallis.

Casals

Martita Casals, widow of the Spanish cellist-composer Pablo Casals, was married in New York Saturday to concert pianist Eugene Istomin, whom her husband once called "my son."

The civil ceremony was performed by Judge Harry Davis in a studio room at the Kew Gardens home of Dr. and Mrs. Murray Fuhrman. The Fuhrmans were longtime friends of Pablo Casals and were with him when he died.

Disputed

Former White House aide William Safire charged on Saturday that Henry A. Kissinger was attempting to rewrite history in his comments on a Safire article critical of the secretary of state.

Kissinger wrote a three-page letter to Harper's Magazine citing what he termed errors in Safire's article, entitled "Puppet as Prince," that appears in the March issue of the magazine.

Safire said Saturday in New York that "what really caused him to get so angry was the story of Mr. Kissinger's attempt in Vladivostok in 1974 to build up Mr. Ford at the expense of Mr. Nixon."

The article presented Safire's thesis that Kissinger had been a puppet of former President Richard M. Nixon but was in turn the puppeteer in his relationship with President Ford.

The article said in part: "... In Vladivostok, Kissinger passed the word to the press corps that Nixon never 'looked Brezhnev in the eye;' that the Soviet had always mistrusted Nixon; that the former president's inflexibility hindered negotiation."

"This was the making of an unperson on a grand scale. Henry enlisted Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, in the media-washing, causing that unsuspecting young man to say, straight-faced, of the Ford-Brezhnev agreement to agree: 'It was something that Nixon couldn't do in three years, but Ford did it in three months.'"

Reserved

President Ford reserved the holiday weekend for relaxation and a bit of golf, getting set for another week of intensive lobbying on behalf of his beleaguered economic and energy proposals in Congress.

Invited to play with him at the suburban Washington Burning Tree Country Club were former Defense Secretary and longtime political adviser Melvin Laird; San Diego, Calif., businessman Leon Parma; and Washington-based U.S. Steel Vice President William Whyte.

Playing golf despite Washington's near-freezing temperatures, Ford might have been getting himself into shape for possible participation in the Jackie Gleason pro-am tournament in Miami Feb. 25-26.

Ski mishap

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's youngest child Patrick, 6, was slightly injured Saturday after running into a tree while skiing down a slope at Massachusetts' Mt. Tom Ski Area.

The child was taken down to the bottom of the mountain in a toboggan and was taken to Holyoke, Mass., Hospital for X-rays. The examination showed no serious injury and Patrick was released.

Mrs. Kennedy, who was skiing with Patrick when he was injured, said he had a slight gash on his forehead.

Members of the Kennedy family, including John F. Kennedy Jr., son of the late President, spent the day skiing on the first of a three-day ski holiday in Berkshires or western Massachusetts.

Immigrant

Vincenty Branka, 93, arrived in Toronto Saturday as an immigrant from Poland — not to retire in the midst of his 63 grandchildren and 50 great-grandchildren in Canada, but to continue working as a builder.

"I'm going to build," he said at the airport. "Houses, garages, anything you want."

Canadian immigration officials said they believe he is the oldest person ever to enter the country as an immigrant. Branka came to Canada first in 1967 to spend two years with his daughter as a visitor. During his stay he put aluminum siding on her house and built her a chimney.

Booze battle

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has criticized a proposal by Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., to serve alcohol on campus—little more than a beer can's throw from the WCTU's national headquarters.

Mrs. Herman Stanley, WCTU national president, said the university proposal to amend its charter is a "disservice to its students and a blot upon the purpose for the university's existence, which is education."

On Tuesday, the university announced it had filed in a suit in Cook County Circuit Court asking the court to nullify a provision in its 120-year-old charter which prohibits sale of alcohol on campus.

Legislator arrested for drunken driving

VALLEJO (UPI) — State Sen. John F. Dunlap, 52, was arrested for drunken driving late Friday night as he sped along Interstate 80 toward his home in Napa after attending a dinner at the Vallejo Human Relations Commission.

He was the fourth California legislator arrested for drunken driving in the past two and a half months.

The Democratic senator, whose Fourth District includes Sacramento, Sonoma, Napa, Solano and Yolo counties, was released on a promise to appear Feb. 26 in Vallejo Municipal court.

"I think I'll learn more from this experience personally if I don't try to kid myself or anyone else," Dunlap said from his Napa home Saturday. "Although I didn't have a lot to drink, I did have enough to impair my ability to drive. This is about all there is to it."

Dunlap indicated that he would plead guilty, adding that as an attorney he has tried drunken-driving cases before and realized, "I might win it. But I don't think that is what I should do."

He added, "I think most people recognize politicians are human beings."

They do their job pretty well. They may be entitled to some error."

Three other legislators have been arrested for drunken driving within the last two and a half months by Sacramento police. They are Assemblymen John Thurman Jr., D-Modesto, John Foran, D-San Francisco and Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach.

Atwater items found in suspect's home

Newport Beach police said Saturday that valuable possessions of ailing A. G. Atwater were found in the Glendale home of a burly male nurse accused of slaying Atwater's wife, Nancy.

Capt. Richard Hamilton said police obtained a search warrant to comb the apartment of Daniel Gerbis Bedelian, 40, who was arrested Feb. 6 for the bludgeon slaying of the 50-year-old Mrs. Atwater in a Pacoima wrecking yard.

Her trussed body was recovered from a 55-gallon steel drum at an auto wrecking yard in Pacoima, where the top had been cemented over.

The victim's husband is the brother-in-law of Chicago chewing gum millionaire P. K. Wrigley and vice-president of the chewing gum firm. His estimated worth is near $10 million.

Among items found in the Bedelian home was a jacket carrying a monogrammed label with the name of A. G. Atwater, an expensive typewriter, some jewelry and credit cards, Hamilton said.

It could not be learned if police intend to accuse Bedelian of theft of the items.

Mrs. Atwater was bludgeoned to death in her luxurious Corona del Mar home, apparently after a heated argument with Bedelian, who cared for Atwater on the night shift.

After the slaying of the 50-year-old Mrs. Atwater and the arrest of Bedelian, Atwater was moved to the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla.

Bedelian is to be arraigned Feb. 26 in Harbor Municipal Court.

Veteran L.B. lawman Jess Hayward, 74, dies

Pioneer Pacemaker recipient Jess Hayward, who retired from the Long Beach Police Department after 28 years service, died in the Long Beach Veterans' Administration Hospital late Friday.

Mr. Hayward, who had recently been hospitalized for cancer of the throat, was 74. He made local medical history 14 years ago when doctors at the VA Hospital implanted the battery-powered "assistant heart" in his chest.

The 3x3x1-inch device, powered by 10 mercury cell batteries, provided electrical stimulation to Mr. Hayward's heart, raising his heart rhythm from a presurgery maximum of 34 beats per minute to a near-normal pace of 52 beats per minute.

At the time, doctors said the surgery was necessary because he suffered from Stokes-Adams syndrome, a disorder which slowed his heartbeat, causing dizziness and occasional fainting spells.

Since the surgery on June 28, 1961, Mr. Hayward has received 10 pacemaker replacement units.

Doctors said the Pacemakers functioned well throughout the years, despite the fact that their patient suffered from a variety of other illnesses. He underwent emergency surgery for gallstones just nine days after the original Pacemaker was implanted.

Friends said Mr. Hayward, a veteran of World War I, was born June 4, 1900 in Lehi, Utah.

In addition to his long service as a city employee, Mr. Hayward belonged to several community organizations.

Neighbors in the Stanton mobile home park where Mr. Hayward lived at the time of his death said in recent years he fascinated passersby with a unique "bottle garden." A neighbor said the garden featured bottles hanging from trees and pressed into geometric shapes in the ground outside Mr. Hayward's trailer.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Tuesday in the Ralph Shannon Funeral Home, 137 E. Maple, Orange. Burial will follow at Fairhaven Cemetery, Orange.

Bishop Steven Rummier, of the Third Ward in Anaheim, Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, is to officiate at the services, and one of Mr. Hayward's longtime friends, Bill James, is to give the eulogy.

Mr. Hayward is survived by his wife, Fay; a daughter, Juanita McDewett of Long Beach; a stepdaughter, Vanola Cramer of Kansas City, Mo.; and a stepson, Bud Cramer of Roseburg, Ore.

Mother of three begins prison term on fatal beating of baby

A 21-year-old mother of three was taken to Frontera Prison for Women Saturday to begin serving a term of from five years to life for the fatal beating of one of her babies.

Jennifer Elizabeth Dabney, wife of U.S. Marine Sgt. Dennis Dabney, was sentenced by Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Kenneth Lae, in whose court she had been found guilty of second degree murder, felony child abuse and felonious assault on the infant.

The court delayed sentencing Mrs. Dabney on the convictions of child abuse and assault on eight-month-old John Dabney, a twin to Robert Dabney, pending completion of four months of tests ordered for her at the prison.

Judge Lae said he is "interested in rehabilitating her" and said that the prison authorities will report to him on prospects of a meaningful program to solve Mrs. Dabney's emotional problems.

Her husband once faced manslaughter prosecution for the death of his son, but the charge was reduced to child abuse, and he pleaded guilty. He is now serving a 100-day sentence in the Orange County Jail.

The couple agreed to give up Robert and another child, born while she was in jail awaiting trial, for adoption by foster parents.

Drug-death count falls

A drug death charge against a San Clemente couple has been dropped, but they still must face charges that an illicit and allegedly stolen drug they supplied to a teen-age girl caused her death.

Santa Ana Superior Judge James K. Turner dropped murder charges against Ronald L. Richardson, 24, and his 19-year-old wife, Terry, who were arrested after the 16-year-old Laguna Beach girl died of an apparent overdose of drugs.

Investigators said the girl apparently had taken a drug called propoacaine, and police alleged that Richardson had stolen the drug from Allergan Pharmaceutical Co. at Irvine, where he worked.

Authorities said that the drug is prepared for use by ophthalmologists for treatment of the eyes and is not to be taken internally. The girl died after an injection, but Turner held that the Richardsons had no intent to cause the young girl's death.

They were, however, ordered to trial May 12 on charges of furnishing drugs to a minor. Richardson also faces an accusation that he stole the drug from the manufacturer.

DMV puts tabs on its losses

Drivers whose checks to the Department of Motor Vehicles for auto registration were stolen from the Bellflower DMV office recently will receive their stickers and registration cards anyway, a DMV official said.

Charles Creighton, manager of the Bellflower office, said the $150,000 in stolen checks, had been endorsed by DMV for deposit only and cannot be cashed by the gunman who forced the department's cashier to open her safe and turn over the checks plus $28,000 in cash.

Driver forms sent in with the checks had been detached before the robbery, Creighton said, so stickers and registration cards should be in the mail by Feb. 21. Payment on the checks should not be stopped, he added. "This will just confuse things."

Trial court mergers urged

Our L. A. Bureau

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn has urged Gov. Brown to take the lead in a move to consolidate municipal and superior courts into one trial court at an estimated saving to the taxpayers of $25 million a year.

In a letter to the governor, Hahn said consolidation would eliminate the necessity of building new courthouses, adding more people to the public payroll and "delaying justice."

The supervisor said he believed there should be only three layers of courts in the state—the supreme court, the appellate court and a combination of the municipal, justice and superior courts.

"This would most likely require a constitutional amendment, but I think the people of California should be given a chance to decide this question," Hahn said.

He suggested Brown might wish to either prepare a special message to the Legislature or appoint a commission to make recommendations for consolidation.

FOLLOW THE LEADER was the game Las Vegas-bound motorists and the Highway Patrol played Friday and Saturday with the CHP officers in their black and white patrol cars performing as leaders.

Highway Patrol convoy success

SAN BERNARDINO (UPI)— "And not one accident over more than 240 miles of highway, that's something," said Supervising Inspector Walter Pudinski Saturday of California' unique experiment of using police cars to convoy Nevada-bound drivers.

Only 20 drivers out of thousands tried to beat the system Friday and zip around California Highway Patrol units herding them from Los Angeles to Las Vegas, Nev., at 55 miles an hour. They got tickets.

Pudinski said the 10 hour operation netted a total of 30 violators, including the 20 who apparently lost patience and tried to pass the guiding CHP units, five charged with speeding between the herded traffic waves, and five arrested for drunk driving.

"But during that time," Pudinski, former CHP commander, said, "there were no accidents."

An estimated 60,000 persons headed for the gambling resort for the long holiday weekend and the CHP cars were waiting at the Los Angeles County line to guide them at the low legal speed across the 240 miles to the Nevada state line.

"We're finally driving at 55," Pudinski said. "It was an interesting thing. I surveyed the whole thing from a helicopter and when the patrol cars pulled off the road, the drivers did not appreciably increase their speed."

In some instances, he said, the drivers were in free zones without guide units for seven or eight miles. "They did not speed up."

Las Vegas motel and hotel operators said they had to hold room reservations later than usual, and then found guests arriving in batches of about 35, reflecting the convoy numbers.

More than 100 CHP units were assigned to the four highways between the Los Angeles area and Nevada.

It was expected the drivers would hit the Nevada state line and release their frustrations with a heavy foot on the gas pedal. But it didn't happen.

Monday, the CHP units will be waiting at the state line to escort returning Los Angeles area motorists back home—also at 55 mph.

Python provides his flexible alibi

PORTERVILLE (UPI) — "Your Honor," said the court clerk, "the man coming before you on the speeding charge has a story you've never heard before."

And Municipal Court Judge Richard Thompson, who has heard a lot of strange excuses from ticketed motorists, had to agree that Albert Robbins' alibi was a pip.

The alibi was a 120-pound, 17-foot python named Captain.

Robbins is a herpetologist — a specialist in snakes — and travels to schools around the state, putting on educational shows. This was his story:

He was driving to Los Angeles from his home in Bakersfield Friday when Captain escaped from his barrel. The python began nuzzling the back of Robbins' neck and slithering around, investigating the cages that held several other snakes, including rattlers.

Robbins pulled over to the side of the road. Unable to handle Captain by himself, he flagged down passing cars, asking their occupants to help him manhandle Captain back into his barrel.

But several would-be good Samaritans who stopped were willing to help a stranded motorist with a flat tire or out of gas, but they were less than enthusiastic about a wrestling match with Captain in a car full of rattlers and other reptiles.

They all took one look at Captain, leaped in their cars and sped off, Robbins said.

Robbins thought immediately of help from the police, and that, he told the judge, was why he was driving 75 miles an hour, still fending off Captain's attentions—because he hoped his speeding would attract a highway patrolman to help him.

His reasoning worked, up to a point. It attracted officer Velton Lee. The officer, on being shown the carload of snakes, declined to give assistance.

"NO WAY," were his words. But he gave Robbins a ticket for speeding.

Robbins went on to the school, where the students helped him subdue Captain, then went back to Porterville to throw himself on the mercy of the court.

Judge Thompson ordered the evidence — the python — brought into court. Robbins performed his whole traveling snake show for the courthouse staff and took a picture of the judge and his aides wrapped in Captain's ample embrace.

The judge dismissed the charge.

Westside—a blight, or...

of smashed-up automobiles spreads over several acres in the 2100 block on West Pacific Coast Highway. He's been selling used auto parts at that location for almost four decades.

When he moved there 37 years ago, the surrounding area was mostly weeds and vacant lots. "An airplane had a forced landing across the street from us in 1938 and had no trouble at all," he recalled.

As for his feelings about redevelopment, he's on the fence. "I'm too old to relocate my business," he reasoned. "There's no question, though, the area has to change. It's not a good place anymore for residents."

To understand some of the problems of this 350-acre tract, one must first know the history of its topsy-turvy growth.

It hasn't always been an industrial area. It was once just brackish mudflats and tules, often flooded by the Los Angeles and San Gabriel rivers, which then ran in the vicinity of Anaheim Road and Santa Fe.

Later, it was planted in beans and vegetables by Japanese gardeners.

The Westside's social past is difficult to trace. It is all but ignored by Long Beach history buffs and about the only thing old-timers remember is that in 1928 it was the site of the Pacific Southwest Exposition and, in the 50s, it almost sank in the ocean.

IT WAS in the 20s that Long Beach, deciding every self-respecting city should be zoned, designated the area for residential use and allowed the tract to be divided into a grid of narrow streets, alleys and 25-foot lots.

However, probably due to its location adjacent to the harbor, small industries were allowed to develop. Soon, heavy industries wedged their way in between small houses and infant businesses.

Then came junkyards, salvage yards, oil wells, warehouses, noisy factories, more small businesses, open storage dumps, belching trucks and clanking oil tankers, creating hazardous traffic conditions on the narrow cross-hatch streets.

IN 1963 the city decided this was not the proper environment for residents and zoned the area for heavy industry. Since then, no new residential units have been permitted and no remodeling permits have been issued for existing homes.

According to a report to the City Council by the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency, 49.5 percent of the 225 still-existing homes were built prior to 1940. Only 20.3 percent are owner-occupied.

Eugene Field School, 1525 Seabright Ave., the area's only elementary school, is closed now and soon will feel the sting of the wrecker's ball.

There's little street lighting in the area. No parks. No meeting places for people to mingle. None of the usual neighborhood amenities.

Robert Cavin does well enough with his auto dismantling business—but he doesn't live in the area and says he wouldn't want to.

"It's not safe," he said, adding that theft and vandalism are tremendous problems. He told of one of his own experiences: "This fellow just walked into my place—in broad daylight—and started shooting windshields out of the cars."

(One Westside businessman uses a "psychological approach" to the theft problem. "I purposely make my place look a mess so burglars won't think there's anything worth stealing," he confided.)

BECAUSE of the crime and environmental blight, Cavin believes the 633 residents of the area would be the ones most likely to benefit through relocation under the California Redevelopment Act.

As for the 600 businesses, he's not sure. "The Economic Development Corp. says existing businesses can be moved or expanded to their advantage. But I'll have to wait and see."

Both Hope and Cavin are members of the Project Area Committee (PAC), a citizens' advisory group of 21 Westside businessmen and residents whose current job is to submit a report reflective of area attitudes about the proposed redevelopment project to the City Council for public hearing.

HOPE AND Cavin are among the more positive members of the committee. They are willing to look at both sides; some are not. A few are downright hostile.

It's been that way since the first public meeting called by the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency back in August. Few in the crowd of 200 or more knew each other by name. Nobody could remember ever having an area meeting before.

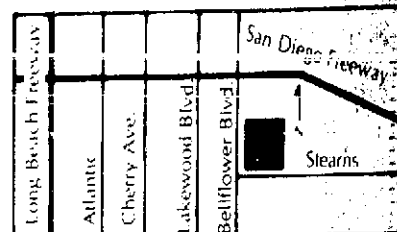

Most of them had one thing in common, though: they were in no mood to talk about redevelopment. Or to elect a committee. It took three meetings to accomplish that. It was as if by resisting such a moment of decision, they could make the whole thing go away.

BUT, finally, the 21 members were elected and, as chairman, they named Eugene Lassers, a 6-foot-2 individualist who flies airplanes, drives a spiffy antique car and operates an ice cream distributorship, the Eugene Lassers Co., at 1601 W. 15th St.

Redevelopment: some opposed

well be the greatest challenge of all his pursuits. He has maintained, steadfastly, that members of PAC should remain open-minded and impartial if they are to perform their responsibility to the community, which may be his undoing.

It is the mission of the committee, as spelled out by the California Redevelopment Law, to inform area citizens of the city's proposed redevelopment plans and to advise them of relocation benefits available under the law.

BUT MANY committee members complain the city has dragged its feet in providing area office space for the committee's dissemination of such information—although space for such a neighborhood facility has now been provided at 1540 Santa Fe.

Since its inception, PAC member David Lytle, a homeowner at 3518 Gaylord Ave., has used his position on the committee to circulate petitions against the redevelopment program. The large number who signed did so without any accompanying information about the proposed project.

At one of the last meetings, Oscar Jacobson, who owns property but does not live in the area, reported he sent out 1,000 questionnaires and, of the 250 returned, 68 per cent were against redevelopment, 24 per cent were in favor and 8 per cent were undecided. Apparently no explanatory information accompanied that sampling, either.

ANOTHER outspoken antagonist is Nick Ortega, whose wife, Beatrice, also is a member of PAC. In the building, trucking and demolition business, Ortega lives in a house built by his father in 1937. Located at 1727 Canal St., it is possibly the best maintained in the area.

Likable, rough as a pet lion and always ready to sound off, Ortega has assumed committee chairmanship for the little people, the elderly and the ethnic residents, some of whom "can't speak English and don't understand what this is all about." His words:

"These people don't want redevelopment. They have lived this way for years and years. They are happy and proud the way they are right now. Why can't the city leave us alone?"

"THEY (the city) ain't foolin' me none. It's a game of power and money—tax revenue for the city and money for the developers. These little homes are in the way."

Ortega's voice and presence fill a room. "Why can't we see a plan?" he wants to know. "Why can't we know what's going where? The city's never done anything for this area. Now they want to come in and gobble us up..."

"But, I can tell you, this isn't going to happen. We'll fight it all the way."

THIS MAY be a disservice to many homeowners and businesses in the area. Ray Brosterhouse, director of the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency, says that, according to recent studies, 61 per cent of the homes and 39.7 per cent of the buildings in the area have been described as either "deteriorated or dilapidated."

If such structures were to be condemned by safety or building inspectors—without being under the aegis of a redevelopment program—property owners would not be eligible for the ample market value and relocation benefits provided under the redevelopment law.

He noted, also, that such businesses as junkyards and automobile wrecking companies are no longer allowed within the city limits, except by special permit. Since many were in the area before the Municipal Code was so amended, they have been allowed to remain.

AS TO WHY the city has, up to now, been permissive about conditions in the area, City Manager Mansell had this to say:

"We can sit and argue forever about what should have been done 30 or 40 years ago—but that doesn't improve conditions today. We now have an opportunity to correct the situation—hopefully hurting no one and benefiting all. If people are sincere about wanting to improve the area, they should welcome our help."

In answer to the often-asked question about a plan for the area, Jim Hankla of EDC says the architectural firm of Langdon & Wilson is scheduled to submit its proposals next month and that representatives of PAC have been invited to review them.

"BUT IT will be only a general physical concept—not a building-by-building architectural plan," he said. "We can never show you that. It is not our idea to level the area and start over. It would be developed parcel by parcel as the technicalities are worked out and existing or new businesses are ready to proceed."

"With 633 residents, 600 businesses and 980 individual property owners in the area, this can take months. Or years."

Meanwhile, as the battlelines form, major employers and businesses who favor redevelopment have been conspicuously absent from PAC discussions.

"PAC meetings are made up of people who are objecting—not the people for it," says Joe Santoro, vice president of Bardwell Supply, 1630 W. Cowles.

His company has been in sales of packaging and shipping materials for 18 years, currently occupying five buildings in one block, another building a block away and still another, three blocks away.

"THAT (the many buildings) makes for very inconvenient and unbusinesslike handling," he said. "The worst problem in this area is that there is absolutely no room to expand."

"The area needs to be completely redeveloped... many buildings are dilapidated and outmoded and used mostly for storage rather than production," Santoro said, adding that "unless we can take care of our normal growth, we probably eventually will have to move out of the area." That would mean a loss of 200 jobs.

Businesses cry for more space

He noted that the area serves primarily as an incubator for infant industries—for which conditions are ideal: small-scale buildings, low rents, low taxes, few restrictions.

"BUT ONCE such companies break into their markets," he pointed out, "they move to areas that have more space and a cleaner atmosphere."

City tax records bear this out. Several large firms have left the area in recent years, reportedly because of crowded conditions and physical blight.

One such is KIT Manufacturing Co., makers of mobile homes, which moved most of its 270 job slots to Orange County last year. Weber Bread moved its 200 jobs to the San Fernando Valley three years ago.

Estimating that at least 1,000 more jobs will be lost to the area within the next three years if space cannot be made available for needed expansions, EDC's Jim Hankla noted that closure of unneeded streets and alleys would create a considerable land resource.

STUDIES show that 107 of the area's 350 acres are now taken up with arterials, alleys and railroad rights-of-way.

Bill Williams, owner of Williams Welding Co., 1735 Santa Fe, says no car has been down an alley adjacent to his property for 27 years. It is not navigable.

"These things can't exist without hurting a community," he said, adding: "We could certainly stand some upgrading."

Starting with two small lots, Williams has had his problems gathering the 16 or 18 lots he now owns. But he's against dislocating people in the process.

DON TUFFLI, president of Tell Steel, 2345 W. 17th St., a general line steel distributor in business at that location for 16 years, also feels dislocation is "a real dilemma."

"We certainly don't want to crowd anybody out," he said. He admits, however, his company needs twice the space it now has. For the company to move from the area would mean a loss of 60 more jobs.

"Lots of businesses around here need more room," says Joel Friedland, owner of Seaside Paint & Lacquer, 1439 Cota, which was begun in 1945 as a one-man effort by Friedland's father.

It has taken the company 30 years to get nine lots together. "If we hadn't been able to buy some additional property two years ago, we'd have been forced to move out," he said.

HIS COMPANY, he indicated, is desirous of improving its facility or rebuilding in the area. He believes that "among those willing to accept this challenge for objective improvement," the proposed redevelopment project has aroused new interest in the business community.

He thinks it would be "super if everybody had to make their buildings look good." On the other hand, if it's a matter of bringing in big corporations, Friedland says he would be against that. He believes much of the dislocation is created by that fear.

"LOOK AT the names on the EDC," he said. "Those fellows don't have a gut interest in the area. What it looks like to a lot of people here is that the big names are coming in to run these little guys out of business. But EDC has assured me this won't happen."

The only Westside businessman who is a board member of EDC is Robert Baldwin, president of Federal Steel Corp., 1500 W. 16th St., a Madison Avenue-type executive who thinks big.

With three employees, his company started in 1949 on a small lot on Canal Street to supply fabricated structural steel during the population and building boom in Southern California.

TODAY, Federal Steel has 200 employees, sales approaching $10 million a year, a modern office building with paintings on the wall and landscaping in the parking lot.

Bob Baldwin is already working on tomorrow. With the energy crisis, he has directed efforts toward a larger volume of energy-related work. This has paid off with their largest contract ever—the fabricated steel work for expansion of the San Onofre nuclear generating plant.

"I hope EDC succeeds," he said. "It would make it possible for us to expand and provide more employment for Long Beach residents. But, the way things are now, there's no place to grow."

SAVE THE WHALES!

THEY ARE BEING SLAUGHTERED TO EXTINCTION BY JAPANESE AND SOVIET WHALERS

BOYCOTT JAPANESE GOODS

SUCH AS CARS, MOTORCYCLES, TELEVISIONS, STEREOS, CAMERAS

DON'T FLY JAPANESE AIR LINES
DON'T BUY RUSSIAN FURS AND VODKA

JAPAN IS THE WORLD'S BIGGEST WHALE KILLER. The whaling companies are owned and controlled by the great manufacturing and trading combines that produce and market the vast array of Japanese goods sold in America. For example, Nissan Motor Co., the manufacturer of Datsun cars and trucks, has major interest in whaling. Nissan's insurance affiliate, Nissan Fire and Marine Insurance, is the largest stockholder in the world's biggest whaling company, Nippon Suisan. Nissan and the rest of the Japanese business community have done nothing to halt the whale slaughter.

The Soviet Union is the world's second biggest whale-killer. The Russians use whale meat to feed minks and sables, and sperm whale oil is used to lubricate the Soviet intercontinental missiles.

YOU CAN HELP SAVE THE WHALES BY REFUSING TO PURCHASE ANY JAPANESE AND RUSSIAN PRODUCTS UNTIL JAPAN AND THE SOVIET UNION AGREE TO STOP WHALING.

More than 2,000,000 whales have been killed in the past 50 years, so many that all eight species of great whales are in danger of extinction. The Blue Whale, the greatest creature ever to live on Earth, survives in such few numbers that it may be past the point of saving.

Japan and the Soviet Union have defied unanimous appeals by the United Nations, in 1972, 1973 and 1974, for a ten-year moratorium on whaling. The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization last year issued this pessimistic appraisal: "It is not realistic to presume (the whalers) will ensure either the maintenance or even the continued existence of a whale stock. It pays to exploit a resource (the whales) excessively heavily, even to extinction, and not on a sustainable basis."

Japan and the Soviet Union have consistently opposed moves by the International Whaling Commission to save the whales from commercial extinction. Lower quotas were set by the IWC on fin, sperm and minke whales. But Japan and the Soviet Union announced they would ignore the lower quotas. Thousands of whales died because of this defiance.

Because Japan and the Soviet Union have subverted an international conservation program, President Ford is now empowered to invoke the Pelly Amendment to the Fishermen's Protective Act. The Pelly Amendment allows the U.S. Government to prohibit the importation of fishery products from offending nations. Congressman Alphonzo Bell of California has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives to expand the Pelly Amendment sanctions to all Japanese and Soviet products.

The slaughter continues relentlessly. Between them, Japan and the Soviet Union kill over 80% of the whales. Every 14 minutes another of these gentle, intelligent animals is harpooned to agonizing death.

In response to this outrageous defiance, every major American environmental, conservation and humane group has joined in call for a boycott of Japanese and Soviet goods. Until the whale slaughter is stopped, the boycott campaign will be pursued and publicized in all Japanese and Soviet markets.

THE BOYCOTT CAMPAIGN IS SUPPORTED BY THESE CONSERVATION GROUPS:

National Audubon Society
Friends of the Earth
Environmental Defense Fund
Humane Society of the United States
National Parks and Conservation Assoc.
Center for Science in the Public Interest
Explorers Club Environment Committee
Society for Animal Protective Legislation
New York Zoological Society

Sierra Club
National Wildlife Federation
The Fund for Animals
The Wilderness Society
Rare Animal Relief Effort Environmental Action
Defenders of Wildlife
Environmental Policy Center
Animal Welfare Institute

The Save the Whales Campaign is generating strong public support and the boycott effort is putting enormous pressure on the whaling interests and the governments of Japan and the Soviet Union. A senior White House official praises "the individuals and conservation organizations that have made whale conservation a major effort. They have educated and focussed public opinion which has resulted in public pressure on the Congress and the Executive Branch of the Federal Government in this country, and in similar pressure on government and business elsewhere." Citizen pressure on Nissan Motor Co. has led its U.S. president, Y. Katayama, to warn the Japanese government of "the tremendous amount of adverse publicity which Japan has received in connection with the harvesting of whales."

Modern whaling is a savage, ruthless exercise, nothing like the romantic days of 19th-century whaling. Here is an eyewitness description of modern whaling by Dr. Harry Lillie, who sailed as a ship's surgeon:

"The present-day hunting harpoon is a horrible 150-pound weapon carrying an explosive head which bursts generally in the whale's intestines, and the sight of one of these creatures pouring blood and gasping along on the surface, towing a 400-ton catching vessel by a heavy harpoon rope, is pitiful. So often an hour or more of torture is inflicted before the agony ends in death. I have experienced a case of five hours and nine harpoons needed to kill one mother Blue Whale.

"If we could imagine a horse having two or three explosive spears driven into it, and then made to drag a heavy butcher's truck, while blood poured over the roadway until the animal collapsed an hour or more later, we should have some idea of what a whale goes through."

These great, defenseless creatures are hunted down and slaughtered by sophisticated military weapons. The huge Japanese and Soviet whaling fleets decimate whole herds of whales each day. The whales are sought out by airplanes and helicopters, then are tracked relentlessly by sonar and radar. The terror-stricken whales are chased down by high-speed catcher boats. They are blown up in agonizing death by grenade-tipped harpoons. Huge factory ships rapidly process the whales into commercial "products."

The more than 30,000 whales killed last year by the Japanese and Russians ended up as mink food, transmission oil, fertilizer, soap, cosmetics, even delicacies on the Japanese table. There is no need for any of these whale products in the world economy. There are ready, economical substitutes.

SAYONARA WHALES

The fate of the great whales was foreseen more than a century ago by Herman Melville. The author of the whaling classic "Moby Dick" wrote: "The moot point is, whether Leviathan can long endure so wide a chase, and so remorseless a havoc; whether he must not at last be exterminated from the waters, and the last whale, like the last man, smoke his last pipe, and then himself evaporate in the final puff."

Jacques Cousteau, the famed French oceanographer, writes: "Our century, as it turned out, was much more destructive to the whales than the period of the great romantic hunts as described in the work of Herman Melville. A hundred years ago, a whaler's three-year expedition netted him 37 whales. Today, a whaler's modern weapons and fast boats give him one whale a day, and sometimes three or four.

"The only creatures on earth that have bigger—and maybe better—brains than humans are the Cetacea, the whales and dolphins. Perhaps they could one day tell us something important, but it is unlikely that we will hear it. Because we are coldly, efficiently and economically killing them off."

THE WHALES NEED YOUR HELP

Please support the boycott. If a product says MADE IN JAPAN or MADE IN U.S.S.R., don't buy it. Purchase goods made elsewhere. Tell merchants WHY you are boycotting Japanese and Russian products and urge them to stock goods made in other countries.

Tell your friends about the plight of the whales and how they can help. The more people who act NOW, the sooner we can halt the slaughter that is driving the great whales to extinction. The fate of the great whales must be decided by mankind, not by a greedy few. Extinction is the ultimate crime against Nature.

You can help save the whales and publicize the boycott campaign by making a TAX-DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTION to the Save the Whales Campaign. If you believe in this effort, please give generously.

For a donation of $10 or more, you will receive a beautiful four-color lithographed print (14" x 18"), suitable for framing, of the Sei Whales above (without the lettering), from the original painted by renowned artist Richard Ellis.

Reagan cool to 3rd party idea

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Gov. Ronald Reagan urged conservatives Saturday night to unite under the Republican banner and indicated he was cool toward suggestions that he seek the presidency on a third-party ticket.

"I don't know whether there'll be a third party, but I would hope that the two-party system that has served us so well will continue to do so," Reagan told a press conference before addressing a gathering of about 500 conservatives.

Pressed by reporters whether he would be a presidential candidate on any ticket, Reagan replied: "I just don't think this is the time to make any decisions." He said he wasn't a candidate now.

Asked if he would consider heading a presidential ticket with Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in the No. 2 slot, Reagan commented: "Well, that's hard to do. He's a Democrat and I'm a Republican. I don't see that would work out. Besides, I think we have certain philosophical differences."

Reagan voiced his comments after New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson said he would back Reagan no matter if he ran on the GOP or a third-party ticket.

"IF REAGAN decides to run for the White House, I will support him," said the Republican governor. "Reagan represents the mainstream of American thinking in 1975."

Reagan and Thomson were among prominent conservatives attending a political action conference sponsored by the American Conservative Union and the Young Americans for Freedom. The four-day gathering is wrestling with whether to form a new conservative party.

Reagan, speaking to reporters, said it was time for the Republican Party to raise its banner and "make it unmistakably clear where we stand on all of the issues troubling the people."

He urged an end to deficit spending, but refused to directly criticize President Ford.

"I'm not going to join a chorus that says the honeymoon is over," said Reagan. "He (Ford) is entitled to a longer honeymoon because he was an instant president and I think an allowance should be made for that."

Reagan was asked whether he thought Ford should appease conservatives by eliminating Vice President Nelson Rockefeller from the 1976 presidential ticket.

Reagan noted that Ford had hand-picked Rockefeller for the job and "obviously he's not going to turn around and dump him."

Earlier Saturday, Conservative-Republican Sen. James L. Buckley of New York said the only hope for the Republican party to become the majority party is to be a conservative alternative to the Democrats. "Otherwise, the Republican Party may have no future," said the New York senator.

McDonnell Douglas
Walkout may prove costly

By PAUL DELANEY
New York Times Service

To a Skycap at St. Louis International Airport, striking workers at nearby McDonnell-Douglas Corp. "have a hell of a lot of guts to go out at a time like this."

A waitress at a downtown restaurant saw it differently, referring to the strikers as "dingbats" and declaring, "They must be out of their skull."

But to members and leaders of District Lodge 837 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, the strike was a necessity, a matter of principle, regardless of the condition of the economy.

"It's a matter of principle and money," remarked Roger Moore, 30, as he carried a picket sign at Building 101 of the huge McDonnell Douglas complex in St. Louis.

"If someone doesn't want to pay you decent and fair wages, you have to go out despite the consequences," he added.

If it is a long strike, and workers have mixed opinions of whether they think it will go on, then people like Moore and Thomas Williams will suffer greatly, much more so now than in normal times. Moore has a wife and only one child, while Williams has eight mouths to feed—a wife who is not working, six children and a niece—and the $10 a week strike benefit is almost a joke.

THE UNION on Monday struck the company, maker of what several union members describe as the "hottest fighter planes in the world," the F15. The Air Force has ordered 729 of the planes, and the company began delivering the first batch, of three per month, in November. Production is now jeopardized by the walkout of 19,000 workers, 12,000 in St. Louis and another 7,000 in California.

Rank-and-file union members interviewed in St. Louis seem fairly determined to stick out a strike. The main issue is money. However, members are still incensed over what they consider was a bad contract three years ago, and union leaders are under tremendous pressure to come up with a good wage package this time around.

The union has asked for a 10 per cent salary increase in each of the next three years, plus improvements in benefits. The company offered 16 cents the first year and 3 per cent in each of the following two years.

A union official said the average salary was now $8.52 an hour, but that the company used $7.14 an hour as is average, a figure that includes fringe benefits.

THE TWO sides have not talked since the strike began, and federal mediators do not know when they will be able to get them together. The union said it was willing to meet at any time. The company has refused to meet or Negotiations are continuing between McDonnell-Douglas Corp. and United Auto Workers in Long Beach, according to Clarence Gregory, president of UAW Local 148. He said union leaders think they are making progress and will not recommend a strike at this time.

comment on the matter. Some members of Lodge 837 said they expect the Department of Defense to step in and prevent the strike from unduly delaying the F15 contract.

The strikers were adamant in support of their wage demands. They were still incensed over what they said was only a one-cent-an-hour increase in their last contract. A company official said that contention was "erroneous and ridiculous."

The workers also expressed bitterness at the United Auto Workers for refusing to honor their picket lines at the Long Beach plant. A majority of those workers are members of the UAW, while most in St. Louis are in the Machinists.

THE WALKOUT is only a few days old, yet it has already begun affecting the life style of many strikers. Nobody is suffering—the workers got their final paychecks Friday—and there is a good deal of optimism that even if the strike is a long one they will survive. Nevertheless, the strikers have started adjusting their life styles, by cutting down on entertainment and finding part-time employment.

"I started scaling down my life style nine months ago when rumors of a strike began spreading," commented Russell Presley, 56, a precision grinder in St. Louis who has been with the company for 22 years.

"I COULD feel a strike coming; I just knew there would be one," he continued. "If it is a long one, I could be in trouble. My wife has always worked, but we spent money foolishly, as fast as we got it."

Wanda Edwards, a 41-year-old grandmother, said she found two part-time jobs several weeks ago in anticipation of the strike.

Marvin Carr, 30, with the company for nine years, felt the first real impact of the strike Thursday when he took his son to a clinic for an ear infection.

"The first thing they told me was that they knew I had no more insurance because I was on strike," he reported. "Well, I knew they knew that."

"So I told them to bill me. And when they do, if I'm back at work I'll pay them. If not they'll have to wait."

Recession hits limo riders

NEW YORK (UPI) — The recession is sideswiping those sleek chauffeured limousines so loved by VIPs and beautiful people.

With the dollar tight, former big spenders can't come up with $15 an hour for a Cadillac or $35 for a Rolls Royce complete with mink rug and slideout tables.

Limousine company executives and chauffeurs say the economy may really be in deep trouble if the moneyed classes are forced to flag a cab or hop a bus.

"Everybody's up against a wall," says Robert Verdi, owner of the Bermuda Renting Company, who has been in the luxury car rental business since 1941. Verdi fears he might have to begin laying off employees—a notion unheard of during the boom years of the 1960s.

Until recently, Verdi's limousines squirmed corporate executives between airports and the boardroom, movie stars to premieres of their films and well-heeled couples from nightspot to nightspot.

"I don't know what to do, cut down one-third or one-half the fleet," Verdi said. "I'm in hock for the whole damn shooting match."

The chauffeurs, too, lament the inactivity. Edward Longo of Cooper Rolls Royce had a good year in 1974. The year began with a healthy tip for a $3,000 job of helping to chauffeur several couples in two 1958 Silver Dawn Rolls Royces and three limousines on a 17-hour New Year's Eve dining and dancing binge.

Longo, who has driven for four years, refuses to identify some of the rich or famous clients for whom he has waited at the curb or runway.

"I'm a discreet and thoughtful gentleman," he said. "My people could be from any walk of life. All I'll say is they have a little money to play with."

That was before 1975. "Things have slowed down...They've practically stopped," Longo said.

"I guess people are scared."

Economy yielding bitter citrus wages

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Unemployed workers desperate for jobs at any price are pouring into Florida's citrus groves by the thousands, creating the largest harvest-time labor surplus here in 25 years, officials say.

And growers are responding to the influx by cutting wages, using tactics one union leader says are reminiscent of the Great Depression.

Orange and grapefruit growers, hard hit by spiraling production costs, have cut wage rates by as much as 10 cents a box because of the flood of would-be pickers, according to industry sources.

"It's the old law of supply and demand," said Clark Ghiselin, director of the Citrus Industrial Council. He estimated that pickers currently earn 35 to 40 cents a box, compared with 40 to 45 cents a box earned last season.

Don S. Bryan, a citrus grower in Bartow, said that last season, an average picker could produce about 60 boxes a day. At last year's rate of 45 cents a box, a picker would earn about $27 a day.

BECAUSE of the labor surplus this season, Bryan said, some growers are limiting their pickers' hours and have cut them back to four-day work weeks, although Bryan's pickers are not being restricted.

"A lot of crews are being limited to two trailers a day, and that figures out to about 20 boxes per picker," said Diana Lyons, an organizer for the United Farm Workers Union who says some pickers are getting as little as 25 to 30 cents a box. "And that comes to as little as $6 a day."

"It's the same kind of situation we had when people fled the dust bowls for California during the Great Depression. Back then, employers bargained for an oversupply of labor to get the cheapest labor possible and that's what's happening now," she said.

"I haven't seen this kind of surplus since the late '40s," Ghiselin said. "There's no way to get a census on people looking for jobs, but all the harvesting operations tell me they've got whole crews who can't get work."

Despite the lack of hard statistics, other industry sources estimate that two or three workers are applying for each of this year's 26,000 picking jobs.

Inflation safeguard takes off like a rocket

$100 billion bonanza for federal retirees

By DICK BARNES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal retirees can get billions of extra dollars at taxpayer expense because a formula designed to keep their pensions in step with inflation actually propels them increasingly ahead.

The unintended bonus could easily cost taxpayers $100 billion or more by 1990, according to projections by The Associated Press — projections which Congress failed to make before it approved the formula.

So many variable factors are involved that the exact cost of the bonanza for today's nearly two million federal pensioners can't be determined.

But AP calculations show that a typical federal employee who retired in January 1973 could, during the rest of his life, draw more than $27,500 beyond what he would receive if his pension merely kept even, month by month, with the cost of living index.

Put another way, at a point when the cost of living would have risen 46 per cent since this employee's retirement day, his monthly pension check would be up by 57 per cent.

The pension overpayments come about because under a 1969 law retirees are given an extra permanent one per cent pension increase each time their checks are adjusted for changes in the Consumer Price Index. The CPI is the standard measuring tool for the cost of living.

The extra one per cent is supposed to compensate for money lost during the lag between the time living costs increase and the time retirement checks are adjusted to meet those increases.

But in reality, the extra one per cent compounds over the years, pushing retirement checks farther and farther ahead of any rise in the cost of living.

In fact, the faster the cost of living increases, the farther and faster federal pensions move ahead.

Civil servants, congressmen and retired military personnel all benefit from the extra one per cent formula, which Congress approved in 1969.

Despite its existence for more than five years, the lucrative operation of the retirement pay formula has never drawn significant public attention.

In his budget message to Congress on Feb. 3, however, President Ford called for a comprehensive evaluation of the federal retirement system. He referred briefly to "cost-of-living adjustments which overcompensate by providing for permanent annuity increases in excess of changes in the Consumer Price Index."

Ralph J. Devlin, who was top staff assistant on the House subcommittee which first approved the formula, expressed surprise in an interview about how it was operating in practice.

But he acknowledged that in 1969 no detailed projections of its effect had been made. He characterized the formula as "a throw-in in a bill that had some goodies."

The General Accounting Office warned the committee of a spiral effect, but even GAO did not make long-range projections.

Referring to the recent rapid rise in the cost of living, Devlin said: "Nobody had a crystal ball that could tell what would happen."

But AP calculations show that overpayments occur to some degree whether the cost of living rises slowly or rapidly.

Take an employee who retired in January 1973 at $400 per month, who was the average civil service retirement age of 57 and who lives the 18 years predicted by insurance industry tables.

If future inflation continues at an average rate of one-half per cent per month, or a bit more than six per cent per year, he'll be over-paid in pension checks by $27,588.62.

If future inflation is at a low rate of 3-plus per cent a year, he'll be overpaid $13,688.29. But if it continues at the present high rate of 12-plus per cent per year, his overpayment will total $78,388.59.

When Congress more recently tied Social Security benefits to the cost of living it did not add in the extra one per cent factor.

Total costs of the federal retiree overpayments in future years depend on so many factors they are difficult to compute.

Rates of retirement, age of retirement, federal pay levels and the cost of living all affect calculations.

But for just the 133,318 civil servants who retired in the year ended June 30, 1974, the cost of extra payments in their lifetimes could exceed $5 billion if the cost of living rose steadily at one-half per cent per month — a rate well below current levels.

Add in another 800,000 civilians already retired, try to estimate future retirements in the 2.5 million person federal workforce, figure in nearly 1 million retired military personnel, who tend to retire earlier and draw benefits longer, and the cost of these overpayments by 1990 could easily exceed $100 billion.

For several years leading up to the 1969 change, federal retirees' pensions followed the cost of living this way: When the cost of living increased three per cent from the most recent base month and stayed at that level or higher for three consecutive months, pension checks would be increased by the percentage rise in cost of living from the base month to the highest month during the three-month period.

The increase would take effect two months later. The high month during the three-month period would then become the new base for any subsequent increase.

By 1969, however, employee organizations were arguing that retirees were losing money because of the time lag between increases in the cost of living and the effective date of pension increases.

To make up for this loss, they said the amount of increase should be higher than just the increase in cost of living.

Congress settled on adding one percentage point to each increase generated by the cost of living.

Devlin, then a staff aide on the House civil service subcommittee on retirement, insurance and health benefits and now a consultant to the full Post Office and Civil Service Committee, said: "The assumption was that it would be a catchup and nothing more."

A detailed example illustrates how the formula works:

Assume a civil servant retired Dec. 31, 1972, and began earning retirement income Jan. 1, 1973, at a typical rate of $400 per month.

The cost of living index for January 1973 was 127.7 points. In February, it rose to 128.6. To stay even with inflation, the retiree's check should have been $402.82. It stayed at $400, so he lost $2.82.

By June, the index was 132.4. The retiree's check should have been $414.72 — but it was still $400. The retiree, after five months, had lost $45.42 to inflation.

Because of cost-of-living increases, however, a 6.1 per cent increase in pensions took effect July 1, 1973. Of that amount, 5.1 per cent was for the increase in living costs from the previous base period to April, and 1 per cent was for the so-called catchup.

Thus in July, the retiree began receiving checks of $424.40. For July, however, he really needed only $415.66 to stay even with inflation. So he could credit the extra $8.74 against the $45.42 he'd lost earlier.

New L.B. business rate due Time charge for local calls

By LARRY LYNCH
Staff Writer

On May 1, businesses throughout most of the Long Beach area will be among the first in the state to begin paying for local telephone calls on the basis of the time each call consumes.

The new local rate: 5 cents for five minutes. (Six minutes thus is 10 cents, 11 minutes 15 cents.)

And the basic charge will go to 5.4 cents for every five minutes if General Telephone Co. of California wins State Public Utilities Commission approval of its latest request for a rate increase.

For now the new time rate will not be used for residential phone service, but Louis Possner, Long Beach's official expert on telephone charges, predicted that eventually all users will pay for local calls on the basis of time.

The PUC commissioners seem to want to go that direction, he said. "They feel it is more equitable, more in line with actual costs," he declared.

"For the person who uses the phone to conduct business and then gets off, it will be no problem. People who use the phone for conversation will be hurt."

THE FIRM'S switch to charging business subscribers by the length of time a call takes was allowed Nov. 27 by the commission. But many of General's business customers have only recently begun to study the effect on their own costs as they received notice of the new rates.

For companies heavily dependent on the phone, and billed in the past by flat rates for equipment, telephone charges could go up dramatically.

But Possner, chief engineer for Long Beach's Bureau of Franchises and city watchdog for public utilities, predicted that for the average business costs will not change much if any.

"General's flat rates were based on average phone use," he explained. At the same time, he said, some companies that used the phone heavily may have been benefitting at the expense of residential users.

"Overall I think the commission would like to see the lowest rate possible for the domestic rate payer," Possner said.

For several decades businesses served by Pacific Telephone Co. have been paying for local calls on the basis of the number of calls made, without any measure of time consumed by each call. The reason for this, said Possner, is that when Pacific's business rate was set up there wasn't a good technical means of measuring the length of each call.

NOW WITH computers it is easy to measure the time used as well as number of calls made.

Possner predicted that Pacific Telephone will take a look at the experience General has, with the new time basis local rate and go after a similar rate for itself in the next few years.

General's latest rate request—yet to be heard by the commission—is not as readily defended by Possner, however.

Sometimes, he said, the utilities go in for twice what they expect to get before they really know what they need because it takes so long for the PUC to resolve a rate case.

General now is asking the commission to increase its allowable profit margin from 8.85 per cent of every dollar invested to 10.1 per cent.

In a "fact sheet" the company contended that it needs the increase "to meet the rise in operating expenses."

In an interview, however, Marshall Hea, regulatory matters director for General, conceded that the only business expense that is covered by the profit margin is the rate the company must pay to borrow money or to raise it in the stock market.

In 1974 General's earnings were almost 20 per cent of revenues before interest charges and about 13 per cent after interest.

But the PUC measures the profit it will allow the company on the basis of total investment in the company, after depreciation.

If costs like salaries go up, no matter. In the long run those day to day costs are washed out by PUC adjustments.

General Telephone serves much of the Long Beach and west Orange County area, though Pacific has some of North Long Beach and covers surrounding areas. Pacific also has a rate increase request on file.

But the PUC recently denied a Pacific request for an $83.8 million boost in revenues and ordered an investigation into whether that company is making more than its authorized 8.85 per cent on total investment.

One thing the commission should do in its process of reviewing rates, Possner suggested, is take a good long look at how much profit General gets out of the new time charge, since it could be a lot more (than the $24 million a year which the commission projected).

Electricity rate hike bid rejected

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A 25 per cent rate increase for electricity many Northern California utilities buy from the Central Valley Project has been overturned by a judge in Washington, D.C., the Sacramento Bee said Saturday.

Attorneys for the publicly owned utilities said the ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell in Washington, D.C., could save consumers $20 million in the next three years.

Gesell ruled Friday that the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation didn't grant protesting groups a fair hearing before prices were raised last April, the Bee reported.

The increase was challenged by the Northern California Power Agency, representing the cities of Roseville, Redding, Biggs, Gridley, Palo Alto and Santa Clara and the Plumas Sierra Rural Electric Cooperative.

CIA Red-hunt in peace units

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA infiltrated the U.S. antiwar movement in an effort to get its own men — masquerading as radicals — recruited by Soviet intelligence, a former deputy CIA director said Saturday.

Describing the double-agent gambit as "an error in judgement," Ray S. Cline said the agency did it because Presidents Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon were "absolutely obsessed" with the belief that the Russians were manipulating the Vietnam protests.

The CIA apparently was never able to establish a "Russian connection" within the U.S. dissident movement. It is now under investigation itself, to determine whether it broke the law by spying on Americans.

Cline, a CIA employee for 27 years and a deputy director from 1962 to 1966, disclosed details of the agency's infiltration operations in an interview which enlarged on information already made public by CIA director William E. Colby.

Cline said the counterspy operation — in which one intelligence agency puts out an agent as "bait" to be recruited by a rival agency and to work within it as a double-agent — appeared at the time to be "a classical counter-espionage operation." Now, he said, he considers it "an error in judgment."

"Since it involved penetration of an American organization, its purpose was ambiguous and therefore subject to criticism," he said.

But he added: "I know from my own recollection that both Presidents Johnson and Nixon were absolutely obsessed with the subject and pressed all government agencies to find this vital connection of foreign activation."

If the penetration effort had been fruitful, he said, "these young men would have had nothing to do with the dissident movement, really. They were fakes."

"They would have gone abroad to work for a Soviet agent, and then probably would have been sent back to the United States under an assumed name to do some work."

After leaving the deputy director post, Cline became a special intelligence adviser at the embassy in Bonn until 1969, when he became director of the State Department's bureau of intelligence and research.

Cline, who had planned to become a scholar but joined the CIA instead in 1949, said the CIA over the years undoubtedly had committed other "errors of judgment" in its activities within the United States.

He cited mail opening operations, wire-tapping, and three instances of entering without a search warrant described by Director Colby in his testimony before a Senate committee.

But Cline asserted that the CIA never approached being an "American Gestapo" and that charges of massive illegal qualified personnel.

Cline said much would depend on the outcome of the presidential and congressional investigations of the CIA.

"If they are run as legitimate inquiries they will conclude what I have concluded: That the errors were few and they did not constitute any political danger to this country."

"Therefore, the important thing is to discover how to maintain an efficient intelligence agency in an open society," he said.

Agnew, Laird said '70 kidnap targets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Weatherman in 1970 considered kidnaping, and possibly assassinating, Spiro T. Agnew and Melvin Laird, according to an FBI informant who penetrated the radical organization.

The congressional testimony, published Saturday, revealed that in addition to the then vice president and defense secretary the group also singled out Henry Kissinger and former White House Press Secretary Ron Ziegler as possible targets.

"You might knock them (Agnew and Laird) off or you might kidnap them," the informant said. "It depended on how you felt that day."

Larry Grathwohl, 27, was recruited by the Weathermen in September, 1969, and immediately went to work for the FBI. The Vietnam veteran, who now lives in Hayward, Calif., testified last Oct. 18 before a closed session of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee.

He said the radicals sometimes were trained in North Vietnam and Cuba, were Communists and he considered them "dangerous."

Federal police tightened security at the White House and government buildings around the country this month after the Weather Underground (the name now adopted by the Weatherman) claimed credit for the Jan. 29 bombing of a State Department restroom. There were no injuries.

Grathwohl's testimony was based on a short association with the revolutionary group. It ended abruptly on April 15, 1970, when he was arrested in New York with Dionne Donghi and Linda Evans, two of its leaders. At that time, the Weatherman became aware of his FBI connection.

Shah of Iran said enemy of Arabs

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy was quoted Saturday as saying the Shah of Iran "is getting to be a great and important enemy of the Arabs."

In an interview with the Austrian newspaper Kurier, Khadafy added that the Shah "is interfering more and more in the problems of the Arab world."

Economy plot against poor nations charged

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

ALGIERS (AP) — Algerian President Houari Boumedienne accused the industrialized countries Saturday of trying to block the full-scale industrialization of the Third World in order to perpetuate their economic domination of the poor countries.

Opening a four-day meeting of the developing nations, the Algerian leader urged a substantial reform and strengthening of the Vienna-based U.N. Industrial Development Organization to serve what he called the interests of the poor countries.

He said the U.N. body should:

— Become an organ of study and execution of industrialization projects and programs in the service of the Third World countries.

— Have the power to give the developing countries whatever assistance they may need "for the recovery of their own natural resources."

— Help the developing countries "to process on their own territories the natural, agricultural and mineral resources they possess."

Boumedienne was the only major speaker at the opening session of the meeting, convened by Algeria to coordinate the policies of the developing nations at the U.N. Conference on Industrial Development scheduled for March 12-26 in Lima, Peru.

Algerian Industry Minister Belaid Abdessalam was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting, which is to be held mostly behind closed doors in the International Conference Center overlooking the Mediterranean, 20 miles west of Algiers.

Representatives of more than 80 nations took part, including numerous ministers or other high officials of the developing countries. They are expected to draft a plan of action for promoting the Third World's industrialization, to be submitted to the Lima conference jointly by the so-called "Group of 77" developing countries — which have now grown to 104. Not all were present when the meeting opened.

In his keynote speech, Boumedienne asserted that the industrialized nations consented to the industrialization of Third World countries only reluctantly and by encouraging "industries that have become undesirable in the developed countries."

The Third World must reject any attempt to impose a system under which "there are some industries suitable for underdeveloped countries and other industries which remain the prerogative of the rich countries, which thereby set themselves up as a sort of dominant aristocracy in the world of industry," Boumedienne declared.

Boumedienne reiterated the Algerian view that the worldwide inflation and recession was not due to the sharp increase in the price of oil, but rather to the industrialized countries' selfishness in "keeping the immense majority of the human race in misery and underdevelopment."

Coffee producers nearing agreement

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Delegates of the world's coffee producers went into a final closed door session Saturday to hammer out new price formula goals from consumer nations. The result may well be a more expensive cup of coffee.

Mexico's Fausto Cantu Pena, president of the World Producers Group, said that the first day's talks of the conference Friday were conducted "with complete frankness" and he was "completely optimistic that a satisfactory final agreement will be worked out."

He indicated the closed door session would range over a wide variety of aspects of producers' problems, including quota retentions.

All of the world's producers have agreed to a 20 per cent quota retention of this year's crop in an effort to bolster world prices.

"There is a complete consensus on our objectives," Cantu Pena said. "We are determined to take serious measures."

Conference sources said a higher world price of coffee was most likely to emerge from the deliberations. When passed on to the consumer, it was bound to increase the price of a cup of coffee.

The delegates are particularly concerned with devising some kind of "price indexing" mechanism which would automatically compensate them for possible future drops in the value of the dollar and other international currencies, after an export price had been agreed upon.

Marianas to be commonwealth

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON—The United States signed a covenant Saturday that will eventually make the Northern Marianas island chain in the Pacific a commonwealth under American sovereignty, much like Puerto Rico.

The pact was concluded on Saipan, the administrative center for Micronesia — a scattering of some 2,000 islands and atolls over an area of 3 million square miles — by Ambassador P. Hayden Williams and Edward Pangelinan, chairman of the Marianas Political Status Commission.

The Northern Marianas comprise 17 islands with a population of 14,000, most of whom speak a language called Chamorro. Micronesia, which includes all of the Marianas, the Marshalls and the Carolines, has a total population of over 100,000.

Administration officials said the Saipan covenant would later be complemented by an agreement placing the rest of Micronesia in a form of "free association" with the United States and providing for Washington to represent the territory on defense and foreign policy questions.

WILLIAMS is continuing to negotiate with Micronesia's Joint Committee on Future Status about the second agreements.

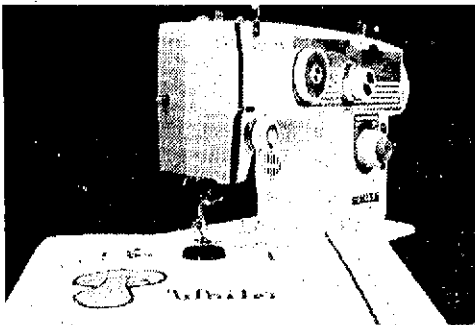

Until those negotiations are concluded, the United States has declared the intention to maintain the present trusteeship status under which it has administered the entire territory with a United Nations mandate since 1947.

The United States had offered commonwealth status for the whole territory to the Congress of Micronesia in 1970 and was turned down the following year. Nearly three years ago the Marianas district legislature, representing the larger islands of Saipan, Tinian and Rota, asked Washington for negotiations leading to a separate commonwealth of the Northern Marianas in political union with the United States.

Saturday's covenant provides for the right of when it acquired the Marianas island of Guam. It took the other islands from Japan during World War II. They had been a League of Nations mandate territory of Japan after World War I. Before that they had been a German possession.

Disability relief?

Can Action Line find out if any assemblyman or state senator is doing anything about property tax relief for persons who receive Social Security disability payments? The totally disabled need help just as much as senior citizens do. We have paid property taxes for most of our lives, but we may lose our home because we're not old enough to qualify for the senior citizens property tax refund. J.R., Downey.

Assemblyman Lawrence Kapiloff, D-San Diego, has introduced a bill (AB294) that would extend the senior citizens property tax assistance program to the totally disabled. The bill recently was approved by the Assembly's Committee on Revenue and Taxation and has been sent to the Ways and Means Committee for review. A similar measure cleared the Assembly last session, but was killed by the Senate's Finance Committee. Kapiloff's latest proposal still faces some stiff opposition in the Senate, but Sacramento observers believe the bill has a slightly better chance of passing this year. If the measure is signed into law, a totally disabled person on a fixed income would be eligible for a refund of a portion of his previous year's property taxes. Currently, veterans who have a service-connected, 100 per cent disability are the only non-elderly disabled persons eligible for property tax relief. Such a veteran does not have to pay any property taxes if the assessed value of his home is less than $10,000.

Money back

Since 1971 my wife and I have struggled with the Internal Revenue Service to get money owed us after it incorrectly took money from our bank account. In many letters we have appealed for help to our congressman and the U.S. Department of Justice, among others. In June 1974, the IRS sent us a form which stated we are eligible to receive about $54 plus interest. We have heard nothing further. Can you help? A.H.B., Long Beach.

Yes. Two weeks after we contacted the IRS and explained your problem, you reported to us the arrival of a $86 refund check.

Flying low

I would like to go to England this summer. What would be the least expensive way to travel round-trip from Los Angeles to London? D.W., Buena Park.

A charter flight would be the least expensive way since many charter flights can take you to London for almost half the price of scheduled airlines. However, you should be careful in selecting a charter airline since many passengers traveling on charter flights have been stranded in a foreign country when their flight was canceled because of the charter groups' insolvency. Also, charter flights are restricted by dates—you have to go at a scheduled time and return on a certain date. You can arrange for charter flights by going through clubs which specialize in charter tours. Such clubs include the British American Club, 3339 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles 90010, 383-1288, Club Universe, 1671 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles 90017, 484-1671, and the Automobile Club of Southern California. The British American Club charges a $10 membership fee and you must be a member six months before going on a flight. The other clubs have no membership fee and are open to the public. The cheapest 45-day round-trip excursion fare between Los Angeles and London on a scheduled airline is $713.

Business loans

I've heard that as of Jan. 1, the Veterans Administration canceled all business loans to veterans. Since my husband is a World War II veteran and my son served in the Vietnam war, we'd like to know if this is true? W.F., Long Beach.

The VA hasn't issued small business loans for years. Vietnam-era veterans (those who served after Aug. 5, 1964) are eligible for business loans through the Small Business Administration's Economic Opportunity Loan Program, but the SBA currently is issuing very few loans because of cutbacks in federal funds for that agency. The EOLP program allows qualified veterans and socially or economically disadvantaged persons to obtain low interest business loans up to $50,000. Although it is easier to qualify for EOLP loans than for other SBA loans, the borrower still must meet certain character requirements and exhibit an ability to repay the loan, according to an SBA spokesman. The borrower usually is required to have about 20 per cent of the amount needed to get started. For more information, contact the Small Business Administration, 840 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Calif. 90014, 688-2956.

Jury finds doctor guilty in abortion

BOSTON (UPI)—Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin was found guilty of manslaughter Saturday by a jury that said he killed a living human being when he performed an abortion on a woman six months pregnant.

When Vincent Shea, foreman of the jury, announced the verdict, a wail went up from the family and supporters of the black 36-year-old obstetrician.

After the verdict Dr. Edelin said he was sure the verdict would discourage other physicians from undertaking elective abortions.

The abortion occurred at Boston City Hospital in Oct. 1973 at a time when Dr. Edelin was one of the two doctors there who would perform abortions.

Jurors who were willing to talk about their deliberations said they were swayed largely by a black and white photo of the fetus about three months premature, and their belief it could have survived the abortion.

"He had a chance," said juror William Sokolowski, a meatcutter who is single and in his 20s.

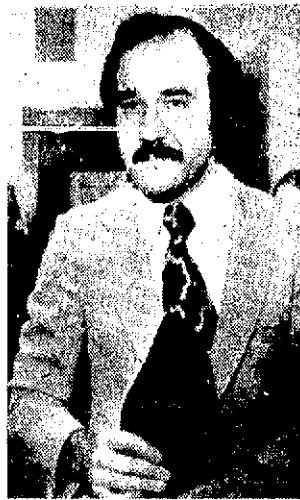

"We all agreed the abortion was perfectly legal," said Francis E. McLaughlin, another juror. "It was negligence. I don't think he did a thorough job examining the fetus for signs of life once it was removed."

Judge James P. McGuire ordered Edelin continued free on $100 personal recognizance bond pending sentencing on an unspecified date. Edelin could get up to 20 years in jail if the conviction is not overturned on appeal.

As friends and relatives wept openly, Edelin told newsmen he "did nothing...illegal...immoral" and said the real losers were the women who have been denied the right to legal hospital abortions.

"Everything I did was in accordance with the law and with good medical practice," he added.

The nine-man, three-woman jury returned the guilty verdict in the second day of deliberations, ending a six-week trial. The state charged Edelin killed a "baby" during an elective abortion he performed Oct. 3, 1973 at Boston City Hospital where he was chief resident obstetrician.

The state claimed a fetus became a "baby" when Edelin separated placenta from uterine wall, putting it on its own systems. It charged Edelin with halting in mid-abortion to stare at a wallclock for "at least three minutes" to ensure that the baby suffocated within the womb.

Assistant Dist. Atty. Newman A. Flanagan, the chief prosecutor, said the verdict means physicians now must try to save the life of the fetuses in surgical abortions, especially in mid and late stages of pregnancies.

The debate over the conviction began almost immediately.

Dr. Carl Goldmark Jr., a spokesman for the American Medical Association, called the verdict "outrageous."

Nellie J. Gray, spokeswoman for a Washington, D.C., Right to Life committee, said it "starts America back on the road to a respect for the dignity for human life protected by our legal system."

In Ann Arbor, Mich., Dr. Jay K. Harness, national chairman of the American Medical Association's intern and resident business session, termed the conviction a complete miscarriage of justice.

Kissinger in Bonn after Saudi Arabian oil talks imported oil is not ended in five years, the choice will be between political surrender or military force, U.S. officials said.

Besides the oil moves, Kissinger sought Faisal's support for U.S. efforts to arrange a Sinai agreement between Israel and Egypt.

"I listened with great interest to the advice of His Majesty that we take always extremely seriously," Kissinger said afterward.

"The talks were warm, friendly and constructive," the secretary of state added before boarding his Air Force jet for the seven-hour flight to Bonn.

Kissinger also took up with Faisal the use of petrodollars for economic warfare. A senior U.S. official said Kissinger had ordered a study of the blacklisting of banks and investment firms with Jewish directors by financial pools involving Arab money.

Charles W. Robinson, the under-secretary of state for economic affairs, is traveling with Kissinger looking for "concrete proposals," particularly in agricultural development.

This is seen as a means of pressuring the Arabs to maintain high production in order to provide capital to finance agricultural and industrial development. The State Department hopes this will result in a drop in oil prices because of oversupply.

Kissinger also reported to Faisal on his "exploratory" mission regarding a possible Sinai settlement between Israel and Egypt.

Reservists, ex-AF men flying Phnom Penh run

Last year Bird's crews flew three or four missions carrying 45 to 60 tons a day into Phnom Penh. But as rebel pressure tightened around the city, the flights have risen to 10 to 13 daily with heavier loads totaling up to 325 tons a day.

Now the aim is for 15 crews flying 600 tons a day.

"We've been asked to have a capability between 23 and 30 sorties a day," said Bird. "We've been asked to consider continued activity beyond the 60 days and also increased round trips."

Bird, a genial, florid 59-year-old Seattle native, said there is no mystery about his firm nor any Central Intelligence Agency connection.

"We're rather proud of what we're doing. If we turned our back on them there would be no hope for the people under this siege," he said.

Bird said the principal activity of his firm, which is based in Oakland, Calif., and started work in the Philippines in 1946, has been building roads and airstrips.

Sir Julian Huxley dies; 'Public Scientist No. 1'

by his younger brother, novelist Aldous Huxley, author of "Brave New World," who died in 1963.

"He venerated his brother and of course was very much his grandfather's grandson, modeling himself after him," Ayer added, referring to the Victorian biologist Thomas Henry Huxley, who championed Darwin's theory of evolution, popularly known as survival of the fittest.

Sir Julian was born June 22, 1887, the eldest son of schoolmaster and editor Leonard Huxley. He grew up in an atmosphere of science and culture, reflected in his wide range of interests.

The tall, bushy-eyebrowed and bespectacled Huxley became the first director-general of the U.N.

Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in 1946, and was knighted in 1958.

Educated at Eton and Oxford, where he later taught, Sir Julian went to the United States when he was 25 and taught at the Rice Institute, Houston, Tex., for four years.

He referred to himself as a "humanist" and his 48 major works included "Religion Without Revelation," "The Uniqueness of Man," "What Dare I Think?," "The Science of Life," and "Evolution, The Modern Synthesis," which has been called the most important survey on evolution in this century.

Sir Julian leaves a wife, the former Marie Juliette Baillot of Switzerland, and two sons.

can citizens abroad for intelligence purposes, but he declined to discuss any individual instances of the practice.

He said it was the FBI's position, however, that the bureau was "not operational outside the country." Without confirming that either Burton or the woman, who asked to remain anonymous, had ever traveled abroad, he pointed out that neither were special agents of the FBI.

Asked how he would describe the pair, Murphy replied that they were considered by the bureau to be "paid informants."

According to the former FBI official, the bureau maintains agents in a number of foreign capitals who serve as "legal attaches" and who have their offices inside American embassies. He said their roles were officially limited to performing a "liaison" function with foreign police agencies and that they were barred from "positive," or active, gathering of intelligence.

Burton, who headed a sham "revolutionary" group in Tampa called the "Red Star Cadre," which was set up as a front for his FBI work, told the Times in a series of interviews that he ended his relationship with the FBI last summer after becoming concerned about the legality of some of the tasks he had undertaken.

He said that last month, his doubts led him to write to Clarence M. Kelley, the FBI director, seeking assurances that his work outside the U.S. was "legal and proper."

He has received no reply to that letter or an earlier one, and FBI officials will not say whether a reply is forthcoming.

Burton's account of his activities, and that of his fellow operative, provide an uncommon insight into a little-known aspect of the FBI's operations at a time when that agency is coming under increasing scrutiny.

Hughes burglary: who's spying?

glars took $60,000 in cash and some art objects. The break-in was a one-day item in the local news.

But time has proved that nothing involving Howard Hughes is likely to be insignificant.

About two weeks ago, authorities acknowledged that documents also had been stolen. They were said to detail Hughes' contributions to major political figures and dealings with the Central Intelligence Agency and Atomic Energy Commission.

One sensational report was that some documents related to a Hughes contract with the CIA to raise a sunken Russian nuclear submarine from the floor of the Atlantic.

Law enforcement officers were acknowledging such rumors, but suddenly inquiries in that direction met with silence until the affair now has become tabbed in some circles "The Case of the Incredible Shrinking Submarine."

Global Marine, Inc., a Los Angeles firm which operates the Long Beach-based Glomar Explorer, the world's most advanced marine mining vessel, denied any attempt had been made to raise a sunken sub.

Last week the district attorney's office revealed it was presenting evidence to a grand jury on the burglary. Such proceedings are secret but so extreme was the hushup in this case that witnesses were led in through back corridors so even their identity could not be established.

At the same time, press reports appeared saying that an intermediary had approached the Hughes organization offering to return the stolen files for a ransom of $500,000.

The Summa Corp. was said to have rejected the demand, principally on the reasoning there was no reason to believe extortionists would not keep photostatic copies.

Those reports have not had official acknowledgement. But it is known that the CIA and the FBI contacted the Los Angeles police and the district attorney's office about the case and the grand jury proceedings.

The grand jury met for only one day — Thursday — this past week. Whether it had returned an indictment or would hear further evidence could not be determined.

A source at the district attorney's office said that, in any event, the investigation was being limited so that an indictment would refer only to a simple burglary and/or extortion and would not touch on matters of national security.

Howard Hughes, as always, was not available for comment.

Doctor's 5-year nightmare not over yet

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Former Green Beret Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald, charged with the brutal murders of his pregnant wife and two young daughters, said Saturday he will detail investigative bungling and produce new evidence — centered around a long-haired, hippie-type girl — that will, once, and for all, prove him innocent of the 1970 slayings.

"I can't believe this is happening again," the 31-year-old doctor said in an interview in his office in the emergency wing of St. Mary Medical Center as he outlined the case for the defense.

"They have absolutely no motive in a triple homicide...this incredible scene at my house...I still wake up nightly in cold sweats...they're accusing me because I'm alive."

Less than two months after MacDonald's wife, Collette, and his two daughters, Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 2, were found beaten and stabbed to death in their small Fort Bragg, N.C., home, MacDonald was named a suspect. The then-26-year-old Special Forces physician was found unconscious near his wife's body. He had been stabbed repeatedly and told a story of four persons — one a long-haired, chanting girl — invading the home and attacking him and his family. Hundreds of stab wounds were found in the victims and two — the 26-year-old mother and the six-year-old daughter — had also been beaten with a club.

MacDONALD, whose lung had been punctured during what he described as his futile effort to save his family, was released

The CID refused to interview many who had information as a suspect following a six-month Army hearing. The Army ruled there was insufficient evidence to warrant a trial by court-martial. However, Col. Warren Rock, who presided over the hearing, filed what is still a secret memo scathingly critical of the Army Criminal Investigation Division's investigation of the case.

MacDonald agrees but admits there is little that can be done to salvage a bad investigative job, especially after five years.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was brought into the case, and — according to prosecutors — on the basis of their five-month investigation, the grand jury issued an indictment of the doctor. He is to be arraigned in Raleigh on Feb. 18 — exactly five years and one day after the murders occurred.

"The field investigation by the FBI was very cursory...very limited," the doctor says. "There were no new witnesses questioned that we know of."

The FBI did, he admits, uncover a neighbor who, they claim, was unloading his car after a trip about the time the family was being attacked.

"This is new and really puzzles us," he says. "Because they stated under oath — when we were alleging that they had an ineffective investigation — that they questioned every neighbor—everyone in the vicinity."

The prosecution contends the unidentified neighbor heard no commotion coming from the MacDonald home — none of the sounds of fighting and screaming that went on during the triple killing.

"First of all we have to talk to the witness because most of the time what they (the prosecution) allege is not at all what the witness said. We don't know where this witness lives — if he lives two or three blocks away, that's one thing. If he lived next door that's another. We know what all the close neighbors say," MacDonald claims, "because we questioned them after the CID did."

But the CID, he says, refused to interview many persons who offered information, claiming they had already closed the case.

One of these, he says, he learned of only days ago.

"We got a call two days ago from a captain in the Special Forces...a Green Beret who is no longer in the continental United States, and he said he had been trying to tell them for five years that someone tried to break into his house that night..."

"He lived about two blocks from me and said he had been trying to tell the CID this for five years and they wouldn't listen to him."

Another neighbor, he says, not questioned by the investigating officers was the wife of a warrant officer who lived a hundred yards from the MacDonald home.

"She said she heard two men and a woman pass under her window sometime in the early morning hours. It was raining and it was cold and this was unusual because this is a quiet little officers' housing quarters.

"They woke her up and she went to the window and saw them."

The girl — long-haired, with a floppy hat and boots — fit the description of the girl MacDonald had said was in the house during the slaughter of his wife and daughters.

MacDonald has maintained that when he was awakened by his wife's screams in the early morning hours of Feb. 17, 1970, he saw four people — one appeared to be a girl with long blonde hair and wearing a floppy hat, and three men. The girl, he says, appeared to be holding a candle and in a monotone kept chanting, "Acid is groovy...kill the pigs."

And this girl, he says, will figure prominently in his defense.

"She is the daughter of a retired Army colonel," MacDonald says. "She was picked up, questioned and released. Later on — during the Army hearing — testimony from another witness began to implicate her, so they went out to pick her up again."

"They testified they couldn't find her because the address they had for her was a vacant lot."

The investigator finally found her a second time, the doctor says, and accepted her alibi that she was under the influence of narcotics and couldn't remember what happened that night. All she could remember was that she was driving around in a car and doesn't know where she was or what she had done.

"There had been prior testimony that the girl was stoned on mescaline and acid (LSD), but she told the investigator that she was stoned on marijuana," MacDonald recalls. "The investigator was asked if he thought her answers were truthful and he said he did. Then he was asked if he knew the effects of marijuana and he said he did. He was asked if one of them was loss of memory and he said no."

"Then my attorney asked if he thought her answer was open and honest and he said he did."

The investigator also was asked, the doctor says, if he questioned the girl about the fact that others had testified she was under the influence of LSD and mescaline.

His answer, under oath, the doctor says, was: "No, I didn't...because she appeared nervous."

The Army, he says, accepted her alibi. The defense didn't.

"One of our defense witnesses saw her coming back to her house at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 17th...laughing and giggling...with two other guys in a car.

"Another will testify that on the day of the funeral she was seen dressed in black with a black wreath on her door and when asked why she said, 'The MacDonalds are being buried today.' This was in Fayetteville, 10 miles away.

"There is more but I can't talk about it now. Needless to say, we intend to question her."

But the frustrations of the CID's inadequate investigation into the girl's actions on the night of his family's murder and the apparent lack of questioning of neighbors is just part of the over-all frustrations of the case, he says.

The five-month FBI investigation on which, the prosecution maintains, the indictment was based, MacDonald says was "a very cursory type thing...a much limited version of (the) 1970 investigation."

"What they did was

The daughter of a retired colonel will be questioned harass my old girlfriends. They called every girl I've ever dated and tried to get a statement about my character. They ended up with three people.

"One was an airline stewardess who they pulled off a flight...they grounded the flight to get a statement. Turns out I never dated her — she dated my brother.

"Another is a girl I met and dated 18 months after I left the Army. At the end of the interview the FBI agent asked her out.

One, Carol Larson, was mentioned in the prosecution's rundown of the case during a bail reduction hearing.

"I've known her for 15 years...there's absolutely nothing between us. I stayed at her apartment when I came to San Francisco. She was a girlfriend I used to know in High school — I hadn't seen her since."

Jay Stroud, the government attorney fighting against MacDonald's eventual bail reduction, implied that they had "sleuthed around" and come up with illicit liasons, MacDonald says.

"What happened was that they asked me and I told them."

The prosecution also maintained, he said, that he had female visitors to his rooms in the Ft. Bragg Bachelor Officers Quarters while he was involved in the Army hearings and was under guard.

"It's just not true. First of all the guards wouldn't let them in. I had five MPs guarding my room, so it was absolutely absurd...unbelievable.

"What they have is one person who said she was in my room when I was under guard — which is not true. My escort officer — one of the men assigned to guard me — took this girl's roommate and I took this girl to a movie and dinner. That is the 'tremendously illicit liason' we had at Fort Bragg." The second part of the FBI investigation, MacDonald maintains, is equally as frustrating. "It was a re-working of the laboratory data...it was a matter of looking at and folding my pajama top and placing it over a picture of the bodies — not the bodies. And from that they have drawn this whole new scientific body of knowledge."

(Prosecution attorneys said at the bail hearing that scientific evidence would show that MacDonald's pajama top—which he said had been ripped from him — had actually been placed over the dead woman's chest and she had been stabbed through it.)

"I asked them in the grand jury room what kind of expert witness this was...and they said he was an expert in impressions. They said he was an FBI expert in applying cloth to bodies and marking off the folds in the cloth related to the bodies and the blood stains relating to the wounds.

"My attorney — Bernie Segal — has handled 700 homicide cases. He's a very, very well-known criminal defense lawyer. He laughed and said there was no such field — there's not even a field of expertise such as that."

But what they showed him in the grand jury room, he says, were his pajamas placed over photographs of his wife and then the pajama top placed over a piece of foam rubber in which Mrs. MacDonald's stab wounds were marked.

"They took the foam rubber with all the stab wounds and had the expert in impressions fold and refold the pajama top until he came up with a way to put 21 pins through the holes in the pajama top into a 'wound' in the foam rubber. To match up the holes they had to put these sticks in at every different angle. Yet they say all the wounds were made straight into the body."

The second piece of evidence, MacDonald says the prosecution claims is new, is a bloody footprint found in one of his daughters' bedrooms which indicates he was carrying a weight—presumably his wife's body.

"I don't know anything about that. All I know is that when I was in the house I didn't have any weight in my hand. Heaven knows how long it was there — and the amount of congealing amount of clotting...whatever."

"My attorney says it's preposterous. There is just no way that they can say that. He says it will be absolutely destroyed with another expert witness."

Another piece of new evidence, the doctor says, is based on the impression expert also.

"They refolded the pajama top and the sheet

'What they did was harass my old girlfriends'

(a bloody sheet found in the master bedroom) and they matched them up to a photograph of Collette's wounds. They state that the blood spots on the sheet match the blood spots on the wounds and therefore because of the footprint — with weight on it — they have jumped to the incredible conclusion that I must have been carrying Collette in the pajama top and the sheet."

As far as his own wounds are concerned MacDonald says, despite the prosecution's intimidation at the bail hearing that they were mere scratches, all the prosecution doctors testified at the Army hearing that his wounds were "life threatening."

"Stroud implied that I had a few scratches. I had 17 stab wounds documented."

"The abdominal one... wasn't a scratch. Their surgeon will testify it was a three inch cut with muscle protruding from the wound. But now they're making a big deal about it not being stitched...and they've gradually lightened it until it sounds like a scratch."

"There were other stab wounds of a significant nature...ice pick wounds in my left chest and wounds all across my abdomen."

Countering prosecution claims that he has told different stories to different people about how and when his pajama top was torn from him, the young doctor denies his story has ever changed.

"I have never said they were torn. They were quoting directly from a newspaper article. That interview was done under duress — secretly — the reporter snuck me out of the BOQ, got me over to this building and I found myself talking into a microphone. I said it was ripped or came over my head — never knew. They should question me on the six-hour CID tape interview done April 6, 1970."

"The prosecution stated under oath that it was shocking to them that I never discussed this (the killings) with my friends and relatives...yet he got up there (at the bail reduction hearing) and stated that there were hundreds of recountings and they were all different and that is one of the suspicious things."

The "bed-slat" the prosecution claims was used as a club during the murders, MacDonald says is accurate.

"They apparently have identified — at least to my satisfaction — that the grain in the wood in the club matches the grain in the wood on a bed-slat from Kimberly's bed. But what Jay Stroud was implying was that it was being used as a bed-slat. It was not."

"What they have is a piece of wood...about 30 inches long—that matches the bed slats from Kimberly's bed. The whole house is probably filled with very similar wood...I did a lot of repairs at the house...In fact all the shelving was made from the same wood. I ordered it from a lumber yard, sawed it up and used it."

CARSON DOWNEY LAKEWOOD LONG BEACH LOS ALTOS TORRANCE

Long-haired girl haunts doctor's nightmare

This piece was never used as a bed-slat, but what the prosecution leaves you with is the feeling that it was and that I probably ripped it out from under the bed and did this."

The same innuendoes, he claims, were made when the prosecution said there was blood found on his glasses which were found in the living room, near the sofa on which the doctor says he was sleeping when the intruders arrived.

"It turns out there was a microscopic sized dot of blood on one of the lenses. They asked how it got there, and I said I didn't know. Maybe contamination."

"I told them I treat patients all day, every day. I had worked all day Sunday in the emergency room, sewing up people and stuff. So I said I had no idea. But it's certainly not uncommon to have a microscopic drop of blood on my glasses. Stroud talked as though they were soaked in blood."

Other than the exaggerations and innuendoes, MacDonald maintains the ineptness of the Army investigation has been unbelievable.

Lt. Joseph Paul, the officer in charge of the crime scene, the doctor says, testified under oath that he was unaware of how many men were involved in guarding the house, how many people went into or out of the house, that he not only did not have guards at each entry or have a registry at the entries, but didn't even know how many doors there were to the house.

The Army doctors called his wounds 'life-threatening'

"Some of the most significant testimony in regard to the MPs guarding the house," the doctor recalls, "is that two testified that they saw people moving stuff in the living room — the so-called staged crime scene."

The "stuff" included a flower pot which two men said they saw another person pick up and stand upright.

And the flower pot, MacDonald says, is one of the reasons he was charged.

"The officer in charge of the investigation testified that his mind was made up when he walked into the living room at 5:20 a.m. with another CID investigator.

"He said he knew it was a 'staged scene' because of two things — one a flower pot was standing straight up with the dirt down. He said that anyone who struggled and turned over a flower pot — the flower pot would be on its side. They never asked any one of the people in the room, and there were 14 at the time, if anyone touched anything."

The second "staged" exhibit was a coffee table that the prosecution contends was laid on its side because it could never have landed there due to an overweight top.

"We all reconvened at the house one day during the hearing," MacDonald says, "and the colonel in charge of the hearing kicked over the table and it landed on its side and it stayed there. The prosecution had said that they could knock over the coffee table, ad infinitum, and it would land with the legs up."

"Yet Jay Stroud still said last Thursday that that was one of the big points in the staged scene."

Another point in the Army's investigation which the doctor contends leaves room for doubt as far as competence is concerned, is the fact that all the fingerprints — 50 of them — which were lifted by CID experts from the door where the murderers had entered, were destroyed.

"The expert dusted them...put tape over them...photographed them and flew back to Ft. Benning, Ga. But his film didn't come out...he said he couldn't figure out why, but maybe a heavy truck was going by shaking the ground."

"He rephotographed the prints, then pulled the tape which destroyed the prints, only to find out the second set of photographs were also bad."

There are three distinct theories on motive, MacDonald says, which he has in 75 pages of sworn statements from the top CID agents.

"One of the theories is that Collette did it all and I, in a rage, killed Collette as punishment."

"Then they have a theory that there was a fight in the master bedroom between Collette and I over whether the baby should have a bottle or not, and Kimberly walked in. I had grabbed a handy club, two knives and an ice pick and proceeded to do this to Collette and when I turned around, Kimberly had walked into the room and I swung this club."

"This theory accounts for what Stroud says was a gross amount of blood (from Kimberly), but which actually is five spots, tiny spots of blood that are her type. That could have dripped off a weapon or come from one of the assailants. They assume all the blood is from me and my family."

The agent that proposed the second theory, MacDonald says, could not get his theory to fit the crime scene when the exact dimensions of the room were marked off.

"The third theory — one they're sticking to now and it's the weakest — is that something happened in Kristie's bedroom and Collette came in and there was a struggle...after which I rearranged the bodies."

Fingerprints from crime scene lost —after two tries

"I'm sure you really won't believe me because I'm a defendant," the doctor said frankly "but, first of all what they've done is pile up — for six months in a closed hearing without a defense lawyer or anyone being present — their side of everything. They've piled up a mass of what is called circumstantial evidence...alleged facts about the scene of the crime."

"Assuming all this stuff is correct—that it actually exists the way they allege — and it doesn't — it still doesn't hurt."

"Jay Stroud makes it sound like it incriminates me, but Stroud's arguments were almost verbatim from the 1970 hearing and the hearing officer's report rejects what Jay Stroud says, point by point."

Did he take a polygraph test, referred to briefly by the prosecution at the bail reduction hearing?

"No," he says frankly. "They explained to me what a lie detector was. It takes into account blood pressure, pulse and sweat. I couldn't imagine talking about this...I wouldn't have a chance. The psychiatrist agreed."

"He said we're not talking about breaking a leg, armed robbery or stealing a car, we're talking about this incredible slaughter...where this guy did mouth to mouth on the victims — his own wife and kids."

MacDonald claims he is being charged with the slaughter of his family for three or four reasons—none related to guilt.

"I'm being charged because I'm alive."

"I'm being charged because I tried to rebuild my life and that really got to Freddie this former father-in-law who pushed for the grand jury investigation."

"I'm being charged because my wounds were not as serious, obviously, as the people who were killed."

They can't, he maintains, convict on that. But he intends to fight.

And the fight will begin when he is arraigned on three counts of premeditated murder, those of his wife and two daughters, on Feb. 18, five years and one day from the time his nightmare began.

Ratings a Ball to Lucie (vs. Lucille)

NEW YORK — Lucie Arnaz gets her big dramatic opportunity in a "Black Dahlia" TV special on NBC on March 1 — and her CBS competition will be her mother Lucille Ball with Dean Martin.

"What about the ratings that night?" Lucie echoed my question. "I figure she'll probably cream me. I'm thinking of taking out ads. 'Nine chances out of 10, my mother's show will be repeated, so why not watch mine?'" Lucie's special will be two hours. "The opposition the second hour," she sighed, "will be the Grammy Awards."

LUCIE, who's 23, living in New York to study acting here, has another special March 23, "Lucie at Disney World," concentrating on a new roller-coaster called "Space Mountain" whose structure she said cost $22½ million.

"The meteors in space are coming right at you!" Lucie said. "It's scary as hell. The first four times seem easy, then I said, 'We're getting OFF!' The talent is nauseous, the talent is sick at its stomach!"

Lucie knows now that she's not entitled to privacy any more. Her brother Desi "just bought a house and is trying to put his house together and he's getting into Desi, trying to find who Desi is. He's got two specials he's trying to do."

"I haven't seen Jim Bailey"—the female impressionist she was talking of marrying—"in a year and a half. He was real good for me when I was getting over a marriage that failed. I can't say we're good friends now. He hasn't kept in touch. He was suing some magazine. I think he's preoccupied with Jim right now."

"MOM IS SORT OF between gigs now with becoming a backgammon champion. Gary"—her

LUCILLE BALL, AND LUCIE ARNEZ
Mother, Daughter Rivals for Ratings mother's husband Gary Morton—"is campaigning for an Oscar nomination for best supporting actor in 'Lenny.' All we need is my grandmother doing commercials."

"And my grandmother, Dede Ball, my mother's mother, could do it. She's up in Aspen now. No, she's not skiing, but it wouldn't shock me if she did. She keeps us all together. My father's mother is different. She's an old-fashioned Spanish lady."

Lucie's around with Gary Pudney the agent. "We decided to stay loose her in the role of Gittel and remarked that she'd never give her daughter any advice on acting any more. Lucie was so accomplished that Lucille couldn't help her.

THAT TOOK care of everybody but the master of the establishment, Desi Arnaz Sr.

"Dad's got this place in Mexico that's the paradise of the modern world. He's writing his autobiography. He's getting a divorce. He's going through that period of life when he thinks I'm not too old for a second fling. To him those Spanish señoritas look very 'a-cha-chai!'"

Tanker buoy danger told

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

Use of single point mooring buoys (SPMB's) to unload huge oil tankers would raise the risk of ship collisions to "near certainty," according to Rob N. Hoffmaster, chief engineer for the Long Beach Harbor Department.

In a report which examines possible future port development through the year 2000, Hoffmaster said if the SPMB were located in waters with a depth of 82 feet, the minimum required by Very Large Crude Carriers (VLCC's) and Ultra Large Crude Carriers (ULCC's), the unloading or loading operations would be conducted in shipping lanes through which nearly 10,000 vessels pass each year.

"A major oil spill resulting from a ship collision at an offshore buoy would be difficult, if not impossible, to contain, and prevailing currents and winds would carry crude oil to the fishery habitat of the breakwater and to the beaches not only of Long Beach but perhaps as far as San Diego County," Hoffmaster stated.

While there are more than 50 SPMB's located throughout the world none are in use in the United States. The buoy is a large, cylindrical steel tank-like device equipped with pumps that push the oil to or from a tanker through flexible hoses that connect to buried pipelines to a receiving station ashore. In use, a tanker is moored to the ing within the harbors to create the depth needed to handle the massive oil carriers.

Another reason the in-port oil terminals are favored by port officials is that the dredge spoils could be used to create much-needed new land which could be used for cargo handling and other facilities.

Pilotage fees

If an Assembly Bill introduced by Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, calling for Los Angeles Harbor pilots to be brought under state control becomes law, it could cause an increase in pilotage fees charged ships moving in and out of the busy port.

The allegation was made in an information center of the buoy, and as the currents and wind change the tanker pivots around the buoy in a large circle.

Thus a VLCC of 250,000-deadweight tons with a length of more than 1100 feet would swivel around the buoy in a circle nearly a mile in diameter. Hoffmaster calculates it would require six such buoys to handle the estimated volume of petroleum products to meet the future needs of the Southern California area. With all six buoys in use, which Hoffmaster claims will happen frequently, it would mean the six tankers would be moving around in six mile-wide circles.

If the buoys were positioned in the closest to shore waters with a depth of 82 feet there are two possible locations outside Long Beach and Los Angeles harbors. One is 1.5 miles off the San Pedro breakwater and the other three miles outside the Long Beach breakwater. Both locations are located in the designated shipping lanes leading to and from the entrances to the two harbors.

While the SPMB's are favored by some environmentalists and some state officials not involved in port operations, officials of both Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbor departments have favored building super tanker terminals inside the harbors. The port officials claim the danger from collision would be far less if the tankers docked inside the breakwater and that should an oil spill occur it would be much easier to clean up the oil compared to trying to contain and pick up spilled oil in the sometimes rough ocean channel waters.

Environmentalists favor the SPMB's because their use would preclude dredgletter presented to the Board of Harbor Commissioners by Glenn V. Hughes, the Harbor Department's legislative representative. Hughes alleged also that in addition to the established pilotage fees, users of the pilot service may be assessed an additional fee to finance a pilot's pension plan included in Thomas' bill.

Hughes noted that a section of the bill implies there could be more than one group of pilots operating in Los Angeles Harbor and San Pedro Bay consequently "splinter" groups and the present 15 Los Angeles pilots could be competing with each other for the pilotage revenue.

If the bill becomes law, the Harbor Department would lose the fees it now receives for providing the pilotage service since the service would be operated by the state. The department would have no control over the service provided by the state-controlled system. It would also have no control over the hiring or training of the pilots performing the service. The port, in effect, would be at the mercy of the state in controlling ship traffic entering and leaving the harbor.

Hughes alleged that Thomas favors the bill because he is against the Harbor Department's current investigation regarding the possibility of putting the pilot service out to bid for a private franchise such as that under which the pilots serving the Port of Long Beach operate.

The Long Beach Board of Harbor Commissioners has expressed "vigorous opposition" to Thomas' bill. They fear that passage of the bill would develop into a "Los Angeles today, Long Beach tomorrow" situation.

The Los Angeles pilots are employed by the Harbor Department under Civil Service rules and regulations. The Long Beach Harbor Department, for more than 50 years, has used the pilotage service provided by Jacobsen Pilot Service, an independently held company of which the pilots are part owners.

Orient bound

Two members of the Los Angeles Harbor Commission and two staff members will travel to the Orient in March with the combined purpose of promoting trade and to attend the week-long conference of the International Association of Ports and Harbors, to be held in Singapore.

After the conference, which starts March 8, the harbor representatives will call on officials of various shipping lines and executives of import-export companies in an effort to encourage trade through Los Angeles Harbor.

Just which two of the five members of the commission will make the 15-day trip has not yet been decided. Fred B. Crawford, general manager, and Robert D. Kleist, director of trade development, will be the staff representatives on the trip.

Harbor commissioners set long-range goals

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

Long Beach Board of Harbor Commissioners has adopted a general plan and set goals the Harbor Department hopes to attain while developing the port through the year 2000.

The statement of goals presented by Bob N. Hoffmaster, chief harbor engineer, and approved by the board represents the general policy the board will follow in future port development projects.

The commissioners agreed to seek the best use of the limited coastal resources of the Harbor District by assuming leadership in the regulation of land and water use within the district and by remaining sensitive to the needs of communities and agencies surrounding the busy port complex.

The commission intends to acquire certain key land areas to both protect existing developments and to provide for additional developments. The commission desires to curb misuse of land through the prevention of substantial construction or inappropriate developments.

Hoffmaster said the port should provide leadership in the development of facilities in support of the social and economic welfare of the community by insuring public access to port waters except under unsafe conditions and by cooperating with other agencies in studies and development of harbor resources. He also urged the commission to foster and encourage development of commerce, navigation, fisheries, and recreation while encouraging world trade and multiple use of port resources. The commission agreed to strive for conservation and protection of the entire California coastline and its ecological systems by providing necessary commercial shipping facilities within existing port areas thus preserving currently undeveloped sections of the coastline from being used for the creation of new ports. The board intends to protect the natural marine life habitat within the harbor district as a valuable natural resource and to maintain the quality of water, air and sound to assure a healthy climate for both human and marine life.

By taking extra precautionary moves, the board intends to prevent irreversible actions or any which might disturb any historical site. The Harbor Department, through the commission hopes to adhere to the general port plan, and not only provide a program of orderly development but to continue its capability to respond to changing demands as they might affect commerce, navigation, fishery, and recreation.

Ocean survival tips listed

Hypothermia.
Few people have every heard of it, yet hundreds die of it every year, especially in wintertime.

Hypothermia is the lowering of body temperature to the extent that the body's vital organs fail to function properly, a condition which can be fatal. It is a major cause of death among victims of marine and boating accidents.

The Boating Safety Branch of the 11th Coast Guard District, headed by Cmdr. R. Rounseville, has some advice for boaters and merchant seamen who suddenly find themselves dumped into chilly ocean waters.

The Coast Guard has compiled an "Expectancy of Survival Chart" indicating how long a person can survive in waters of varying temperatures. At this time of the year the Southern California ocean water temperature is about 55 degrees. A person in the water of that temperature could be expected to lose consciousness in one to two hours and with death occurring within one to six hours.

Rounseville says the human body's main defense against cold is to shut off the supply of blood to the skin. This causes the skin to act as an insulating layer to protect vital organs.

"Because of this, exercising in an attempt to keep the hands and feet warm is exactly the wrong thing to do," claims Rounseville.

The best way to keep warm, claims the Coast Guard, is to play it "cool." Hard swimming or thrashing around in cold water sends blood to the arms and legs warming them while the temperature of vital organs starts to drop. The warmth in the arms and legs soon dissipates to the water instead of being conserved to keep the vital organs warm.

In water a half-degree above freezing a person will lose consciousness in approximately 15 minutes and death occurs about 30 minutes later. In August the waters off Long Beach average about 69 degrees. At that temperature a person in the water could be expected to remain conscious up to 12 hours with the expected time of survival beyond that, ranging from three hours up. Actually a person who loses consciousness has a slightly better chance of survival in cold water than a person who remains conscious. The reason is that an unconscious person uses less body warmth than does a conscious person who may be attempting to swim or tread water.

However, the "Expectancy of Survival Chart" is based on the assumption that the victim in the water is wearing a PFD—a Personal Flotation Device.

White House must pay rent to landlord Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House pays $165.90 a year in rent to give President Ford space for his Oval Office desk.

For in the bureaucratic ways of government, the President and all the men and women on his staff are but tenants occupying rented office space.

The White House is billed by the General Services Administration, landlord of the federal government, for the office space it occupies. The GSA bills quarterly. In another month or so a Ford aide must write a letter giving the GSA three months' rent.

"We are not a vicious landlord. But we do believe in efficiency," said GSA spokesman Richard Vawter.

Annual rent for the working wings of the White House is $162,256. The bill for office space for all Ford's forces — including men and machines in nearby buildings — is $1,293,768.

The White House part includes the Oval Office, the Cabinet Room, the Roosevelt Room used for conferences, the corner office of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, and space occupied by all other counselors, advisers, assistants, secretaries and even the coffee pot stands.

The rent is paid for the White House West Wing, the President's working area, and that part of the East Wing used by the First Lady's office help.

The upstairs White House living quarters are not included. Presumably the GSA figures that living above the shop is one privilege a landlord should allow tenants at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. The rent is based on measurements. "We price White House office space at about $6.90 a square foot," Vawter said. Thus the President's 6-by-4-foot desk requires $165.90 rent. "It is not luxury office space. The lawyers, stockbrokers, lobbyists and others renting quarters down the street from the White House pay private landlords up to about $10 or $12 a square foot," Vawter said. The GSA billing for space outside the White House used by presidential men and women includes: —The Old Executive Office Building, next door, which houses Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and all manner of economists, speech writers, chart makers and other thinkers. Annual rent: $772,804, figured at $5.39 a square foot. —The red brick New Executive Office Building, down the street and around the corner, housing more aides and billed at $160,000 a year or $5.33 a square foot.

— Two Jackson Place houses, across the street on Lafayette Square. Nos. 716 and 712 are used for keeping at polite distance such activities as office space for ex-presidents transiting into private life (Richard M. Nixon's stuff was kept there in one of these political halfway houses. Former Vice President Spiro Agnew used a Jackson Place mansion). Each rents for $14,172 a year. No. 716 at $6.06 a square foot and 712 at $5.68 a square foot. —The White House garage at 1222 22nd Street, renting annually at $170,364 at $1.91 a square foot. Thus the total White House annual rent bill, according to Vawter, of $1,293,768.

"It's like Peter paying Paul," one White House aide said. "It's all just bookkeeping." "No, sir, a bit more than that," said Vawter. In times past each government agency went to Congress each year asking for office space, Vawter said, and explained: "It took three or four years for an agency to get more space authorized. Now the GSA does all the renting. We alone go to Congress and get a lump sum for office space, and we parcel it out. Much more efficient and economical." The new procedure is dubbed the GSA's Standard Level User Fund, and its sharp landlord's eye is not universally popular. Vawter said grumpy bureaucrats, when using the initials, sometimes change the final "F" to "T."

Segregationist Maddoxback in restaurant business

By WAYNE KING
New York Times Service

ATLANTA—"A lot of restaurants," explained Lester G. Maddox, hoisting a forkful of turnip greens and talking non-stop during a late lunch at his new Pickrick cafeteria, "try to fancy up their food and give it a name nobody will recognize.

They pretty it up, they put white gravy on chicken and they call it Hawaiian style, they charge you $2 more, then they ruin the chicken."

"It is," he said with twinkling gravity and no further explanation, "just like government."

As an expert witness, Maddox, former governor, lieutenant governor, presidential aspirant and celebrated—some would say notorious—restaurantier, would probably qualify in both kitchen and state house—although even he would concede that there are those who give him more credence in the former than in the latter.

IT IS to the restaurant business that Maddox has for the last two months devoted most of his rather considerable energies.

On Dec. 3, exactly two months after his crushing primary defeat in a bid to return to the governorship he held from 1967 until 1971, Maddox reopened his Pickrick restaurant—the one he closed in 1964 rather than submit to federal government orders to serve blacks as well as whites.

If there was something of a sense of "deja vu" about it all—the rich smell of turnip greens, biscuits, hominy and fried chicken haunting the air, the Confederate Stars and Bars unfurled over the tables, Maddox at the door greeting guests—

"Now, don't y'all spend your lunch money anywhere else, heah?"—there was also a high if perhaps unnoticed symbolism.

In the early '60s Maddox's Pickrick restaurant at another location was the South's best-known bastion of resistance to integration of privately owned places of public accommodation, a concrete application of the segregated South's cries of "Never!"

MADDOX once drove a contingent of blacks out of his parking lot with a brandished pistol and passed out ax handles on the street in front for use by his partisans in eugenic blacks who tried to enter. He was prone to announce to diners such things as "Martin Luther king will be by in a minute to pick up your dishes."

Finally, Maddox closed the restaurant altogether rather than allow blacks inside, turning the Pickrick into something akin to the Alamo among the South's holdout segregationists.

On the strength of his flaming resistance, Maddox became a national figure, governor of Georgia, lieutenant governor when he could not by law succeed himself and, then, as the tide of racial feeling subsided in Georgia as in the rest of the South, he became last year a political casualty, defeated by a racial moderate and colorless legislative technician named George Busbee, who had the public support of such civil rights leaders as Julian Bond.

Now, in Lester Maddox's new Pickrick, blacks go through the cafeteria line just like everybody else—very few, but every lunchtime will find a smattering of black faces in Maddox's restaurant.

"IF IT'S something you can't do anything about," Maddox said, "you go along with it. The battle is all over."

Maddox may be beaten, but he is unbowed.

"This next song," he announced over the Pickrick sound system before whistling a warbling version of "Alabama Jubilee" to the accompaniment of an old player piano, "is dedicated to a fellow going out to campaign for president this week."

The reference was to Alabama's Gov. George C. Wallace. Later Maddox said in an interview, "I'll go anywhere in the United States to campaign for Gov. Wallace."

Chel asks state Malpractice insurance measure planned offices in L.B.

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Assemblyman Fred W. Chel, D-Long Beach, Saturday urged prompt action towards a state office building in Long Beach—a project already afoot—to save the more than $465,000 a year the state now pays in rent of office space here.

"The state now owns land in the Long Beach downtown civic development area which it is prepared to exchange with the city for another usable site," Chel said. "Preliminary studies have been ordered to determine the feasibility of the site proposed and offered by the city. The time to push for the preparation of plans and actual construction of a Long Beach state office building is now."

Such a building has been part of the state's overall building plan for more than six years, Chel said, but no drawings have been developed to date for its construction.

"But as a result of recent meetings with the Long Range Facilities Planning Office of the Department of General Services," Chel said, "it now appears that they are finally moving on this long overdue project and prepared to start on development and architectural plans if the site feasibility study is favorable."

Chel said state legislative analyst A. Alan Post has criticized state government for an unconscionable waste of taxpayers' money in paying large rental fees over long periods of time rather than using the funds to build needed state office facilities.

Prompt action is important, Chel said, to minimize the effects of inflation which have doubled the $20 per square foot construction costs of a few years ago.

Chel listed the annual lease costs for state offices in Long Beach:

Alcoholic Beverage Control, $9,888; Board of Equalization, $54,300; Contractors' Licensing Board, $4,738; Coastal Zone Commission, $28,476; Oil and Gas Conservation, $27,036; Employment Development, $86,696; Franchise Tax Board, $37,380; Health, $30,750; Industrial Relations, $65,476; Rehabilitation, $27,893; and State Lands Commission, $92,901.

Our State Bureau
SACRAMENTO — Assemblyman Alister McAlister, D-San Jose, Monday will introduce legislation forcing all firms offering liability insurance in California to form a cooperative offering medical malpractice insurance to physicians.

McAlister said his legislation would create a joint underwriting association consisting of all companies authorized to write liability insurance in California. Each member would assume a risk proportionate to their present share of the liability insurance market.

"The rates would be set to guarantee that the association would be self-supporting," McAlister said.

"Excess premiums collected would be returned pro-rata to physicians."

"Initial funding of the association, as well as any deficits, would be assessed to the insurance company members."

"Deficits sustained by the association would be recouped by either an assessment of the physician policyholders or by a prospective rate increase."

"The bill also provides for compensation to the insurance companies of five per cent interest upon their contribution to the plan."

He said huge jury awards in malpractice suits have forced insurance firms either to stop offering malpractice policies or raise premiums beyond the ability of many physicians to pay.

Similar legislation was offered earlier this week by Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach. McAlister said Carpenter's bill would enable existing policies to be reinsured through a "pool" in which a large number of insurance companies would be required to have membership.

"My proposal does not provide for reinsurance, but rather provides for policies to be written directly by the underwriting association to which all liability carriers would belong," he said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Aries (March 21-April 19): A mood of excitement persists throughout this long year of varied episodes. You make excursions into other fields of activity, particularly during a vacation (either real or symbolic). Relationships increase, perhaps claim too much of your energy. Today's natives are practical and thoughtful writers, actors, composers or teachers.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): The personal touch is essential, particularly in promoting career. Be calm cool and collected while everyone else runs around and does the shouting.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Put the idle hands around to work, make sure they aren't empty. An old friend has a confidence to share, take the time to listen. Recheck household accounts.

Cancer (July 21-July 22): The soft sell works again. Don't be skimpy in rationing your work to others, and let them share in the fun and achievements. Clear off an old obligation where possible.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for minor opportunities, rather than major events. Your comments are easily misanderstood since it's easy to overstate your case.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Arrangements are incomplete and exceed expected budgets. Check details as far ahead as your situation permits; choose the simpler way of doing things.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Short-term projects are located. Reach an agreement promptly, then move fast to get the show on the road. Partnerships are tested. Continue plans for personal entertainment.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You and others say much with little to prove it. Offer a clear word to those you love. Let most people come to you, make a note of who does and of the surprises they create.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Praise those who deserve it, but don't criticize or make demands. Settle accounts, collect whatever payments are due you and recover stray or loaned belongings.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): News is good and useful. Study people and their personalities first. The details of your dealings with them come into focus later. You can safely indulge a whim today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are tempted to be strict, even harsh with people under your guidance. Look forward, avoid eyeing changes of direction.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Review living quarters and property arrangements when new information arrives. Be easy on yourself.

Tuttle claim ripped by Cox

Charges fly in 7th Dist. 'last gasp'

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Two candidates Saturday ruffled the heretofore calm waters of campaigning in the Long Beach City Council Seventh District special election Tuesday in a gust of charge and countercharge.

Edward A. Tuttle said he will file charges that Jack Cox is in violation of state law in not filing a campaign disclosure report due in the city clerk's office last Thursday. He said charges would be filed with the California Fair Campaign Practices Commission and the state Attorney General.

Cox's campaign chairman, attorney Harvey Ginns, called the charges "a deliberate smear."

"All necessary disclosure statements required by law have been filed. Additional statements will be filed as and when required. The charges appear to be based simply on an unqualified personal interpretation of the law. We have complied with all provisions and have not been advised by any of the governing agencies of any failure."

Tuttle said Cox filed a "short form report" Thursday "but did not file the updated campaign committee report which would reflect the cumulative totals of money raised and spent to date."

Failure to file the cumulative money report Thursday, and with Monday being a holiday, "voters of the Seventh District will not have an opportunity to know the source of Cox's additional contributors until after they have cast their ballots Tuesday," Tuttle said. "This is a breach of the public trust that cannot be tolerated."

City Clerk Elaine Hamilton declined to speculate on the legal sufficiency of Cox's short-form report and said the expert on the pertinent legislation, Dep. City Atty. Arthur Honda, was unavailable for an opinion. Law bearing on disclosure is contained in Proposition 9, election reform ratified by the state's voters last November.

Tuttle called it an "outrage" that Cox "has spent a horrendous amount of money in this campaign and now is in violation of state law by not filing an updated report."

He said Cox's last report showed he had collected $6,550 of which $4,250 was reportedly contributed by interests in Palm Springs, Studio City, South Pasadena, Gardena and Whittier.

"Cox has failed to meet the other candidates in this election in public dialogue, he has spent thousands of dollars more than all the other candidates combined and now he is slapping the face of the public by not filing this report."

Ginns said Tuttle's declaration that Cox was supported by outside interests is "a callous smear, something that happens late in campaigns and we have to acknowledge that we expected something of that nature to occur. It goes against the grain of most fair-minded citizens and we are sure that the voters of the Seventh District will not be taken in by it."

What makes the charge so ridiculous, Ginns said, "is the great mass of support that Jack Cox has already demonstrated. Cox has the endorsement of the Long Beach Building Trades Council, the Maritime Trades Council, the Long Beach Police Officers Assn., a committee of outstanding lawyers, businessmen and management leaders, the American Gold Star Mothers, Noncertificated School Employees, a special committee of School Teachers, Administrators and Staff Personnel, a Labor Committee, a Senior Citizens Committee and a Westside Residents Committee."

"No other candidate has been able to assemble this type of broad-based community support and it is a particularly despicable act to infer that the candidate is not supported by the voters of the Seventh District when these endorsements say exactly the opposite."

Cox said he would let Ginns' statement stand and that he would put his faith in the judgment of the people of the Seventh District.

Free Fuller tea

Marilyn Fuller, Long Beach City Council candidate, Second District, will have a free, public, meet-the-candidate tea from 2 to 4 p.m. today at 1091 Stanley Ave.

An earlier story erroneously said the teas of her campaign are fundraising events. They are not, she said.

"The purpose is to educate the citizens about government programs, proposals and options as well as to meet the candidate. I do not want persons to feel they cannot meet a candidate for office without donating money."

GOP Juniors

Robert Metzgar, assistant director of public relations, Long Beach Harbor Department, will speak and show a film, "Tomorrow's Port Today" at the 11:30 a.m. Wednesday luncheon meeting of GOP Juniors of Long Beach at Sam's Seafood Restaurant, 16278 Pacific Coast Hwy., Sunset Beach.

Reservations may be made with Vera Robinson at 422-8295.

Lakewood-L.B. GOP

"Information" is the theme of the Friday noon annual membership luncheon of Lakewood-Long Beach Republican Women Federated at Barrington Villa, 201 W. Wardlow Rd.

James H. Gray, outgoing member of the Long Beach Board of Education, will discuss possible financial and legislative projections for the future of education.

Mrs. Lewis Hindley will make an audio-visual presentation, "All About You," an explanation of Republican party operations.

Mrs. Lorin R. Smith, president, said Mrs. Horace Cushing's committee will provide a no-charge salad luncheon at 1 p.m. Reservations may be made at 425-0172.

Evening GOP

The Rev. Claude Bunzel, curator of Independence Hall and Colonial Research Library and minister of the Church of Reflections, Knott's Berry Farm, will speak on "Hope for the Future" for the Long Beach Evening Division, Republican Women Federated at 7:15 p.m. Thursday in the Mercury Savings Building, 4140 Long Beach Blvd.

Nicto endorsed

The League of United Latte American Citizens, a national organization, has endorsed Olivia Nieto for Long Beach City Council, Second District.

Lowell chairmen

Dale Lowell, candidate for Long Beach City Council, Fifth District, announced Orian Landreth and Richard Keen are co-chairmen of his district campaign.

Others named: Tom E. Stewart, finance chairman; Jean B. Stewart, treasurer; LaVerne Mad-dux, volunteer coordinator; Dean Snow, program coordinator; Mrs. Frank Estes, Mrs. Gina Brown and Mrs. Mike Cole, precinct coordinators.

Landreth said Lowell and more than 250 volunteers are walking every precinct to relate the candidate's program and to get out the vote. Landreth commended Lowell's 20 years' experience in dealing directly with the city and its departments.

Fontes honored

Ed Fontes, of Carson, has been named "Democrat of the Year" by the 35th Congressional District Democratic State Central Committee. He is president of the John F. Kennedy Democratic Club, 32nd Congressional District Democratic Council and is active in the Democratic Caucus Steering Committee and Harbor Area Ethnic Political Coalition.

Fontes also was honored by resolutions from Congressman Glenn M. Anderson, D-Harbor City; State Sen. Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, and Assemblymen Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, and Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro.

Branch president

Mrs. David Branch has been elected 1975 president of 32nd Congressional District Republican Women Federated. Other officers are: Mrs. Chester Wallgren, first vice president; Mrs. M.R. Beatty, second; Mrs. Cloyce Gott-hold, third; Mrs. Lucille Pearce, corresponding secretary; Miss Mildred Marlatt, treasurer, and Miss Frances Bellman, auditor.

Le Febvre named

Ann LeFebvre has been installed president of the New Frontier Democratic Club; Maxine Elvert, first vice president; Winnifred Edwards, second; Velma Jutkins, secretary; Joy Dowell, treasurer, and Gertrude Hughes, corresponding secretary. Lana Phelan, Second District Long Beach City Council candidate, was the installing officer.

Lakewood Demos

Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, has installed new officers of the Lakewood Democratic Club: Mary Langlois, president; Joy Dowell, vice president; Fran Smith, treasurer; Virginia Wisniewski, corresponding secretary; Rae Payne, recording secretary; Dea Langlois, legislation; Ruth Smith, hospitality, and Leatrice Brazeau, programs.

Credit for singles

State Sen. Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, has coauthored a bill that prohibits lenders from denying credit to persons because they are unmarried.

Kennick said the bill, introduced by Assemblyman Howard Berman, D-Sherman Oaks, is designed primarily to close loopholes in the recent credit law protecting women from credit discrimination.

The coauthors said the legislation does not attempt "to prevent creditors from looking at the real credit risk. The sole intention is to prohibit discrimination based upon capricious distinctions."

Earnings limit

Congressman Charles H. Wilson, D-Hawthorne, has cosponsored legislation to eliminate the Social Security earnings limitation.

He said the "punitive provision" of current law reducing benefits proportionately when senior citizens earn above $2,400 a year, was not in the original Social Security Act. "This penalizes older Americans who choose to work while those who earn income from stocks, bonds and real estate are not subject to the earning limitation."

POLICE BEAT

Following is a roundup of recent police activity in Long Beach and other Southland cities. Major crime stories and accounts of court cases may be found throughout the newspaper.

Scaffolding gives way; 2 men killed

Two men were killed and two others injured Friday at an El Segundo Standard Oil Co. refinery when the scaffolding they were on gave way and the men plummeted 40 feet to the ground, police said.

Officers refused to release the names of the two dead men pending notification of next of kin. One of the surviving men received serious injuries and the other had minor injuries, police said.

The men, who were iron workers for an Alhambra steel construction firm, were building refinery equipment when one end of the scaffold gave way, investigators said.

They were taken to Hawthorne Community Hospital, police said.

stolen from the home of David V. Thomas when a burglar shattered a glass door to gain entry, then ransacked the house, police reported Saturday.

Officers said Thomas told them he and his wife returned home Friday night to find every room in their house, which adjoins their antique store, ransacked and several valuable items missing.

Thomas said the missing items included an 18-carat gold, 36-jewel minute repeater musical watch made in Geneva, Switzerland and valued at $5,000; a European bracelet valued at $2,000; two women's watches, one valued at $225 and the other valued at $175; and $168 in cash.

Teen-ager on bike fires gun at house

A teen-ager riding a 10-speed bicycle took what apparently was a "pot shot" at a Long Beach residence, then quickly rode off up the street, police reported Saturday.

Officers said there were no injuries in the shooting, which occurred at about 7:20 p.m. Friday at the home of Olivia Garrett, 33, of 6065 Delta Ave.

Investigators said Mrs. Garrett told them she was talking on the telephone when she heard what sounded like a gunshot. A maintenance man working nearby told officers he saw a youth about 15 or 16 fire the shot into the house with a handgun.

Investigators said they discovered what appeared to be a bullet hole in the east living room window at the house. They said they knew of no motive for the shooting but that it probably was a "pot shot."

Youth grabs blind woman's purse

Betty Williams, 49, of Long Beach, told police that she was walking with her father in front of her home when a man about 19 or 20 grabbed her purse from behind and fled down the street with it.

Ms. Williams, who is blind, said her father saw the thief get into a car with two other youths and speed away. She told officers her purse contained identification, credit cards and $62 in cash.

'Buckner's world' a maelstrom of financial crises

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Deadbeats.
Welfare chiselers.
People who don't want to work.
They may exist, but not in Bill Buckner's world.

Dr. Buckner, who runs the Financial Crisis Clinic at Long Beach State University, sees people every day with no jobs, little money and frightening debts.

And while each case is different, the majority want to pay off their debts and be able to support themselves again, he said.

"Some are having problems because they were too generous," he said. "One guy cosigned for a loan for his brother and the brother couldn't pay back. Another put his home on the line so his neighbor could bail his son out of jail. The son jumped bail."

But the more common clients of the clinic are persons who were getting along fine on a regular income and suddenly found that income cut off. Men who were laid off from their jobs. And women whose husbands died.

This year's economic crunch hasn't changed the nature of the problems. There are just more of them.

In fact, there are so many people with money troubles that the clinic has more business than it can handle.

It has served more than 2,000 persons in the last four years. The counseling is free.

Buckner does the counseling at the Long Beach Legal Aid office and the college home economics department. Although he teaches classes related to financial counseling, he donates his time to the clinic. Many of his students also do voluntary work for the clinic, gaining experience that will prepare them for jobs after graduation.

Buckner is a lawyer who directed the Long Beach Legal Aid office for four years, but neither he nor his students give legal advice.

They don't tell clients what to do about their debts. They do lay out the alternatives.

"Our clients are often going under because of money owed for loans, taxes, legal bills, merchandise bought on time and special problems like paying costs from an auto accident when they didn't have insurance," he said.

"We sit down and brainstorm with them to see if they've done everything they can to come up with some more money to meet their obligations."

Clients are often in trouble because they don't understand how "the system" operates, Buckner said.

Many want to declare bankruptcy, particularly since bankruptcies are on the rise and recent magazine articles have made it sound so attractive. But, according to Buckner, there's almost always a better alternative.

"I'm often accused of helping deadbeats," he said, "but it isn't their fault that they don't understand the system. Society hasn't provided much help."

He said most Americans seem to assume that no one gets in financial trouble unless he's irresponsible and wants to sponge off others. At least they assume that until they get in trouble themselves.

Or they mistakenly think that the government social programs put in operation in the last decade take care of everyone.

"There's no single reason why these things happen to people," Buckner said. "But it's usually a little foolishness, a large lack of information and perhaps a catastrophe thrown in."

He concedes that many people do purchase too many nonessentials, live desperately from paycheck to paycheck or get in over their heads in credit buying.

But in a society rife with bad economic advice—and constant advertising and social pressures to buy everything in sight—it's not surprising that people find themselves in trouble.

What is surprising is that so many "live on the edge of the pit of financial despair," he said. "When they fall in the pit they're almost always shocked."

"We let people know they're on the edge of the pit and help them move back from it if they want to. You can't deny the existence of the pit, but it's your choice how far you want to be from it."

When Buckner talks about people with money troubles, he stresses case histories where unforeseen circumstances have been the main problem.

He talks of women whose husbands have suddenly died—or died after prolonged, expensive hospitalization—who face large debts with scant resources. Of hard-working executives or laborers who were making plenty of money—and perhaps living a bit beyond their means—who are laid off and unable to find new work to pay their bills.

"Most people who lose their jobs feel horrible," he said. "They can't meet obligations they've always been able to meet before. Then the bill collectors descend."

"Some people come in worrying about going to jail. They don't know the difference between criminal activity and innocent inability to pay."

Buckner said that there are few places that such people can go for free, or even inexpensive, advice. Although a few other colleges and community service agencies have picked up Buckner's ideas, there are no Financial Crisis Clinics in most cities.

Besides his professional credentials as an accountant and lawyer, Buckner is in a good position to sympathize with people with financial troubles. He had them once himself.

He grew up in Watts, struggled to get through four years at UCLA and graduated in 1955. That was before the days of civil rights legislation, and there was no place for an educated black man in American society.

Unable to get a job, he joined the Army and served as a clerk-typist. When he got out, he still couldn't get a job. But because of his excellent academic record and the GI bill, he could get into law school.

When he graduated with a law degree in 1960, old racial barriers were starting to come down.

He went to work in the state attorney general's office, then moved into private practice.

"But I hated to hassle people about paying me," he said. "So I jumped at the chance to go to work for Legal Aid in Long Beach in 1966."

After giving guest lectures at LBSU, he was invited to become a full-time professor at the college.

He'd like to expand the clinic to handle more clients. He needs secretarial help.

But Buckner, who says he's already put some of his own money into the clinic, just can't afford it.

Young violinist on way

From Carson to Carnegie

By BOB ANDREW

Charles Veal will make the transition from Carson's Carnegie Junior High School to New York's Carnegie Hall in four months.

Veal, at 22 an outstanding young violinist with a range from the classics to improvisational jazz, is guest soloist for the Carson Contemporary Symphony Orchestra's next free concert Feb. 23, which necessitates his rehearsing in the music room at Carnegie Junior High.

As a member of the Young Artists Trio, he will also appear June 5 in concert at Carnegie Hall in New York City as part of the trio's East Coast tour.

A native of New Orleans, Veal acquired his early musical background by familial osmosis from his father and grandfather. Veal's father is jazz guitarist Earnest McLean, best known as the accompanist for singer Nancy Wilson.

At age 7, Veal moved to Los Angeles and obtained his first formal violin training as a junior high school student in the Los Angeles Unified School District. He has since earned his bachelor of music at USC with a one-year detour as a scholarship student to the University of Dijon, France, to cap his French studies for a bachelor of arts in foreign languages.

Presently Veal is giving individual instruction in violin at USC. Since Pete Quesada, founder and conductor of the Carson orchestra, has an afternoon program of classical music on KUSC, the university's FM radio station, he might easily have met Veal on campus—but their acquaintance had stranger beginnings.

Two days before the December concert by the Carson Symphony, a member of the second violin section became seriously ill. Another orchestra suggested Veal as a replacement who could sit in at the last moment without even having had time to rehearse with the full orchestra.

Quesada was so impressed by Veal's ability that—after a few minutes conversation about his background—he asked Veal to return as guest soloist for the next concert and scheduled Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 3 in G Major and the "Winter" segment of Vivaldi's Four Seasons to display his talents.

Also included in the concert, which will be held in the main lobby of the Nissan Motors Building at 182nd and Figueroa streets in Carson, are Beethoven's First Symphony in C Major and Haydn's

CHARLES VEAL TUNES UP FOR CARSON CONCERT

"Farewell" Symphony No. 45 in F Minor.

One of the strangest aspects of Veal's impromptu performance at the December concert was that he was available.

His list of commitments includes the Young Artist Trio which he organized nearly three years ago with cellist Ron Cooper and pianist Roger Neal, being concert master of the Young Musicians Orchestra, the Westside (Los Angeles) Symphony and the Compton Symphony, and a member of the first violin section of the All Southern California Honor Orchestra and the Los Angeles Symphonica under Roger Wagner. In his spare time, Veal plays a wide variety of "commercial" dates performing the sound tracks for motion picture or television work.

With that variety of experience, Veal was asked to evaluate the Carson orchestra.

"I was shocked," he declared after the first rehearsal of the Mozart concerto. Then, realizing that statement was subject to two interpretations, he added:

"I mean that it was so good for a two-year-old community orchestra."

Pressed further, Veal ranked the Carson group "among the top 10 of perhaps 50 community orchestras" in the Los Angeles area.

Mozart's music has often been compared to lacework since every note is exposed like delicate threads. Veal ranks this concerto as "one of my favorites by Mozart" because both soloist and orchestra have to be "clean, even transparent, you have to play on your toes."

Since he has the ability to perform on a more professional level, Veal was asked why he consented to appear with the Carson—and other—community orchestras.

"Mainly because I love classical music and this gives me a chance to perform the classics and express my interpretation of them," he said.

But that expression requires a close working relationship with the conductor, also.

"Absolutely delighted," Quesada summed up his feeling about Veal. "He knows exactly what he wants and how to get it. After a few conversations at the house, I knew what to ask of the orchestra to blend properly with him."

On the second run through of the Mozart work last Thursday even the night sounds around the school grounds seemed to blend in perfectly.

There is a section at the end of the Minuet where the violins must play in perfect unison with a sweet "toom-toom-toom," according to Quesada. That was when the fire drill bell sounded, going "bong-bong-bong" perfectly on beat.

The law school with a chance

By KATHIE ESTELLE
Staff Writer

The small living room at 236 Newport Ave. doesn't look like the headquarters of a law school.

But it is, and the school's graduates include Long Beach City Prosecutor Robert Parkin and former county public defender Charles Gangloff who received degrees from the U.S. Naval Academy and Harvard University before attending it.

Pacific Coast University, which has been open since 1927, embodies an almost unique concept among law schools. Beginning students must be at least 25 years old with some experience at supporting themselves or a family.

They attend classes three nights a week from 6:30 to 10:10 at Wilson High School. The curriculum takes four years instead of the normal three, but PCU students don't mind that. For most of them, the university is the only chance they have to become lawyers.

"The only reason for our existence is to open up the field of law to capable people who couldn't afford to attend a normal school," says Carl Manson, the school's 72-year-old dean who has operated PCU for the last 30 years.

Tuition of $5,000 a year is normal for regular schools, he points out. At PCU students pay $385 a year plus a little more than $100 for books. The low fees have made Manson's Newport Avenue home a center for bus drivers, policemen, accountants and others who want to become lawyers.

The university admits only 50 students a year, he says, in order to insure personalized instruction. "It's been my experience that some people learn slower than others, but they sometimes make better lawyers," he explains.

Manson's experience includes degrees from law schools at the University of Michigan and Harvard University, studying under former Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter and teaching stints at his alma maters, Ohio Northern University, Loyola University in Los Angeles.

He is currently coauthoring a "Civil Procedures Thesaurus" with William Peck, retired Long Beach chief deputy county clerk.

The PCU faculty includes Gangloff, and his wife Joanne who also graduated from the school, Paul Strader, a veteran of the Nuremberg trials, and Robert Ossen, a deputy city attorney.

Students and alumni are planning a testimonial banquet for Manson, March 8 at the Edgewater Hyatt House.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

VAUDEVILLE isn't dead—it merely disappeared into the wings of time to join Joe Linden and his "Kitchen Players."

When last I saw Joe and his happy bunch of amateur singers and dancers they were knocking them in the aisles in the auditorium of the First United Methodist Church, Fifth Street and Pacific Avenue. The SRO sign was up at the auditorium, which houses the Senior Neighborhood Center.

The "Kitchen Players" are performers who'll never see 40 again, unless it's on the second time around. But Joe Linden and his troupe are lively at an age when many of their juniors get their kicks by hanging around used car lots to watch chrome rust.

At Joe's behest, I tore myself away from the used car lot where I get my jollies long enough to catch the "Kitchen Players" in action at the First United Methodist Church. Joe's talent as an impresario is exceeded only by his powers of salesmanship.

"The Independent, Press-Telegram has had several stories about the players," Joe said, "but no one from the newspaper has ever reviewed us."

"Save one orchestra seat on the aisle, Joe," I said. "I'll be there with bells on."

"Just so long as it's not with Liberty bells on," Joe said. "The Liberty bell is cracked."

"Some people think I'm cracked, too, Joe," I said, hoping he would consider the riposte as an audition for a part in his show.

"Have your agent find you some new material," Joe said. "You've got 10 per cent of nothing."

As a would-be actor who opened and closed the same day in the Civic Light Opera's production of "Cabaret," I know rejection when I hear it. It was obvious that Joe Linden wanted me out of show business and in the newspaper business so I could review his show. Which is exactly what I did.

The "Kitchen Players" combine the best ingredients of South & Dale, burlesque, an English music hall and a split week in Altoona.

Five minutes after the curtain went up at 11 a.m. I knew it was going to be a fun show. A tingle ran through the audience, chasing the blues away. The last time I saw a tingle run through an audience was when I interviewed Tempest Storm in 1949. As I recall the interview took place somewhere between the gloves and a diaphanous veil and occurred at the Fox Theater in Indianapolis.

But I digress. Let us return to the footlights where four strawhatted male vocalists are zipping into "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella," while a chorus line of nine—count 'em—cuties twirls multicolored umbrellas to incite an audience sing-along.

Steve Kendrick, baritone supreme, is next up, rendering "Every Day Is Ladies' Day with Me." Rogue that he is, Steve fills out the days of the week by inviting seven chorus girls to join him at the microphone.

Personally, I had an eye on Wednesday. But don't tell my wife.

Steve returns for a Bavarian song-and-clog with captivating Marie Wallace. This sets the stage for "Only a Rose," a voyage on the high C's of romance by soprano Virginia Schillemore.

The acts come faster and faster. "The Five Linden Sisters" rub the sleep out of the eyes of "Mr. Sandman." And the audience is wide awake to receive Steve's encore of "I Believe."

Contralto Dorothy McPherson fouls off "She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage," with three straight pitches, all of them on key, and somewhere out in tinseland Beatrice Kay petitions for equal time.

Women in the audience swoon as tenor Peter Brogna wraps his tonsils around "Today," tasting strawberries and drinking sweet wine with every note.

The kazooes come out as the chorus girls syncope on "She May Have Seen Better Days." Pianist-accompanist Eleanor Thomsen's fingers fly over the keyboard and the auditorium is jumping to the excitement of a hit production.

All this and skits, too. Joe Linden and his 16-member company have done it again. But Joe and his coproducer, his wife Rosa, aren't resting on their oars. Even now they are scouting for more talent, amateurs to be trained in show biz.

Eat your heart out, David Merrick. In the "Kitchen Players," Long Beach has the theater's toughest ticket—and every month a brand new show.

Editorial

Our choice: Montgomery

In a special election Tuesday, voters in the seventh councilmanic district in Long Beach will choose among 21 men and women who seek to represent the district on the city council.

Some of the candidates are obviously well qualified. Some obviously have only minimal qualifications.

Of those whose qualifications go well beyond a desire for office and some background in civic work, one stands out.

THAT CANDIDATE is Travis Montgomery.

He is a dynamic leader with a superlative record of civic involvement and civic achievement.

He has an impressive background in business, in civic activities and in government service.

This newspaper urges his election.

AS PRESIDENT of the Los Altos Management Co. and administrative head of the Los Altos Shopping Center, Montgomery is a businessman of proved capability. His business leadership has been demonstrated in other posts as well. He has been president of Sales and Marketing Executives of Long Beach and of the Building Owners and Managers Association. He has been director of the Los Altos Business Association and of Sales and Marketing Executives International.

A native of Long Beach and a lifelong resident here, the 33-year-old Montgomery has been generous with his energies and talents in civic causes. He was a director and executive committee member of United Way. He has been president of the Long Beach branch of the American Cancer Society. He has been board chairman of the Lakewood First Presbyterian Church, a trustee of St. Mary's Hospital, and a member of the Salvation Army advisory council. He has served on advisory committees of the Long Beach Unified School District, and he has been a director of the Long Beach Council of the Boy Scouts. He has been active in the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, the Civic Light Opera Association and the Regional Arts Council.

MONTGOMERY HAS a working knowledge of city government as well.

At Long Beach State University, his major field of study was public administration. He has served our community as a member of the planning commission, as chairman of the redevelopment agency and as acting chairman of Long Beach Beautiful. He has been on the district attorney's advisory council.

Nor is his feeling for the community expressed only in service on boards of directors and in public office. Many of those he would serve as councilman know him from his work as head of Long Beach Beautiful when he personally participated in painting and repairing residences in the Seventh District for those who were unable to do the work themselves.

Montgomery represents no narrow view of city government. Of all the candidates, he seems to us to be the one who could work best with fellow council members of all shades of opinion and all approaches to municipal government's responsibilities and opportunities.

BECAUSE OF that, we think, he has a strong potential for becoming a vital leader on a progressive city council.

"City government," he said recently, "must create a healthy climate for increased public safety, improved recreation, new jobs and better business opportunities in this district. Farsighted redevelopment can reduce crime, improve living conditions and increase employment opportunity."

The Seventh District and the city of Long Beach would be served faithfully, imaginatively and dynamically by Montgomery.

We urge Seventh District voters to mark their ballots for Travis Montgomery on Tuesday.

The forgotten candidates

WASHINGTON — The presidential election campaign of 1976 has already started — over a year before the first primary in New Hampshire, 18 months before the nominating conventions, and almost 21 months before the final voting.

If there is any logic to a campaign of this length, it is that it gives new candi-

Vance of New York, and John Gardner, the present head of Common Cause.

It also excludes, for other reasons — some of them valid — distinguished members of the Supreme Court of the United States such as Potter Stewart of Ohio and Byron White of Colorado, whose abilities are different but do not suffer in comparison to the talents of many men now being mentioned for the presidency.

THERE ARE obviously good reasons for saying that the presidency is a political office that should be left to politicians, and specifically, for discouraging Supreme Court judges from seeking the presidency, but given the qualities and ages of the men likely to be nominated by the two major parties, it cannot be entirely silly to look around fairly soon for some talented "outsiders."

This, of course, involves personal comparisons, which may be "odious," but in the end all elections inevitably involve comparisons which are odious to a great many people. The only point being raised here is whether it is in the national interest for the American people merely to wait around until they are given a choice they probably won't like, and then grumble that they were gypped or even deceived.

Are the people sovereign or not? Should they choose between the best candidates available in the republic or only the candidates the parties choose to put before them? If they have to endure an 18-month campaign, should they not at least look over the field and discuss the citizens of presidential stature, regardless of whether such men and women are "running" and listed in the popularity polls?

GOP leaders hit industry abuses

SACRAMENTO — It is still a fundamental tenet of Republican faith that the health of the nation is directly related to the health of business, but some GOP leaders have recently been expressing an attitude toward business not normally associated with the party.

Even Ronald Reagan, whose flexible philosophy permitted him to criticize government regulations that inhibited business while accepting those that protected profits, has begun speaking with a consistency some businessmen might find disturbing.

LATE LAST YEAR, as his eight-year term as governor was nearing its end, Reagan delivered a speech in San Francisco that included familiar phrases.

"Private business and industry is the most over-regulated, overtaxed and under-appreciated part of America's society," he said, and "unnecessary restrictions, red tape and regulations are robbing the people of the prosperity that is rightfully theirs."

But, he told his businessman audience, "It is time to ask ourselves: Do we really believe in the free market? Or have we grown so soft we no longer relish its rugged competitiveness? Do we believe in closed cartels, a controlled economy where government sets the price the producer will get for his product and the price the consumer will pay? And if there is any slippage on either end of the transaction, government puts up the difference in the form of a subsidy paid for by the consumers and the taxpayers."

A MONTH LATER, in another speech to business executives, he returned to the theme of government's interference with free enterprise, with a qualification.

"Let's face it," he said, "business itself in America has contributed to its own problems by turning more and more to government every time a problem pops up."

"Government is always ready to oblige, with a little more help and a tax increase. Business must recognize that government help leads to partnership, with government the senior partner every time."

And now, in a recent article with his byline in the conservative publication Human Events, he called for the federal and state governments to take a "hard look" at fair trade laws, which set price minimums liberal critics contend stifle competition and serve only to maximize profits.

REAGAN IS not the only Republican suggesting that business must examine its attitudes.

Senate minority leader George Deukmejian of Long Beach must have raised an eyebrow or two in the audience last November when he told the California Manufacturers' Association that business "must strive for a new image which places profit secondary to public needs if industry hopes to recapture public endorsement of the free enterprise system."

The consumer, Deukmejian said, has become "an aroused, if sometimes misinformed, crusader against corporate giants. Big business can no longer count on being given the benefit of the doubt, particularly oil companies with their shortages and huge profits; auto manufacturers who continue to hike prices but refuse to build smog-free, low-gas-mileage, safe cars; sugar refiners who hit the consumer in the pocketbook with quadruple prices and matching profits; and cattlemen who slaughter cows before a battery of TV cameras while many people in this country go hungry."

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

PAUL HAERLE, a former member of the Reagan administration who recently began a two-year term as chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, startled newsmen immediately after his election by picking up a frequent liberal complaint about "welfare for the wealthy."

"Too often Republicans get caught up in philosophical inconsistencies," Haerle said. "If we are against — as we should be against — ever-increasing welfare rolls, then we ought also to be consistent against the tax burdens being levied against us for subsidies."

"One is as bad as the other."

THE CONCEPT of business regulation by government has a Catch 22-like flaw. Some business elements abused the principle of free enterprise by smothering competition, and abused customers by cheating them and selling them unsafe products.

So government stepped in to provide protection, and regulating became an industry itself, committing abuses as harmful as those it was trying to prevent. If big business heeds the recent words of Republican leaders like Reagan, Deukmejian and Haerle, and Democratic leaders are equally forceful about government abuses, a way out of the Catch 22 dilemma might yet be found.

Letters to the editor

Protection needed

EDITOR:

On Feb. 8 I read an article in our paper about welfare workers wanting some kind of protection on the job. Believe me, they need it.

I spent one day there last November. My daughter had an emergency operation, which took three doctors and 10 days in the hospital and ran up a bill of nearly $4,000. So I went to apply for Medi-Cal.

The morning was uneventful, but in the afternoon a man came in, lay down on four chairs, started yelling about how great it was to be high on grass, singing and using obscene language. A girl was using the pay phone. He went up and took the phone from her. At one time he was chinning himself on the partition between the receptionist and people waiting in line and yelling at the women walking by.

I kept thinking they'd call the police, but apparently no one did.

Finally one man went up to him and told him to stop using filthy language. He then ripped off his jacket and started shoving the man all over the room. I thought of calling the police myself but was afraid to go up to the phone.

At the same time, an old man was stumbling all over the room, so drunk he couldn't stand.

I was finally interviewed and left and it was still going on.

I told my husband, and I was really scared, so he went for the next interview, but I thought at the time about the people working there and having to put up with that bedlam every day. I think I would find a safer job. They really need some kind of protection.

Entrapment?

EDITOR:

My heart bleeds for the heads of city government and for the lawmakers. City Manager John Mansell was arrested. So was Assemblyman Mike Cullen. They claim they were trapped.

Mr. Mansell has got the FBI on his case. Mr. Cullen was allowed to take his blood test on his own after he was released from jail. I wonder if we ordinary citizens could get treatment like that.

I can prove I was trapped outside my bar. Many of my customers have been, too.

Welfare walkout

EDITOR:

This is in regard to the threatened welfare walkout.

I am a working mother and receive a supplement check to make ends meet. Recently I had to make the dreaded trip to the welfare office to find out the cause of my belated check. It is no wonder welfare recipients are rude. I stood in line for 20 minutes, lost time and money from job for something that could have been taken care of by phone, I'm sure. As I got closer to the window, I saw the receptionists talking about their weekends and smoking and in general goofing off.

When I got to the window and told the girl my name, she asked me to spell it twice. Now anyone who works for the county and cannot even spell "Patsy" shouldn't have the job in the first place.

I feel if they worked a little faster instead of goofing off, they wouldn't get verbally abused.

Let's hear Ziegler

EDITOR:

In your editorial "Ziegler's lecture tour" (Feb. 3) you said that if you were a university student you would prefer a Marx Brothers film festival to anything Ron Ziegler, now on the college lecture circuit, might say.

I as a university student think Mr. Ziegler has a great deal to offer: His view of Watergate would obviously correlate somewhat with that of his former boss and so give us an idea of how Richard Nixon reacted to the affair.

This personal aspect of Watergate up till now has been the only area not exhausted, and I for one would pay Ziegler to hear about it.

Library fund cut

EDITOR:

I was very saddened to learn that the city council is cutting back funds to libraries in the Long Beach area.

I feel very strongly about the things in the community that influence a young person. These libraries are so situated in Long Beach as to cater to the needs of young people. The books, phonographs and other services help a child to learn about the world he lives in, help him to broaden his horizons.

The fact that there is so much money being spent on juvenile delinquency and the budget being cut back to libraries doesn't seem fair to a young person growing up. It is hard enough for a child to grow up in this fast-paced society as it is.

Fiddling Democrats

EDITOR:

Nero fiddled while Rome burned. For more than 40 years our Democratic Congress, led by various presidents, has fiddled with our war-inflated economy.

Congress, like a quack doctor, has treated our problems with massive doses of magic cures with an ever-increasing demand for more money to waste. We received an overdose at the November elections.

Our problems have turned into cancer. The quack has no cure. Will it be terminal cancer?

It looks like we the people have been swindled by the greatest pigeon drop in history.

Try changing places

EDITOR:

I read with alarmed interest that some of the civil service workers may walk off the job because of the verbal abuse.

In all fairness, a small percentage of these people do a fine job. But an even larger amount act as though the money paid to those out of work was from their own pockets.

I think the finest hour for the taxpayers would be for the majority of these workers to take a hike and sit on the other side of the desk for a while. They just might learn to respect other people.

dates time to get known, and gives the parties, the press, and the people time to think about the qualities required in a president during the last years of the seventies.

THERE IS little evidence now, however, that the people are thinking much about the kind of man they want or need in the White House after the next election, or that many new men of presidential stature are coming forward to challenge the nominating system that gave us a choice between Richard Nixon and George McGovern in 1972.

The conventional wisdom, now as usual, is that the man or woman must seek the office and not the other way around, that only established politicians, preferably from the United States Senate, are qualified to be president, and that the people, like it or not, which they usually don't, must wait and choose between the candidates who have enough confidence, vanity, and money to make the race. This rules out experienced, intelligent, and attractive former Cabinet officers like Elliott Richardson of Massachusetts, Cyrus

WEEKLY WORLD

"Sometimes, I wish we were back in the pre-lib days, when men weren't supposed to show their emotions!"

Fuel oil price conspiracy probed

WASHINGTON — Behind the relentless rise in fuel oil prices, federal investigators are uncovering a gigantic conspiracy which one prosecutor has called "the rip-off of the century."

Evidence is being laid before criminal grand juries that major oil companies, distributors and shippers have fraudulently jacked up fuel oil prices.

"The deeper we get into it," a prosecutor told us, "the more we find."

THE LONG-SUFFERING consumers, of course, are stuck with the higher utility bills. Already, the rising costs of fuel oil have added $2 billion to utility rates.

This produces a snowball effect as manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers down the line add their extra fuel costs to the price of their products.

At the end of the line are the consumers who pay more not only for their home heating but for the manufactured goods they buy.

The amount the conspiracy is costing the public probably can never be calculated. But both federal and state prosecutors are beginning to crack down. Indictments are likely in Boston, Houston, Jacksonville, Los Angeles, New York City and Philadelphia.

AT FIRST, the Federal Energy Administration tried to confine the federal investigation to civil action. Complained one frustrated federal enforcer tersely: "They didn't want to rock the oil industry."

The showdown came a few weeks ago behind closed doors at the Justice Department. Participating in the dispute were officials from the FEA, the Treasury's Customs Service and the Justice Department's civil and criminal divisions.

The FEA representatives favored civil sanctions to deal with the price gougers. But customs officials contended that the best way to end the utility spiral would be to jail a few oil industry figures.

The officials also criticized the FEA for protecting the oil interests. As one official put it: "Customs got tough on FEA."

FOLLOWING this crucial meeting, the Justice Department authorized Customs' 800 agents to prepare cases for criminal indictments. The FEA agreed to cooperate.

Customs has now laid out its prosecution plan in a detailed memo and has dispatched it under tight classification to its key regional offices. The case is summarized in an internal document, which we have obtained.

"The price of residual fuel oil," states the summary, "rose from about $2.50 per barrel in early 1973 to over $11 per barrel by the end of 1973. At the height of the oil crisis, some companies were paying in excess of $20 per barrel."

The dramatic rise allegedly was spurred by a number of fraudulent practices. It is suspected, for example, that the sources of the fuel oil may have been "falsified in some instances to enable importers to add on various overcharges to the base price of oil."

OF COURSE, the public utilities passed on the overcharges, states the summary, "directly to the consumer of electric power by adding fuel adjustment charges to electric bills." The customs agents, according to the memo, are also investigating "sales through affiliates, addition of nonexistent host government taxes and royalties, manipulations of freight rates and other similar devices to raise the price of oil."

The data prepared for grand jury presentation show that, in many cases, six or more dummy corporations were set up for major fuel oil transactions. Each dummy jacked up the price a little more until oil costing $5.50 a barrel was sold to public utilities for as high as $25 a barrel.

In one case, a single company set up multiple firms in such a way that it wound up selling the oil to itself at an inflated price. The huge increase was passed on to the utility company and thence to the consumers.

IN ANOTHER case, the utility purchasing agent allegedly got kickbacks for buying overpriced oil.

There is considerable evidence, too, of mixing cheap and expensive, high- and low-sulphur oil. This mixed or mislabeled oil has come from such a variety of countries as Algeria, Angola, Dutch Antilles, Jamaica, Libya, Nigeria, Trinidad and Venezuela.

The mixing took place, according to the evidence, sometimes at refiners in these countries and sometimes at sea. The purpose usually was to jack up prices but also to get low-sulphur content into high-sulphur oil so it would meet U.S. environmental restrictions.

Within the last few days, customs agents have made some astonishing breakthroughs. What at first looked like a probe of 30 small companies in 40 ports of entry is now focusing on several major oil companies. An indictment of one giant firm or its officers is now considered likely by federal prosecutors.

"We're subpoenaing papers faster than they can burn them," said one enthusiastic prosecutor. Other prosecutors called this a figure of speech. There was no reason to believe, they said, that evidence was being buried.

SOME EVIDENCE has come from shipboard and port informers who tell of wholesale forging of vouchers at sea to convince the utilities that the oil cost more than it did. Other vital evidence has come from federal inspectors who have been sampling the oil at ports of entry.

As the Treasury memo explains it: "Customs laboratories will be analyzing those samples and comparing them with so-called (oil) fingerprints to determine if the sources of oil are properly declared."

Meanwhile, several major cases are in the making.

Footnote: The FEA denied to us that it has dragged its feet on the residual oil crisis. A spokesman said the agency has 30 men working on "Project Escalator," a study of price gouging in sales to utilities. Formal action is expected in March, he said.

For cars, a modest proposal

NEW YORK — The facts seem to be that while America can no longer live with the automobile, it also can no longer live without it.

Unless we give it up, it will destroy the cities, ravage the countryside, poison the air and bankrupt the nation with its insatiable thirst for petroleum, for which, the bankers tell us, we will eventually have to transfer our entire national income to Arabia.

IF WE DO give it up, doom arrives by other routes. Because the automobile industry is the keystone of the economy, economists assure us, closing it down would bring collapse not only in Detroit but in dozens of other cities which make the stuff used to make the cars. Steel, rubber, asphalt, concrete, machine tools and drive-in hamburger, banking, fried-chicken and burial-plot-sales chains are just a few of the most obvious industries that would fail.

Which way do we prefer to take our catastrophe? It is a dilemma. President Nixon must have felt that he was faced with a similarly hopeless selection of choices when John Dean told him there was a cancer growing on his presidency. He chose inertia by staying with the cover-up.

The Ford administration has also chosen inertia for dealing with the automobile cancer. Its aim is to keep the auto industry going as long as possible on the Nixonian hope that something will turn up before the country goes broke and the last oil well goes dry.

IF THE policies of the Ford government had been in force in 1900, we would not confront this dilemma. We would still be riding in buggies and have two horses in the garage on the theory that it would be a national disaster to let the horse-and-buggy industry collapse.

The same kind of reasoning in the 1850's would have kept us reading by whale-oil lamps, at least until the whales ran out, which they are now, like the fossil oil, threatening to do. New Bedford and Nantucket might still be great industrial centers, rather than Detroit and Akron, although it is likelier that by this time — by 70 or 80 years ago, in fact — the country would have died of acute stultification brought on by excessive government resistance to reality.

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

Comparing the auto industry to the horse-and-buggy and whaling industries will bring superior smiles from economists. It is silly, they will say, to compare industries of an undeveloped country to an industry that is the linchpin of a highly advanced economic system.

IF THIS IS so, if the car is absolutely essential to American economic survival, then the reason for the car's existence has changed fundamentally from the days when Henry Ford put farmers on wheels. Its chief job is no longer to move people about — that can now be done faster and cheaper in other ways — but to keep the economy from collapsing.

The car has become an economic tool, like coinage, stock exchanges, the Federal Reserve System, banks. Once we approach the car from this perspective, the unhappy dilemma vanishes.

Prosperity, according to Detroit, hinges on the sale of 10 million new cars per year. Catastrophe results not from manufacture and sale of these cars, but from the costs of operating them. If Detroit can make and sell the cars, we can prosper, so long as we don't have to buy petroleum for them or let them turn the cities into parking lots and the atmosphere into an execution chamber.

THE SOLUTION is simply for the government to buy Detroit's annual production and dump it into the oceans on delivery. Thus we preserve the automobile industry, keep the economy booming and escape economic and ecological disaster.

To the conservative objection that this puts government too heavily into industry we need only point out that government has pursued the identical policy for years with the armaments industry, with only negligible protests from pacifists and eccentric liberals. Indeed, if the government elected to dump Detroit's 10 million cars per year from high altitudes on bumptious enemies of the free world, the program might easily be justified as part of the defense budget.

Political justification can easily be found. It always is when the government wants to find a way, and the need now is extreme. America desperately needs automobiles, and it needs desperately to keep them off the streets.

What detente means in world affairs

Sen. Henry Jackson expresses great pride in having Congress attach to the trade pact with Russia a provision that it would not be effective unless Russia allowed all its Jewish population the right to leave that country. The Russians rejected the trade pact on the basis of refusing to allow the United States to influence its domestic policies. It was a reduction of the detente policies that had greatly improved the relationship between the two countries.

The term detente, according to Webster's dictionary, is given as "to relax — unwind." It is a condition of relaxation between two persons or two nations so they can negotiate with less friction and greater appreciation of each other's problems. In the 1972 trade pact under President Nixon this had been achieved. Then in 1974 Senator Jackson — a presidential candidate — was able to get the Jewish issue involved and had Congress amend the trade pact to indicate the Soviets changing their attitude on this issue.

ONE VIEW expressed is that detente is a two-way street. We must recognize the fact that much as we would like to aid the Russian Jewish cause it is an internal policy of the Soviets. There had been a relaxation of that policy in recent years with large numbers of Jewish people emigrating to Israel and other countries. But when the United States changed its trade policy to one dependent upon the Soviets changing their emigration policy the U.S. trade pact with Russia was rejected by that nation.

As one commentator said, "In regard to emigration the painful conclusion is that we cannot expect to legislate Soviet internal policy. Due to pressure brought to bear from the outside the Kremlin had relaxed somewhat in its harsh emigration policy. But the Soviets will not more accede to a formal outside control of emigration than would our own government to a Soviet requirement that all our old Indian treaties be honored. We must accept the view that time and personal example may be able to accomplish what immediate moralizing cannot."

THERE HAD been considerable improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations in the past few years. It is hoped they can be reestablished. But when the Jackson amendment was voted, Secretary Kissinger summed up the result as "Detente has suffered a setback." It has caused the first setback in our relationship that seemed a great improvement since the 1972 trade pact was signed. Now there is no such pact. It is probable the Soviet Jewish people may suffer greater restraint because of our action.

We have come a long way in detente with Russia since the days of Presidents Truman and Eisenhower and the days of Secretaries John Foster Dulles and Dean Acheson whose aggressive anti-Soviet policies were pursued. This writer agreed with the anti-Communist policies. But there have been changes in Soviet policies that have encouraged the world in hoping that detente can be more of the world attitude in dealing with the dangers of nuclear wars. We may not be willing to trust the Russians as we feel we can other great nations. But we should make every effort possible to bring this about.

IT IS A poor time for Senator Jackson and Congress to add amendments to a trade pact that in effect call for a complete change in another country's internal policy. That change can come about more truly under an open trade policy, which has caused relaxation in the Soviet's Jewish emigration policy in recent years.

It is now up to the U.S. government to strive to reestablish this detente to ease the tensions. Secretary Kissinger has done more in this respect than any other individual. He has had the backing of Presidents Nixon and Ford. Congress has greatly endangered this by injecting immigration policies into a purely trade agreement.

NIC

... it means exciting education

What textbook can bring to the classroom today's history ... or even yesterday's? What one textbook can teach a youngster math, nutrition, politics and English ... give a kid the chance to color and create, learn and debate?

There is one.

It's your daily newspaper, and that's what NIC is all about. The Independent Press-Telegram's Newspaper in the Classroom program brings the excitement of learning from a constantly changing textbook to over 15,000 school kids every week, from elementary through high school.

But the program doesn't stop with the kids. We reach the teachers through workshops given during the school year and summer, teaching teachers how to use the newspaper as a learning tool. I, P-T personnel go into the schools to show instructors the endless opportunities newspapers can bring to the classroom, to the students as a group and to each as an individual learning experience.

If you'd like to know more about NIC, ask your child or your child's teacher, or contact Kathy Berry, I, P-T Educational Services Coordinator at 435-1161, ext. 461.

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

Secret
Witness
summary

As part of the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program, 10 selected and varying summaries of cases in which rewards are offered are printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Monday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. Those rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense. Rewards in all cases will remain open until such cases are closed by police or until notification appears in print that the rewards are withdrawn.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness—that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST—either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Wayne W. Chiodo, 45-year-old liquor store owner shot to death during a holdup at the Willow Liquors, 425 W. Willow St., by two armed robbers on Dec. 29, 1974.

1900 Year Old Redwood Log House...

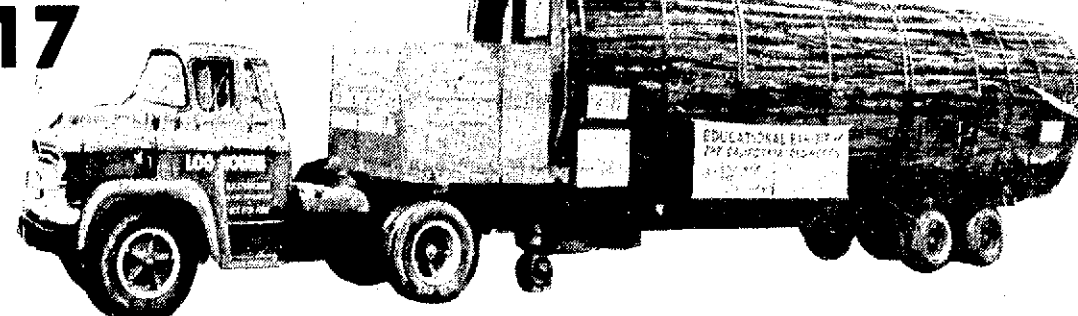

PRESIDENTS DAYS Sidewalk SALE

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17

The Original Redwood Log House is on the 21st year of its national tour. It contains a kitchen, bedroom, and living room, all in the space which was handhewn from a giant redwood tree. Enough wood was removed from the log to build a five room house.

The Redwood Log House was fashioned from the fourth log from the top of a tree found near Eureka, California. The tree was 14 feet in diameter at the base and 267 feet high. Two men worked for more than a year to sand and rub the natural wood which forms its interior.

How to be a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not publicized in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 438-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Training center for city chiefs

Tiny Hawaiian Gardens is becoming a training center for municipal administrative aides, having lost five in the past two years who have moved on to administrative positions in larger cities.

The latest to advance is L. Keyth Durham, 30, former administrative assistant who will assume his new duties as assistant city manager for Rosemead Monday.

Frank Trippi left Hawaiian Gardens more than a year ago to become city manager in Rosemead. Earlier this year Charles J. Wagner, assistant City Administrator Jack A. Simpson moved to Artesia to become an administrative assistant.

Prior to that two other assistant administrators in Hawaiian Gardens moved on to other cities.

21 vie in 7th Council District election Tuesday

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Voters in Long Beach's Seventh Councilmanic District will go to the polls in a special election Tuesday to pick a representative to complete the term of Wayne B. Sharp, who resigned Dec. 17.

Twenty-one candidates are seeking the office, and the one getting the most votes Tuesday will be the Seventh District council member through July 6.

A Seventh District representative for the regular three-year term, which starts July 7, will be selected along with council members from the other eight districts at the March 18 primary nominating election and May 13 general municipal election.

There are 13,761 registered voters within the Seventh District, which lies south of Bixby Road and west of Cherry Avenue. Its south boundary is Willow Street between Atlantic and Pacific avenues, Hill Street between Pacific and Santa Fe avenues, and Pacific Coast Highway from Santa Fe Avenue to the west city limit.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., and City Clerk Elaine Hamilton said the call for absentee ballots indicates the turnout may be as high as 35 per cent.

For the special election only, Mrs. Hamilton said, voters will be marking the old-style paper ballots, and workers at the 42 polling places will count ballots as soon as the polls close. Ballots will then be brought to City Hall, where the results from each polling place will be totaled.

First returns should be available about 8 p.m., Mrs. Hamilton said.

The candidates are:

John T. Anderson, 3747 Weston Place, law student.
Ralph B. Andrews, 314 W. 25th St., business consultant-analyst.
Raymond A. Baker, 880 W. Willow St., contractor.
William R. Brodt, 2495 Golden Ave., student.

John P. Cannon, 3068 Oregon Ave., purchasing agent.

Jack D. Cox, 3450 Gaviota Ave., labor representative.

Leslie Eddins, 3301 Baltic Ave., retired.

Alvan L. Fuller, 101 E. Cameron Place, self-employed.

Travis A. Montgomery, 3622 Country Club Drive, shopping center manager.

Ronald A. Morgan, 1527 W. 23rd St., hospital administrator.

John V. Mungo Jr., 3518 Falcon Ave., warehouseman.

Harold E. Perkins, 2776 De Forest Ave., general contractor.

Edward Peters Sr., 1395 W. 33rd St., retired.

Lana C. Phelan, 3430 Orange Ave., consumer affairs consultant.

Dan Rodgers, 3707/9 Country Club Drive, sheet metal journeyman.

William J. Ruzgis, 2669 Golden Ave., deputy marshal.

Eunice N. Sato, 2895 Easy Ave., community leader.

Elmer M. Share, 236 W. 37th St., self-employed.

Edward A. Tuttle, 3710 Olive Ave., photography.

John D. Waterbury, 3763 Cedar Ave., business executive.

Rodney S. Wirtz, 3249 Magnolia Ave., wharfinger.

Although there are 21 candidates running for the Seventh District seat in Tuesday's special election, six of them will not be candidates in the March 18 primary election.

Brodt, Mungo and Waterbury did not file for the primary. Cannon and Fuller did not pick up their nominating petitions, according to Mrs. Hamilton, and Eddins did not return his petition with the required minimum of 50 signatures of registered voters in the district.

Thus only 15 of the 21 will be running March 18, and these will be supplemented by three new candidates.

GEORGE ROBESON

Coast Press Club gives awards, scholarships

Independent, Press-Telegram columnist George Robeson received the Bill Hunter Memorial Award for excellence in the field of journalism Saturday night during the Pacific Coast Press Club's annual banquet at the Edgewater Hyatt House.

He was singled out by members for his "dedication to the news profession, his ability to write interesting, often humorous columns of consistently high quality and reader interest under deadline pressure."

The presentation was made by I.P.T. Life/style editor Joyce Christensen, who won the award in 1973.

Approximately 130 members and guests attended the dinner, which was followed by the installation of 1975 Press Club officers. Los Angeles Times reporter Jerry Ruhlow was installed president for the second year.

Four area students were given scholarships to further their journalism education, a club tradition.

The winners were:

—News Story, weekly newspapers, John Edwards of the Monterey Park Progress for his story of a man's death in a fire.

—Spot News Story, daily, Mrs. Neiswender for her under-the-radar story on kidnapping newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst being charged with 19 felony counts.

—Series, daily, Los Angeles Times investigative reporter Bill Hazlett for his look at life inside state prisons.

—Feature Story, daily, to Mrs. Neiswender for her portrait of convicted mass killer Charles Manson as he was transferred to a closed psychiatric unit at Vacaville State Prison.

—Feature Story, weekly, Edwards, for his feature on a wine returning to the streets.

—Magazine Feature, free-lancer Marian Mauk for her Southland Sunday article about the American Independent Party in California.

—Education Writing, Mary Ann Lee of the Times for a story on an experiment at Gardena High School.

—Environmental Reporting, Ms. Lee for "careful and balanced presentation" of environmental affairs.

—Headline Writing, I.P.T. Travel Editor Herb Shannon for "Sea level is the height of travel" and "How ya gonna keep 'em down on the 1st farm?" about a reducing salon in Tecate, Mex.

—Photojournalism, Shannon also captured this category for a travel page consisting of photos and a story on changing lanes in London.

—Family Feature, daily, I.P.T. reporter Pat de Luna for a story about an elderly couple living together out of wedlock.

—Family Feature, weekly, Barbara Bradley, of the Monterey Park Progress for her account of a unisex police program.

—Sports Writing, I.P.T. Life/style reporter Carol Ivy for her portrait of tennis star Rosemary Casals.

—Public Relations Release, David Zeitlin of Harbor General Hospital.

—Industrial Publication, St. Mary Echo published by Marshall Kandell.

—Health Care Story, daily, Times reporter Tim Gindick.

—Health Care Story, nondaily, Karen Krantz of Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach for her article on the trauma of strokes.

—Reporting, Advancements in Medicine, daily, Ruhlow for his story about a new and often controversial procedure of weight loss through surgery.

—Reporting, Advancements in Medicine, nondaily, Janice Alzen of St. Mary Medical Center for her report on a special body box designed to aid respiratory patients.

—Aviation Writing, Shannon for his story on a giant plane being developed.

—Aerospace Writing, Robert Allan of the Times for a story on the Viking Space Mission.

—Maritime Writing, Ruhlow for a story on a controversial inventory tax on containerized cargo.

Workshop on use of sword, rapier slated

A workshop for "actors, aspiring actors or incurable romantics," who think they may have to do some swordplay on stage and screen someday, will be held Wednesday night at Long Beach State University. The event is open to the public.

Alexander Dilts, a member of the British Fight Director's Society, will give instruction to up to 20 participants. He'll supply the swords and rapiers.

Dilts will lecture on proper swordsmanship and then work with students who want to perfect their techniques.

Jo Redmon of the women's physical education department said the event will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. in the dance studio in the women's gym. Admission for participants is $3, and for spectators, $1.50. Tickets are on sale at the LBSU theater arts ticket office.

AN ESKIMO CHILD AND A CHURCH OF SUGAR CUBES

Alaskan Yule reduced when he's in hospital

There won't be a Christmas party for many snow-bound Alaskan youngsters this year because Bill Moody is in Veterans' Administration Hospital.

He is known as Santa's number one helper in the nation's 49th state and for his annual custom of building replicas of churches and other famous buildings with sugar cubes.

Now he's facing an operation and is under treatment for emphysema—and he figures to be in the hospital for sometime.

Moody, 40, has spent 12 years in Alaska and has lived in most of the settled areas of the big country.

He hit Anchorage first and migrated into the hinterland from there. He worked for four years with the U.S. Navy's Arctic Research Laboratory at Point Barrow and later for Alaska Airlines in Nome.

With time on his hands, Moody kept thinking of the small children—Eskimo and white-skinned alike—who live in the remote villages and have very little.

So he began collecting toys for them and cajoled aircraft owners and flight services into airflying the gifts to the wilds of the Alaskan northwest. He also staged Christmas parties for up to 800 youngsters in Anchorage.

Moody is too slim to be Santa, but he always had one to preside at the gift-giving in the remote villages.

In Anchorage, he hit on the idea of making a sugar cube church; he then worked in catering.

The last one he made weighed 347 pounds, took 4,000 sugar cubes, and was decorated with 3,000 simulated rhinestones to make it sparkle; and it was topped with a graceful spire.

It took Moody, a bachelor, 1,100 hours to do it in his spare time over a few months.

He can't do one this year, but he's already planning his biggest work for the nation's centennial celebration in 1976. It will be a sugar cube replica of the nation's capital—if he can corral that many sugar cubes.

At the price of sugar today, it's a bit of a shaky proposition. But Moody figures that he's make it anyway; it will take 1,700 pounds of sugar cubes, he figures, to do the replica 20 feet long, with wings 6 feet wide, and a dome towering eight feet high.

About 10 months would do, he estimated.

Most of his sugar cube creations have become museum pieces; others have been taken on Alaskan tours.

Sewer-line design work for water plant near completion

Design work will be completed in April for the projected $6.5 million Los Coyotes Water Renovation Plant interceptor sewer line that will start in South Gate and end in Cerritos, Dean Fuller, head of the design section for the Los Angeles County Sanitation Districts, said.

The seven-mile interceptor line will redirect sewer flows from the crowded renovation plant in Carson to the Los Coyotes Plant at the junction of the Artesia Freeway (91) and the San Gabriel Freeway (605).

The project will be financed by a federal grant covering 75 per cent of the costs and allocations from the state and the county sanitation district covering the rest.

When design plans are completed they will be submitted to the California Water Resources Control Board in Sacramento for approval and then to the Environmental Protection Agency in San Francisco for its approval.

CONSTRUCTION of the huge line will take about a year after all contacts are awarded.

Sanitation District officials said it will involve some inconveniences.

THE Los Coyotes Plant in Cerritos recently has undergone a major expansion. The Los Angeles County Sanitation District—in order to use its capacity to clean water—will use the new line to redirect sewage flow.

The new sewer line will be of concrete pipe and will have a diameter of five to seven feet. It will be buried five to 20 feet deep in a 12-foot wide trench.

The line will start in South Gate at the Rio Hondo River Channel near Southern Avenue. It will run southeasterly to Downey and southward in Downey to a point near the city's southern boundary. From there it will move westerly across Bellflower to the San Gabriel River Channel where it will be placed in an easement extending from the west side of the river to the renovation plant.

FULLER said the line will have a 75-million gal-

Female deputy takes command

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

The first woman appointed to the rank of captain in the Orange County Sheriff's Office has taken command of the personnel and training division.

Barbara Ayres, a career law enforcement officer, was promoted from lieutenant by the county's new sheriff, Brad Gates, in a general reorganization.

Mrs. Ayres, whose sons, Bruce, 20, and Brian, 18, both attend Fullerton Junior College, has spent her working life in law enforcement, except when her sons were growing up.

She began with the Los Angeles County office and was there six years before she quit to raise her family.

Then she became a security officer for Autonetics, then, a state corrections officer and, finally, in 1964, a deputy sheriff for Orange County.

Her job in Los Angeles was in the women's jail. When assigned to the California Corrections Center, she worked with women narcotics addicts.

She became supervising matron for the old Orange County Jail when she joined the Orange County force.

She was promoted to lieutenant in June 1968.

Now, for the first time in her long career, she has work away from a women's jail.

As personnel and training officer, she will supervise all new "hires," which is sheriff's parlance for recruits; handle staff investigations, reserve officers' training and both basic and in-service training courses at the sheriff's training academy.

Her promotion and new assignment put her job under the sheriff's newly designated Special Services Division, for which Sheriff Gates chose Raul Ramos of Fresno County Sheriff's Office to be chief deputy.

The male element of her family—husband Norman and sons Bruce and Brian—are "very proud" of Capt. Ayres. They call her their "officer-in-command."

L.B. seminar told of federal fight on child abuse

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

The federal government is playing an increasing role in the prevention of child abuse, according to a Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) official who spoke this weekend at a three-day national child abuse prevention seminar at Memorial Hospital Medical Center.

The seminar, first of its kind sponsored by Parents Anonymous, a child abuse prevention group headquartered in Inglewood, marked the fifth anniversary of the group's founding.

Stanley B. Thomas Jr., assistant secretary for human development for HEW, told about 300 physicians, psychologists, social workers, teachers and parents from throughout the country, plus

Canada and South America, that HEW took the first step in a department-wide effort to combat child abuse and neglect in June 1973 when it designated the Office of Child Development to lead the campaign.

Since then $4 million in federal money has been set aside for new projects to help abused children and their families. Some of the money will go to Parents Anonymous to establish more than 100 new chapters, he said.

"Federal awareness has come slowly, for there resided in the hearts of most federal bureaucrats the same reluctance to accept the existence of child abuse (the public has had)," Thomas said.

He added that the nation's press has helped focus attention on the touchy problem.

The federal government's role in the child abuse picture is twofold, he said. One is to help meet community needs and the second is to redistribute resources to state and local government so minimum standards of quality and service are ensured.

The government's long-term goal is to help states and communities strengthen their capacity to identify and prevent abuse and to help harmed children and their parents.

Thomas said there's a strong need for information about the problem, which is often kept in the closet, and said the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect, located in the Children's Bureau of the Office of Child Development, will conduct a study of the incidence of abuse. The center has established a computerized clearing house of information on public and private programs and will publish an annual summary of research in the child abuse field.

Thomas said that as a result of $4.5 million in grants, announced in January by HEW Secretary Caspar Weinberger, 12 centers will be established throughout the country to provide medical, psychological, social and other services for mistreated children. The centers will have 24-hour hot lines to receive reports and provide counseling.

"Federal dollars are not in themselves a solution," he said. "Child abuse problems are created and resolved one family at a time, one child at a time."

Thomas added that without the "spirit of commitment" shown by such groups as Parents Anonymous, "we are all lost."

"What you are doing requires a high degree of sophistication in the fine art of communication, for your exploration of one another's behavior and feelings must be sensitive and understanding but directed toward change," he declared.

Thomas said children are clearly one of the most vulnerable groups in the country because they are dependent on their parents, often their abusers, and can't force recognition of their problems.

"They cannot organize, they cannot vote, they cannot hold jobs, they have no financial leverage. They can't read or write very well; they don't always know the words necessary to articulate their own feelings. Children are small so they're pretty easy to push around," Thomas said.

During the seminar a half dozen pickets—most of them mothers with young children and infants in tow—from a group called Voice for the Unborn picketed the hospital entrance, carrying signs saying "Abortion is abuse of the unborn" and similar sentiments. It's the 12th week of picketing at the medical facility for the anti-abortion group.

The seminar concluded Saturday afternoon following a legal workshop and a luncheon featuring a speech by James J. Delaney, judge of the 17th Judicial District of the Colorado Family and Juvenile Court, Brighton, Colo.

Growing headaches for schools told

An upsurge in teacher militancy along with worsening financial problems for many Southland districts could make headlines this spring, says Dr. Richard M. Clowes, Los Angeles County school superintendent.

And these problems presumably will continue unresolved through the closing years of the 1970s, Clowes said during an interview at the county's newly new Education Center in Downey. He was asked to assess problems facing education today and into the 1980s.

As this school year wanes, he said, "Many county districts will be unable to give their employees more than a 6 per cent pay raise" because funds needed for larger raises will be unavailable. Cash reserves that might have provided bigger boosts were used last year — for the same purpose.

"Many employees will be unhappy about this, but the money just isn't there," he said. "Hard choices must be made—whether to cut educational programs or payrolls."

Without opining which might be affected, he said, "It could lead to militancy in some districts." But even so, in his opinion, "a countywide teacher strike is unlikely this spring."

Next year could present a different picture if, as expected, the Legislature and Gov. Brown approve a measure providing collective bargaining for public employees, including teachers.

Clowes, as county superintendent responsible for providing administrative, financial and educational services to 95 districts with 1.6 million students, described a fiscal bind that 20 of these find themselves in this year.

The 20 — including Los Angeles City but excluding Long Beach, where presently it is unnecessary — must ask their voters to tax themselves at a higher rate in order to maintain current operations without major program or personnel cuts next year.

"If the people vote these down," Clowes said, "there will be no money available" to operate schools without painfully drastic reductions of one kind or another.

Speaking of finances, the next half-decade "probably will be very hard" for education in general, he predicted. "We've got to get more use out of every public dollar we receive."

"Education will be competing with a lot of other important users of available tax money. And with 9 per cent unemployment, some of the money must be used for purposes other than schools."

"I don't begrudge welfare," he added, "but it's a fact; education and many other important programs will be in competition for funding." Further complicating the schools' position are "the $60 million federal deficit, higher prices and a recessionary economy."

Clowes, for 35 years a Southern California teacher, principal, business manager and district superintendent, made it clear the decline is being felt in areas other than fiscal.

Declining school enrollments are a primary cause of problems facing administrators and governing boards. Birth rates dipping since 1968 toward Depression-era levels increasingly is forcing the closure of some neighborhood schools.

Clowes, updating the 7-year record, said some 22 elementary and junior highs were shut this year in 82 K-12th grade districts throughout Los Angeles County. Total closings within the last three years, including Long Beach's Buftum Elementary, now stand at 35.

Students from suddenly surplus schools often are merged — as was true here — into other nearby schools. Some discarded plants have been rented by the county for special uses. Buftum, after its 370 pupils and their teachers were absorbed at Bixby, was turned by Clowes' staff into a county school for handicapped youngsters.

The current changes are creating a strange and unexpected situation, Clowes said. "You would think that declining enrollment would be a God-send; paradoxically, it creates problems instead."

"The first kind of problem can be quickly solved. The Legislature, if it chooses, can resolve it by appropriating enough money to keep schools open."

If that answer was relatively easy, "There is no easy solution to the other problem, the human problem," he continued. Young people entering the teaching or allied profession find no room to move about and advance as their elders tightly hold onto available higher level jobs.

while there's much more to be said, in his view, "This is how education stagnates..."

The county Education Center, housed since February 1973 in a one-time North American Rockwell facility at 9300 E. Imperial Hwy., Downey, presently employs

1,800 people. In addition to working with local school districts, the staff operates 22 special schools for Juvenile Court wards, 250 special education programs for exceptional children and adults and some 30 federally-funded projects and programs.

Rolls keeps on rolling, by Jove!

By JAN MORRIS
New York Times Special Features

Less than four years after its own bankruptcy, at a time when Great Britain is almost bankrupt too, and the Western world at large indeed seems to be skidding toward insolvency, the Rolls-Royce Motors Company of Crewe, England, has announced that it will offer a new model, the first since 1965.

Will it be a more modest machine than its predecessors? Will it reflect the world's preoccupations with fuel shortages, cash shortages, gulfs between rich and poor? Will it recognize our general disillusionment with the internal combustion engine?

Certainly not. It will be the most expensive automobile Rolls-Royce has ever offered, since it built its first two-cylinder horseless carriage, (10 horsepower, 1,800 c.c.) 70 years ago. It will cost at least $60,000 perhaps $70,000, and it has been designed frankly for the very, very rich.

"We are firmly of the opinion," say the gentlemen at Rolls-Royce, "that there is a continuing market in the world for excellence; and when we say that, we are not thinking specifically of a market for cars — for in point of fact: (they add with an almost perceptible sniff) "It is not really the car market within which Rolls-Royce operates."

Not the car market? By this gnomic observation the Rolls people are not just being hoity-toity. They are very proud of being good engineers, and they are keen on cars. What they are expressing is a wider philosophy of commerce which they long ago discovered to be good for business and which now makes them the most profitable car manufacturers in Europe, and possibly the world. (When the immense Rolls-Royce conglomerate collapsed in 1971, the car division was rescued from the ruins to survive as a private-enterprise company altogether separate from the now publicly owned Rolls-Royce aero engine concern).

It is the philosophy of industrial elitism: the conception of a product so uniquely good, and so celebrated, that its price and even perhaps its purpose is almost immaterial, and you can be sure of selling it always, however rocky the state of the world's finances.

LONG AGO The Rolls publicists discovered that the best way to sell one of these particular products was to surround it with a mystique: of extravagance, of course, and luxury, but preferably with more exotic auras too, like snobbery or sensuality or patriotism or wickedness.

They themselves, springing as they did out of England's plush Edwardian era, managed over the years to combine all these elements in their own sales formulas: and the kind of gilded miasma which now invests their name and its product, part myth, part statistic, part fun, part calculation, might well go into the language as Rolls-Royceness — the condition of being, and entertainingly declaring oneself to be, The Best.

It is an especially British condition, I think, if only because the British, a small ambitious nation in a usually hostile world, succeeded themselves in their great days by this very same combination of swank, bluff and style. "The Royal Navy," Admiral Lord Fisher used to say, "always travels First Class," by which he meant that Britain must survive by quality and display, rather than by weight and quantity.

The weakness inherent to the island kingdom, especially at its imperial climax, had to be masked by exhibitions of excellence. Prestige was power. Nations, Disraeli said, were accepted by the world at their own valuation, and it took a distinct degree of Rolls-Royceness for a nation of 40 million people — in 1900 — to rule a quarter of the world.

And British industrialists cannily followed the flag. They did not invariably follow it, as the imperial activists liked to claim, into backwaters of Niger or Irrawaddy, for by and large British manufacturers always preferred less uncomfortable markets; but they did follow it into this rewarding field of self-advertisement. They sometimes claimed to make the biggest; they always claimed to make the best.

If this was ever true, in general terms, it was only in the early years of the industrial revolution, when Britain stood beyond competition. By the turn of our own century, British manufacturing skills were equaled, if not surpassed, by several foreign rivals. Yet even into recent times not merely the British themselves, but all those clients and customers subjected to their historical spell, habitually assumed that to buy British was to buy best.

No guarantee was more conclusive than the royal cipher on the lawnmower, and the talismanic motto "By Appointment To The King."

TODAY, WHEN Britain is just another middle power, the elitism is harder to sustain. The allure of monarchy itself is less persuasive, and the Royal Navy has tamely renamed its Admiralty the Navy Department. One by one the grandest British institutions have succumbed to the prevailing ordinariness. Some exclusivities do survive. Some of the London clubs retain their narrow splendor. One or two London hotels are unbeatable. One can still thrill to the moan of the bagpipes over Edinburgh Rock, or the orderly officer's command, harsh but ineradicably Etonian, through the leafless autumn trees outside Buckingham Palace. The Queen is there. The Lord Chancellor sits on the Woolsack.

And up at Crewe, in Cheshire, in a plant that looks like a second-rate brush factory, or perhaps the wholly owned subsidiary of an Illinois paper-clip manufacturer, the craftsmen of Rolls-Royce still create what advertising regulations in many countries, with their restrictions on the unqualified superlative, now discourage them from calling T-B-st C-r in T— W-rld.

Driving a Rolls-Royce, Michael Arlen wrote, puts life in a new perspective, and it is true. It is that very perspective indeed, experienced, imagined or described, which has encouraged the people at Crewe to embark upon their new car, which is not to be a replacement for their existing range, but a yet more revelatory addition.

I HAVE OWNED two Rolls-Royces in my time, and they used to give me a sense of being not merely more fortunate than most of my friends, but actually more British.

Oddly enough, though, my first taste of that legendary sensation was not in England at all, but in Virginia City, Nev. There the late Lucius Beebe, a thorough exponent of Rolls-Royceism, kept a couple of Rollises in the garage beneath his spacious gold magnate's house on the edge of town.

One was an old Phantom, I think, and stood gleaming in the half-light, immensely long, terrifically black and enormously consequential. The other, when I was there in 1954, was the very latest Silver Dawn, pristine from Crewe.

"Try it," said Mr. Beebe in his best Rolls manner (which he applied, of course, not merely to cars, but to every aspect of life, including the writing of a distinctly portlike prose). So I climbed in and drove away, out of the little town into the wide sunlit desert all around.

I shall never forget the feeling I felt — you must not laugh at me — I felt like Botticelli's Venus emerging from her shell, so pearly was the ambience, so sensual the breath of the wind as we swept along, so gentle the tick of the engine, so gaily but majestically did the silver Spirit of Ecstasy, the perennial mascot of Rolls-Royces, dance on the radiator before me.

I had a Silver Dawn of my own later, discarding it only because Rolls-Royce declined to put power steering into it for me, but though it gave me great pleasure over the years, still I never quite recaptured the rapture of that rebirth in Mr. Beebe's.

Actually, it was rather a lumpish car, and for my tastes Rolls has never built a beautiful automobile since World War II. It was purely its quality that gave me that unforgettable frisson, coupled of course with the idea of it. Take away the magic of the name, and it might have seemed a much more ordinary car. Remove that flying lady on the front, and half the ecstasy would have gone.

MYTH AND SUBSTANCE were interwoven, and to this day it is the fusion of the two — Arlen's "new perspective" — that keeps Rolls-Royce Motors in business.

As to the substance, the briefest ill-informed visit to Crewe will confirm its excellence. There are three models of Rolls now in production. The Phantom is a dowagerly motor-landau, vastly tradition, of which only about 25 are built each year. The Corniche is a coach-built super-Rolls, saloon or convertible. The Silver Shadow is the standard model, cheapest of the range at $33,000 or so.

Altogether about 2,600 Rollises were made last year: 1,500 were exported — 700 to the United States, about 100 to the Arab countries, a magnificent dribble elsewhere ("The Best Car in Japan," says a beloved Rolls advertisement). But though this is a vast increase on the production of 20 years ago — of the Silver Dawn, for example, fewer than 800 were made altogether — still, even on the assembly line, a craftsman's dedication reigns.

Of course it is a very slow assembly line. It moves every 40 minutes, when each car shell is pushed along by hand to the next bench. The hall is calm and fairly quiet, and the workers all seem to be charming, though from time to time even they indulge themselves in a strike. There is no whirr of machinery, click of computer, or even, as romantics might suppose, hiss of steam. Instead, everyone seems to be doing things by hand, tightening bolts, adjusting wires, snipping leather, whittling walnut woods.

Like all cars, the Rolls contains many components made elsewhere, but it is a far more homogenous machine than most, and an astonishing number of its 80,000 separate parts are made by the Rolls craftsmen themselves.

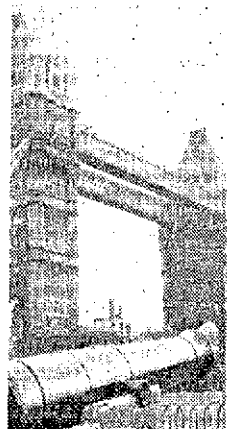

They are understandably proud of their creation

Desert offers boys shelter

By PATRICIA de LUNA
Staff Writer

Boys Town of the Desert, a residential care facility for troubled youngsters, may have had its skeletons in the closet, but two new counselors there would have the public pay more attention to what they consider the needs of the boys.

Chuck Freeburg and Scott MacLeod, both treatment team coordinators, which means they each have supervision over one of the four cottages, expressed concern the other day that the 90 boys, ranging in age from 11 to 16, have rooms sparsely furnished. They say the boys need couches, chairs, tables and dressers, and carpets.

"The boys need to have the furniture come all at once so they realize that this is their home," says Freeburg.

The Catholic Diocese of San Diego which has charge of the six-year-old campus presently headed by Father Peter Covas, executive director, provides interest and mortgage payments on the property. The operating budget comes from tuition, roughly $871 per month per child, which is usually provided by county funds since most of the boys are referred by the probation or welfare departments. Other boys are voluntary placements by their parents who feel the child needs a more protected environment. Most children stay an average of one year.

LOCATED IN Beaumont, the campus has four cottages which each house about 24 boys, an open graded school, an intake cottage, and a group home.

Freeburg and MacLeod, who both gained counseling experience at the Devereux School in Santa Barbara, a residential program for neurologically and emotionally handicapped youngsters, say the key to helping these boys is giving them a feeling of self-respect. And the key to maintaining a good self image is "a healthy physical environment."

"This is essential for a child to feel good about himself. We have a long way to go."

As supervisors of cottages, Freeburg, 34, and MacLeod, 27, make final decisions on individual program for the boys.

"These boys," says Freeburg, "aren't motivated in positive ways." In the year's average stay at the facility, counselors use a "shaping process," says Freeburg, "so that each boy will develop a positive interest in himself."

Each cottage maintains a staff with one unit supervisor, four child-care workers, one full-time night counselor and one part-time night counselor. "One person must remain awake all night," says MacLeod. "Evening hours are when a child feels his insecurity the most."

PAST HISTORY of Boys Town includes numerous runaways, a walk-out by counselors in 1973 over pay disputes, and an executive director who was given a one-year probationary sentence for failing to file income tax for 1963-65.

The center, which has a capacity for 104 boys, provides an intake cottage where 13 boys at one time receive a one-month orientation to cottage life and individual psychological, educational, and medical workups to determine how well suited each one will be to an open campus.

After moving to a residential cottage, each boy is given a weekly counseling session with a school advisor, group rap sessions, and individual counseling sessions.

"Our personal goal," says Scott MacLeod, "is to get the boy back into the community as quickly as he is ready." And to do this most successfully, he says, "we need to improve the home and community environment the boy will return to."

Thus team coordinators maintain contact with the parents and endeavor to get the probation officer or welfare worker involved with the boy. Frequently, if the boy is not able to return to his former environment, he can be placed in an interim group home and eventually a foster home.

The key to success with these boys, say the counselors, is to expect them to do well. "We try to put them in areas where they can succeed."

A CASE IN POINT concerns a 13-year-old boy who has been at Boys Town for one year. The boy is classified as hyperactive, has no father figure in the home and has a history of sibling rivalry, school failure and classroom disruption.

"The boy has a short attention span. He would sit in the classroom for only a moment, grab a book from the teacher's hands, run down the hall and throw the book through a window."

"Other people could not deal with the boy's real attention needs. But we found that rather than being completely hyperactive, the boy's needs at a basic level were not being met," says Freeburg. "Now he receives the praise necessary for a good self-image and he's doing remarkably well."

HAIL AND FAREWELL were extended to new Congressman Mark Hannaford, left, and wife Sara during gathering of V.I.P.s at Golden Sails. With the Hannafords are their successors to Lakewood officialdom, Mayor Wayne Piercy and his wife, Pat.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Lakewood Council honors Hannafords

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

LAKEWOOD CITY COUNCIL sponsored a farewell dinner for Lakewood's former Mayor Mark Hannaford and his wife, Sara. Mark is the new Congressman for the 34th district.

Some 450 friends and fellow politicians gathered in the La Grande Stanza Room of the Golden Sails to offer plaudits for past work well done and good luck for his future in Washington.

Guest list read like who's who of city fathers from communities in the 34th district. Council fathers and mothers from Artesia, Hawaiian Gardens, Huntington Beach, Signal Hill and Long Beach were in attendance.

Lakewood council was represented by Sheila Pokras and her husband, Dr. Norm, Jo Bennett and Bill and Frances Young.

The Hannaford sons — Mark, Kim and Rob — were there. Also Judge Richard Hanki and his wife, Assemblyman Mike Cullen and Kit, Assemblyman Fred Chel and Elizabeth, former Assemblyman Joe Gonsalves and Virginia, Capt. and Mrs. Ken Cable (he of the Lakewood Sheriff's Department), and Chuck and Eve Schweitzer.

More were Terry and Charlotte Mangan, Walt and Shirley Edwards, John and Frances Todd, Virgil Miller with Millie Hammond, Dr. Bob Barger, S. Mark Taper with dancer, Marge Champion, John and Jean Geyer, Howard and Nona Furu, Dr. Al and Keith Derian, Milt and Carol Farrell, Stan and Carolyn Megarage and Dale and Della Taylor.

Also Don Fleming, the Fred Parsons, Norm and Ruth Wasserman, Jim and Loraine Ackerman, Stan and Sharon Zimberg and Dave and Gloria Boran.

Busy week for the Congressman. He spoke to the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce breakfast at dawn the morning after an open house at his office. Following the open house, Mil and Doreene Hines entertained the Hannafords, staff and spouses at dinner at Francois' Manhattan.

SPEAKING OF dining out.

Steve Kral invited spouse and me to share in a birthday celebration for Liz Grisham. Her husband, Don, was there too, of course.

We went to Le Clos where, it seemed, everyone was celebrating something.

Nearly every table was visited by singing waiters bearing ice cream topped with a candle.

I got more and more curious. So, "borrowing" a menu (that's where it went, Rene) and a pen (I returned that to its owner) I made the rounds of tables.

...Robin Sundstedt was celebrating a birthday with her husband, Frank and Tom and Janis Biss.

...Clyde and Leone Smith had driven in from their home in Palos Verdes to observe their ninth wedding anniversary.

...Another tete-a-tete couple was Hal and Judy Daniels marking a third wedding anniversary.

...Lionel Meeker was the birthday honoree at a table with Madeline Bowman and Paul Humbert.

...Don McLaughlin got the ice cream at a table with Dick Sharp and Pat McGeough.

My dinner was getting colder and colder. So when Le Clos hostess, Christine Esparza, brought out another dish of ice cream, I nearly panicked. Happily, she was on a break and sat down to eat the ice cream herself.

SPEAKING OF Aquarians.

Carol Edgmon planned a surprise party for husband, Jerry, on the occasion of his Big four O birthday.

She coaxed him into helping her clean house for the party by telling him their church group was coming over.

Jerry kept wanting to go to a nearby cleaning shop at the last minute. Carol was frantic because invited guests were meeting at said cleaners.

She sidetracked him, guests arrived en masse, and he was duly astonished.

Carol's co-conspirators were Dr. Ed and Bev Cruchley, Ernie and Bonnie Galloway and Bob and Janet Fernald.

Dr. Dick and Myrna Wigod and Terry and Lynda Sullivan arrived bearing a funeral wreath with RIP emblazoned in purple.

Since Jerry is known as a gourmet, someone gifted him with a 4-foot tall set of salad servers.

Other guests included George and Joyce Murchison, who barely had time to doff ski togs and don party clothes. They had just returned from a week at Vail Colo.

More were Dave and Phyllis Copp, Jack Dilday, Andy and Clara Andrews and Bob and Gay McKernie.

Life-long valentines

The couple will live in Long Beach after a cross country honeymoon.

AT WIT'S END

Goes to pieces over mail

By ERMA BOMBECK

I hate to dwell on poor Elvis Presley's 40th birthday, but a headline the other day grabbed me. It read, "TWO COEDS POSE AS DOGS IN ATTEMPT TO SEE ELVIS."

At first I thought there had been a mistake in the headline and that Two Dogs Posed As Coeds, but that was not the case. It seems two girls from Mississippi had themselves crated, labeled "Russian Wolfhounds" and mailed themselves to Elvis to cheer him up on his 40th birthday.

What a fool thing to do! Do you realize if they had stamped "FRAGILE" on the crate, they could have been crushed to death in the post office? We're a mobile society — everything, that is, but the postal department. They could stop a war already in progress.

I BASE THIS on a couple of packages I received at Christmas, namely five pounds of cookie crumbs from my sister-in-law in Orlando and a 185-piece glass set from the Libby people. (It's not easy to get that many pieces out of an 8-glass set of tumblers.)

I have never been beyond the counter of a post office, but in my mind I have visualized a whole operation beyond those swinging doors.

Once a package leaves your hand it is put on a cart and transferred to an adjustment conveyer belt. This is where all the packages with messages like "THIS SIDE UP," "FRAGILE," "HANDLE WITH CARE" and "PLEASE USE HAND STAMP" are turned upside down so the directions cannot be read.

From here, the packages go to a little machine affectionately called the Place, Punt and Kick. It's a boot-shaped anvil that comes down on a package with 50 pounds of metal and boots it into its next cycle called the Fuzzer Wash.

The Fuzzer Wash is a wet sponge that bathes the package making the ink on the address run together so that it is completely illegible.

THERE ARE exceptions, of course. One mother I know who had had it with her kids mailed both of them to a non-existent post office box in Fargo, North Dakota.

Even without a return address, she got them back the same day stamped "Insufficient Postage."

Every time I am critical of a human condition, I get mail.

I'll probably get mail on this column — but not in my lifetime.

Smoking clinics set

A new series of stop smoking clinics co-sponsored by the American Cancer Society and the Long Beach Medical Auxiliary begins Monday and continues through April.

The Smoking Withdrawal Clinics are conducted by Harry Wolfson and meet four days a week, Monday through Thursday, for two consecutive weeks. Pre-registration fee is $15 and enrollment is limited to 25 persons.

The first in the new series will be conducted Feb. 17-27 at Memorial Hospital Medical Center, Conference Room F, 2801 Atlantic Ave. A similar clinic held at Community Hospital last month graduated nine of eleven participants.

The third clinic is scheduled March 17-27 at Pacific Hospital, Conference Room A, 2776 Pacific Ave.

The final clinic is April 14-24 at Bauer Hospital-St. Mary Medical Center, 1050 Linden Ave. All sessions are 7 to 9 p.m.

Musical fashion show

"A Musical Fashion Review" will be offered when Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary presents its annual designer style show Saturday in the Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St. A social hour at 11 a.m. precedes luncheon at noon.

Holly Mitchell will be commentator for the fashion parade set to music, beginning at 1:30 p.m. A producer, director and fashion personality, Miss Mitchell puts shows to music for a variety of organizations throughout the country.

"Child of the Universe" is theme for the event, which benefits child care programs at Memorial Medical Center. The auxiliary has pledged $3,000 a month to the facility for medication and hospitalization of children in need of financial assistance.

Besides the fashion show, funds are raised through the hospital gift shop, sale of nursery photos, calendars and Christmas cards, the gift cart and hospital television.

Mrs. Arden Charrlin is president of the auxiliary. Mrs. Elmer Clark is chairwoman of the event, assisted by Mrs. Jerry Edgmon. Tickets at $10 each are available from Mrs. B.B. McCoy, 13210 Seaview Lane, Seal Beach.

The Rolls Royce auto is alive, well and changing

(though very few of them have ever driven a Rolls in their lives, the management apparently never having thought of arranging it). "I'm terribly sorry," I said flippantly to one assembler as I passed, "this car's no good; you'll have to take it to bits and start all over again." "And we will," he earnestly replied, "we will, if it's not to your satisfaction."

The labor force has evidently absorbed the mystique like everyone else and relishes its piquant mixture. One employe was asked on television recently if he would like to own a Rolls himself. "I would," he emphatically replied, "and all that goes with it."

ALL THAT GOES with it! So the extra dimension of Rolls-Royce becomes alive at its very source. In every half-completed car shell there lies a loose-leaf binder, entitled "History Book," in which is laboriously entered by hand everything that happens to that particular car throughout its life. Its prospective owner's name is usually entered there already, for while in America many Rolls are sold out of stock, often on impulse, in England they are generally built to order: One often sees proud purchasers, like fathers at a maternity ward, tickling the in-nards of their offspring on the assembly line or beaming at it bashfully.

The History Book is kept in the factory forever, and so every Rolls is given the imprimatur of its pedigree and is immortalized like a Venetian aristocrat in the Golden Book of Crewe.

It is the all that goes with it that turns a magnificent car into a Rolls-Royce. For myself I find the Silver Shadow too luxurious, and I suspect that its engineering quality is matched by at least one other manufacturer in the world. Its design is commonplace. Its performance is not breath-taking.

It is a lot of money, a lot of car, to carry four people around the place, and there is a rather fussy, anachronistic touch to the Rolls-Royce preferences for leather and walnut veneer. Rolls loves to say that its cars are put together with loving fingers: I myself prefer, nowadays, an automobile never touched by human hands.

But the magic is something else again. Seven men and a couple of secretaries are charged with propagating Rolls-Royce around the world, but they have deep inherited resources to work with. Much of it, like so much of Britain's own legend, is not absolutely true. It is not true, for instance, that if a Rolls axle breaks a new one is supplied free, on the grounds that no Rolls axle ever does break.

It is not true that you can't buy one unless you're in Who's Who. If a Rolls breaks down it is not whisked away in a plain transporter. It is a popular misconception that heads of state habitually use Rolls-Royces; those that are royal carriages are mostly old, and even the Queen of England, who has four, has not bought a new one since 1961—her oldest is nearly 25 years old.

The Rolls publicists are cheerfully eclectic, though, and use it all, truth and tale, history and anecdote, testimonial and misquotation. They are great romantics. The Spirit of Ecstasy mascot, they say, is cast by an old Chinese method 4,000 years old. The Rolls radiator can be made by only 10 men in the world, and owes its elegance to the ancient Greek architectural principle of entasis, like the Parthenon.

MORE THAN half of the Rolls ever built are still on the road. One of them was especially built for Queen Elizabeth's coronation. They are very sorry, but the electric adjustment for the seats will not work if you weigh more than 30 stone (420 pounds). "The Silver Shadow," they remark with a characteristically throw-away hyperbole, "is probably the most perfect machine of its time."

Through this lucrative labyrinth the Rolls-Royce people tread a practiced but a wary path. They are well aware that in England the social status of the Rolls has abruptly shifted. It is unposh to drive about in a Rolls these days. By English standards it is a very large and showy car, and to drive one speaks of money more than breeding, ostentation more than finesse.

The automobile is no longer a very subtle status symbol, and most aristocrats make do with very ordinary cars. The Rolls-Royce people are unabashed. "We make," they simply say, "more cars than there are aristocrats."

On the home market, they deliberately aim at the meritocracy, the up-and-coming men. At one end of the conception this includes pop stars and showy novelists; at the other it is represented by self-made industrialists; in the middle it doubtless embraces a host of speculators. In any case, most British owners own their cars through the medium of a company, thus avoiding some tax or other.

Abroad it is different. In Europe barons and counts, as well as Sophia Lorens, are seen in Rolls-Royces; in America, where the car looks far less ostentatious, it retains a properly gentlemanly image and is favored by Ivy League professionals and worldly country landowners.

IN THE ROLLS-ROYCE ethos, anyway, the customer comes second. It is the car that counts, and the legend.

"It is not the custom of this company," a Rolls spokesman replied when asked what he thought of a pop star's psychedelically painted Shadow, "to comment upon the taste of our customers."

Does it work? As a national technique, the British

DEAR ABBY

Wife is in a stew over decision facing her

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is it too late to leave a husband after 36 years of marriage? Through the years, I have put up with plenty of abuse, both verbal and physical, but I always forgave him.

Last night was the last straw. At supper, my husband had taken second helpings of everything on the table. We were just about finished when I noticed a little more stew in the bowl, so I put it on his plate.

He flew into a rage, saying he wasn't a garbage can, then he picked up his plate and shoved it into my face, all over my glasses and in my hair! This happened last night and I am still so infuriated I can hardly control myself.

He didn't apologize. (He never does.) He just said: "Well, you asked for it when you tried to force the leftovers on me!"

I suppose it's too late to leave him, but if you were in my place, what would you have done? Or better yet, what would YOU do now?

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: What I would do and what YOU should do are probably two different things. If you have put up with his abuse for 36 years, you either must have liked it, or felt that you had no choice. Now, you should ask yourself the question, "Would I be better off without him—or with him?" There's your answer.

DEAR ABBY: I'm the mother of a 15-year-old daughter and a 14-year-old son. They're good kids as far as behavior goes, but they are a pair of lazy slobes when it comes to keeping their rooms picked up.

I have pleaded with them, yelled at them, and threatened them with the worst kind of punishment, but nothing works.

We live in a lovely new home, and each has a beautiful room, but you would never know it.

Abby, I am not a fanatic, nor am I unreasonable. I just want them to hang up their clothes and keep their rooms presentable. I don't even ask them to make their own beds.

When guests come over and want to see the house,

I have to keep these two rooms closed off because I'm ashamed of the way they look most of the time.

Can you help me?

GIVING UP

DEAR GIVING: You are fighting a losing battle, Mother. Say no more to them, keep their doors closed, and enter their rooms only to change the beds, and rake it once a week. When they get tired of living in that mess, they'll clean it up. Until then, don't let it aggravate you. It's not worth it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl whose best features are my legs. Believe me, I don't have much else, but I've been told I could make a fortune modeling hosiery. Naturally I show them off every chance I get.

Here is one girl you will never catch in pants. I always wear a dress or shorts, which brings me to my question: Are hot pants still in style for summer? And even if they aren't, should I wear them when shorts are appropriate? Thank you.

GOOD LEGS

DEAR GOOD: The "styles" today are so flexible that anything goes. Go ahead and wear hot pants. And if they catch fire, you can put them out with your pantyhose. (Get it? Panty hose!)

DEAR ABBY: My wife cannot bear children because of surgery; she has one child from a previous marriage. I am willing to adopt but I would like very much to have at least one of my own.

We understand that some young ladies will conceive a child for a barren couple through artificial insemination. We are not rich, but we can afford to pay someone well to do this for us; we are neither insensitive nor vulgar, and would take good care of the girl during her pregnancy.

We are concerned, however, about the legal aspects of this arrangement.

Our friends and relatives are equally divided about such an idea. We would appreciate your opinion and advice and any information you can provide to help us locate such a girl.

NAMELESS IF PRINTED

DEAR NAMELESS: First, consult with a lawyer about the legalities of such an arrangement. I have never heard of any girl or woman who has (or would) consider such a proposition.

THE NEW ETIQUETTE

There's a need for 'petiquette'

By MAUREEN ELENA REARDON

When a pet becomes a romping embarrassment, whose responsibility is it, the owner's or the guest's?

I talked to John Walsh, whose "Walsh's Animals" program is running on public television stations around the country. Walsh says that controlling the pet is the owner's responsibility, and that in a court of civil law the owner is liable for any damages the pet may cause.

Walsh adds that most pet owners know if their pets are dangerous or just plain nuisances, and they usually understand if their friends are skittish about animals. He says that his friends realize he has all sorts of unusual beasts around, like possums and a raccoon which pulls out threads on woolen suits.

Dog and cat hair is a special problem. Walsh says that many people keep their cat or dog's favorite chair covered with a slipcover and remove the hairy thing when guests come.

MY ADVICE to pet owners is to separate the pets from the guests unless visitors voluntarily ask to see the animals. Saying "You don't mind if Snooks is around, do you?" is an unfair question. It makes people feel like wet blankets if they say they do mind.

Parents with small children are especially nervous in the company of 100 pound beasts. What is sometimes represented as an educational experience for the young child turns into a nightmare when the animal nips, scratches or knocks the child down.

If pets are around, guests should ask before they touch them. The pet may have a sore ear and get nasty when it is given a friendly scratch. Visitors shouldn't feed other people's animals. Walsh warns against sharp bones. He also says that, like their owners, some pets are prone to fat and shouldn't be plied with food.

A READER from Endicott, N.Y., asked me to answer some questions about business etiquette which were posed in a newspaper article. What does a woman do when a man tells her he doesn't understand how such a good-looking woman can be so smart? What does a woman say when a man expresses surprise that such an intelligent woman dresses with any chic? What does a woman do who is invited to lunch at a club only to find that she has to sneak in the back door because women aren't allowed? What approach should a woman take when a man insists on paying for a business lunch, even though the woman has invited him?

The new etiquette approach to all of these problems is gentle but firm. Women who start raving about women's lib find that the word "liberation" is an instant turn-off for some men because it evokes images of strident, hard women who are trying to run the world.

It's much better to ask the man, "How would you react if I said, 'How can such a good-looking man be so smart?' How would you react if I asked you 'How does such an intelligent man as you have such good taste in clothes?' Do you think there's some relationship between creepiness or ugliness and brains?"

REGARDING the club, the wise woman would walk in the front door or leave. She should tell her host that he has put her in a very awkward position and perhaps he might reconsider his membership in a club which does not admit women at any time. I have belonged to several women's clubs, but all of them had some events in which men were included. A club which never admits people of the opposite sex is insular and old-fashioned.

The man who pays because he's "honored to dine with a lady" is denying the woman her right to be a full human being. A woman should insist upon her right to pay for a business lunch without being a sledge hammer.

(If you have questions about the new etiquette, or want to share your comments and ideas, write to Ms. Reardon in care of the Independent Press-Telegram. Questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns.)

Paris hopes to once again say, 'How sweet it is!'

By BEATA LEVY

London Financial Times — UPI

PARIS — Christmas shoppers failed to bring the usual amount of cheer to the perfume makers of France, and the industry has few illusions about prospects improving in the coming year.

The falling off in demand for perfume is not new. Gradually, over the last three years, perfume sales have been declining to a point 20 per cent below their 1970 level. Women's liberation has been seen as the primary culprit, as working women have tended to turn away from the headier scents of the past in favor of the lighter and cheaper varieties of scented toilet waters. Now, recession has come along to add a new dimension to the industry's plight.

Estimated turnover for 1974 is only 10 per cent higher than the year before which means a stagnating volume of sales, considering the rise in prices.

Admittedly, the less profitable market for scented toilet waters is growing (4.9 million four-ounce bottles sold in 1973), as is the demand for men's toiletries and scented colognes. The latter, however, only represents 9 per cent of total home production and is not expected to make spectacular advances until men get into the habit of shopping for themselves.

THE BRIGHTEST ray of hope is in exports, which in the first nine months of 1974 were already up by a quarter over 1973. Well planned export drives are paying dividends in countries like Japan, until recently only a small importer, but now the industry's eighth best client. Saudi Arabia, too, doubled its imports within a year. But no foreign market is regarded as saturated, with Brazil and the Arab world promising the fastest growth.

Germany remains the industry's top client, followed by Italy, with Belgium and Luxembourg close behind. The United States trails in fourth place — which is partly due to an earlier boycott of French goods, but also to the many licensing agreements operative on the spot.

Just how much foreign currency perfume earns for France is unknown, for the 1.2 billion francs export figure does not include royalties to firms with licensing agreements all over the world.

Dior, Guerlain and Rochas among them cover a quarter of the French perfume market. Of the three, Guerlain is in a class of its own, not only as the oldest and still one of the liveliest perfume firms but also as one without ties with the fashion world. Most of the other celebrated perfume makers have fashion house names, and being far more profitable than high fashion, have kept the couture business out of the red.

NEARLY EVERY perfume house is also in the cosmetics business. This has the advantage of year-round sales, while demand for perfume is essentially seasonal.

But today, such diversification does not go far enough to relieve the industry's greatest headache, which is the dramatic rise in the cost of the vegetable and mineral raw materials essential to high-quality perfume.

The top firms have had to decide whether to enter the mass market at the risk of debasing their luxury product, or put up with flagging sales in a limited and selected number of retail outlets to maintain their product's traditional image and mystique.

They have chosen the latter path and refused to become only a branch of the chemical industry, use synthetic ingredients, and cease to be an art form.

CHEF OF THE WEEK:

He's veteran in kitchen

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

You may have partaken of his cuisine if you served in the U.S. Army Air Forces during World War II. Karl Mangoian, today's chef of the week, says, "Cooking has been just a little more than a hobby to me. I was a mess sergeant for nearly five years, feeding from 1,200 to 2,000 at every meal.

Born in Waukegan, Ill., Mangoian was educated there and came to Long Beach in 1941 while a member of the Air Force. Although he spent several of his Air Force years in China, he never forgot Long Beach — for two reasons. He liked Our City and he had met the late Ray Bliley, one of the founders of Ray & Eddie's Market. Bliley learned to cook at the Long Beach Naval Station under the instruction of Mess Sgt. Karl Mangoian.

War over, Mangoian returned to Waukegan, but only for six months. He then came to Long Beach and the "big switch" took place. Former employee hired former boss. Mangoian joined Ray and Eddie's Market 28 years ago and has been manager of its meat department for 24 years.

ASIDE FROM HIS duties in the meat business, Mangoian also is in the photo business. He has operated his own studio in Bellflower for the past 11 years.

He has two daughters and a son: Susan Feinberg is a teacher at Cleveland Elementary School in Long Beach; Tina Marie is a student at Long Beach City College and Michael is serving in the U.S. Navy, based in Japan.

Mangoian belongs to Professional Photographers West and Long Beach Exchange Club. A member of the latter says, "He really is an expert chef. He prepares and cooks almost all the meals at special functions of the Exchange Club. He has us all spoiled." Mangoian says, "They have about four dinners a year and that's about the extent of my cooking these days."

One of Exchange Club's favorites is his Shish Kebab. Here's how he prepares it.

KARL MANGOIAN

SHISH KEBAB

- 1 6-pound leg of lamb
- 2 onions
- 1/2 bunch parsley
- Salt
- Pepper
- M.S.G.
- Sauterne wine

Remove all fat and bone from leg of lamb. Cut in 1 1/2 inch squares, chop onions and parsley and add to meat. Cover with wine and season with salt, pepper and M.S.G. to taste. Mix well and let marinate for 24 hours in refrigerator.

Kebabs can either be broiled in your range or barbecued over charcoal.

Either way, DO NOT OVERCOOK. The trick to a better shish kebab is not to overcook.

Serve with rice pilaf and a tossed green salad. Serves 6.

FASCINATING FABRICS

What's future of fake fur?

By FRANCES DIETRICH

Mrs. S. McK., Syracuse, N.Y., writes: "I'd appreciate an article on fake fur."

This intriguing pile fabric, which imitates real fur, will look and feel more like the real thing than ever in 1975. However, manufacturers, wary of economic vagaries, will provide fewer styles, colors and weights.

Improved quality is a combination of events. Mills, which specialize in fake fur types, know consumers are more selective when inflation is rampant. Secondly, new processes such as Glenoit's "Naturizer" which imparts a silkier feel and softer drape and new knitting machines specifically for high pile fabric have come on stream.

In spite of, or because of, economic doldrums, luxuriousness in clothing and home furnishing has high appeal. Consequently, the milk look is featured by top fake fur makers in step with renewed fashion interest in the real thing.

At the other extreme of the fashion scale, the rugged plainsman look of shearling is expected to be a top seller in sportswear. Imitation seal, lamb, lynx and civet cat are in between, with fox and raccoon featured as the "long hairs."

WHAT FIBERS are best for fake fur fabric? Modacrylic, which launched the fake fur industry, is still preferred. It provides strength, warmth and bounce. But modacrylic in a blend with mohair is even better as the mohair contributes extra strength, more luster.

Next in favor is acrylic, another famous fake fur fiber. Whether you're buying a ready-made fake fur top or coat or sewing one at home, look for fabric made by the knitting process. Check the underside of the fabric.

Slivers of fiber knit into a polyester or cotton backing provide a denser pile on the face of the fabric. There's less weight, more warmth than with flocked, tufted or woven fake furs. Knit fake furs drape better, are more pliable for home sewing.

When buying a fake fur coat, be sure it's lined. This makes it easier to slip on and off and adds to the illusion of a real fur garment. Lining also acts as a buffer against static.

Dressy, quality fake fur coats benefit from dry-cleaning with the fur method. Dark imitation fur does not require cleaning for two years.

IT'S SURPRISINGLY easy to sew with fake fur. Make a stunning topper to wear with a wool skirt or pants, accessorized with head scarf or a narrow-brimmed hat. Select a pattern with a minimum of seams. Make pattern alterations and length adjustment before shopping for fabric. You can often save money this way.

Fabric with definite pelt markings need to be matched; will require more fabric than a curly, nondesign or one with scattered markings. As pile fabric has a nap, check the "with nap" yardage requirements on back of the pattern envelope.

Straight stitching or zigzag stitch may be used. Thread with a degree of elasticity such as a combination polyester and cotton, or spun polyester is suitable. Use a No. 14 sewing machine needle and approximately 8 to 10 stitches per inch.

Other supplies needed are preshrunk twill tape for stabilizing shoulder seams, and closures such as braid frogs, leather tabs or hooks and rings. Buttons may be used with a bound buttonhole faced with grosgrain ribbon.

Give a purchased or home-sewn fake fur garment good care in exchange for more enduring beauty. After wear, hang it up promptly on a padded hanger. Provide a little extra closet room, so the coat is not mashed in among other clothes.

Shirt pantsuit now a classic

Look absolutely right and relaxed this spring in that "forever classic," the shirt pantsuit. The Ginori flair for line is evident in every detail of Printed Pattern M402 — in the neat, nifty cut of the jacket with shirt-tail sides and in the fit and flare of the pants. Top stitching in the same or a contrast color points up pockets, collar, tabbed front. Wear the shirt top by itself over the pants or layer it over a turtleneck sweater. Choose doubleknit wool, linen, gabardine denim or polyester knits.

Printed Pattern M402 is available in misses' sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) jacket and pants require 3 1/2 yards 60-inch fabric.

Please send $1.25 for Printed Pattern M402 to Independent Press-Telegram, Pattern Department, P.O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 25 cents for each pattern for first class mail and special handling.) Please print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

After initial shock, economical in terms of service have abandoned Rolls-Royceism. Industrially, it is out of favor, for the modern world seems to demand cheaper, more and worse rather than few, dearer and better. The trend has been inexorably toward mass-produced, semidisposable consumer goods.

When British industry re-gearred itself after World War II, its leaders eagerly espoused the ideals of growth and mass market, and set out to produce the whole range of industrial products, aircraft to thumbtacks. "Britain Can Make It" was the slogan of the 1950s — "Badly," the cynics added.

Philosophically, too, the British have been retreating from elitism. It seems to fly in the face of their egalitarian principles and they have tried hard to eliminate specialness of all sorts. Middling people in a middling state have all too often seemed the aim.

IN ALL THIS Rolls-Royce can stand exemplar. In some ways the company's outlook is very old-fashioned. The notion of a tremendously expensive, craftsman-built automobile is itself an anomaly, even perhaps a vulgarity in a world short not just of oil, but actually of food.

On the other hand, the idea of an artifact made to last is very up-to-date: a wise Rolls owner need never trade in his car at all, for it will almost certainly outlive him, and by maintaining its value it may prove to be, in the long run, the most economical car he could buy.

As to profitability, there is no doubt that Rolls-Royce can pay its way, if not in the general, at least in the particular (it was the aero-engines, not the cars, that dragged the company into ignominy in 1971). Lesser assembly lines all over the world are lurching toward recession; the stately Rolls line moves steadily on, 10 a day or $300,000 worth.

The Rolls-Royce motor car, with its unchanging devotion to detail and durability, demonstrates alternatives which can look archaic, even economical, on the surface, but may prove to be highly contemporary underneath.

'SWAN LAKE,' possibly Tchaikovsky's greatest ballet, will be staged by American Ballet Theater in the Music Center Pavilion at the Saturday matinee and the evenings of Feb. 23 and 24. At right are Jonas Kage as Siegfried and Martine van Hamel as Odile.

ONE OF TWO premieres for Los Angeles by American Ballet Theater this season is the Petipa-Minkus 'La Bayadere.' Shown above are Eleanor D'Antuono and Ted Kivitt. At left is Los Angeles-born Cynthia Gregory who, with Ivan Nagy, will dance in the ballet opening night.

ROLE OF the beautiful doll in the center, right, is created by Gelsey Kirkland in Delibes' 'Coppelia' to be staged in the Music Center Pavilion at the matinee and evening performances Wednesday and the matinee March 1.

Premieres, for ABT's opening

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Monday, American Ballet Theater will open a 15-performance engagement in the Music Center Pavilion which will run through March 2.

The company, now in its 35th season, has fostered many dancers' careers and this engagement will have impact on the lives of five little Long Beach girls. On Feb. 28, Melinda Silverman, Nancy Briggs, Elizabeth Siegfried, Darla Saidi and Heather Mills, who range in age from 4 1/2 to 10 years, will dance in the opening scenes of "Etudes," a ballet which shows the development of a dancer from early training to professional status.

The girls are students at the Judith Siegfried Academy of Ballet in Long Beach. Ms Siegfried is a former member of American Ballet Theater. A native of Long Beach, she has recently returned to teach. Other of her students will dance in "Swan Lake" and "Giselle."

THE OPENING NIGHT bill will include two Los Angeles premieres and two revivals. In the premieres, Cynthia Gregory and Ivan Nagy will dance in "La Bayadere" (Petipa-Minkus); and Eleanor D'Antuono and Fernando Bujones in the "Diana and Acteon" pas de deux (Vaganova-Pugni). Gelsey Kirkland and Ted Kivitt will dance in "Theme and Variations" (Balanchine-Tchaikovsky); and Marcos Paredes, Terry Orr, Martine van Hamel, Gayle Young, Sallie Wilson and Keith Lee will dance in "The River" (Ailey-Ellington).

On Tuesday, "La Bayadere" will return with van Hamel and Jonas Kage. Also on the program will be "Dark Elegies" (Tudor-Mahler) with Wilson, Bonnie Mathis, Young, Orr, Karena Brock and Buddy Balough; "Unfinished Symphony" (Van Dyk-Schubert) with Gregory and Michael Denard of the Paris Opera Ballet in his Los Angeles debut; and "The River" with Kage, Kirkland, van Hamel and Lee.

THE FULL-LENGTH "Coppelia" (Martinez-Delibes) will be staged matinee and evening on Wednesday. At the matinee, it will be danced by Kirkland, Bujones and Balough; in the evening, Gregory, Denard and Balough will perform.

No performances are scheduled Thursday or Friday. "Swan Lake" will be danced at the Saturday matinee by van Hamel and Kage. On Saturday evening, D'Antuono and Nagy will appear in "La Bayadere;" Gregory, van Hamel, Kage and Charles in the Los Angeles premiere of "Gemini" (Tetley-Henze); Kirkland and Kivitt in the "Le Corsaire" pas de deux; and D'Antuono and Bujones in "Theme and Variations."

Bolet to direct L.B. Symphony

When Long Beach Symphony Orchestra plays the fourth subscription concert of the season Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Wilson High School Auditorium, conductor Alberto Bolet will direct works by Berlioz, Brahms and Dvorak.

Guest artist will be violinist Yukiko Kamei who is on the teaching faculty of the University of California, Santa Barbara.

She will perform the Violin Concerto by Johannes Brahms. Bolet also will conduct the orchestra in Berlioz' Beatrice et Benedict Overture, and Dvorak's "Symphony No. 8".

Miss Kamei began the study of the violin in Tokyo when she was 7. When she received a scholarship at Scripps College in 1967, she came to the United States and later was chosen as a student of Jascha Heifetz in his master class at USC. She has performed frequently in both solo and chamber programs, notably with Gregor Piatigorsky and Heifetz. In June 1972, she was invited to become one of the original members of the Sitka Summer Music Festival in Alaska.

She made her Tokyo debut in 1972 and in 1974 returned to perform with the Japan Philharmonic, the Tokyo Metropolitan Orchestra and the Yomiuri Nippon Symphony.

AT THE SATURDAY concert, paintings by Daniel Aikman, a local artist, will be on display in the lobby. He also has had a long career in the theater under the name of John Roberts.

Concert tickets may be purchased at the Long Beach Symphony Association office, 121 Linden Ave., and at Wallichs and Liberty ticket agencies.

In preparation for the concert, the Symphony Guild has scheduled a preview meeting Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. in Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St. Fred Ohlenborg will discuss the Zukerman's only recital in L.B.

Violinist Pinchas Zukerman will play his only Southern California recital this year in Long Beach next Sunday at 8:15 p.m. in Millikan High School Auditorium, 2800 Snowden Ave.

Concert Tuesday at LBSU

Paul Polynick will conduct a chamber music concert Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater of Long Beach State University. To honor the centenary of the birth of Maurice Ravel, the program will include Ravel's "Trois Poemes de Stephane Mallarme" for voice, piano, two flutes, two clarinets and string quartet. Other numbers will be "Two Poems of Balmont" and "Three Japanese Lyrics" by Stravinsky, the world premiere of Henri Lazarof's Third Chamber Concerto and new works by two young California composers, Joseph Julian and Clare Franco.

This program is one of the "Monday Evening Concerts on Tuesday Evenings in Long Beach" series. General admission is $3. Free parking is available.

Two buses will bring Los Angeles and Pasadena residents to join the Long Beach audience. Among the visitors will be cellist Gregor Piatigorsky and Mrs. Piatigorsky; Mr. and Mrs. Danny Kaye; conductor Lawrence Foster and Mrs. Foster; Gordon Davidson, artistic director of the Mark Taper Forum, and Mrs. Davidson; and Ernest Fleischmann, executive director of the Southern California Symphony-Hollywood Bowl Association, and Mrs. Fleischmann.

The recital is under auspices of the Long Beach Auxiliary to the SCS-HBA. Pianist Meg Bachman Vas will perform with Zukerman. On the program is the Bach Sonata No. 2 in D Major for Viola da Gamba and Piano, the Brahms Sonata in E Flat Major for Viola and Piano, the Debussy Sonata in G Minor, Two Caprices for Violin Alone and Cantabile for Violin and Piano by Paganini, and Polonaise Brillante by Wieniawski.

BORN IN Israel in 1948, Zukerman first studied violin with his father. In

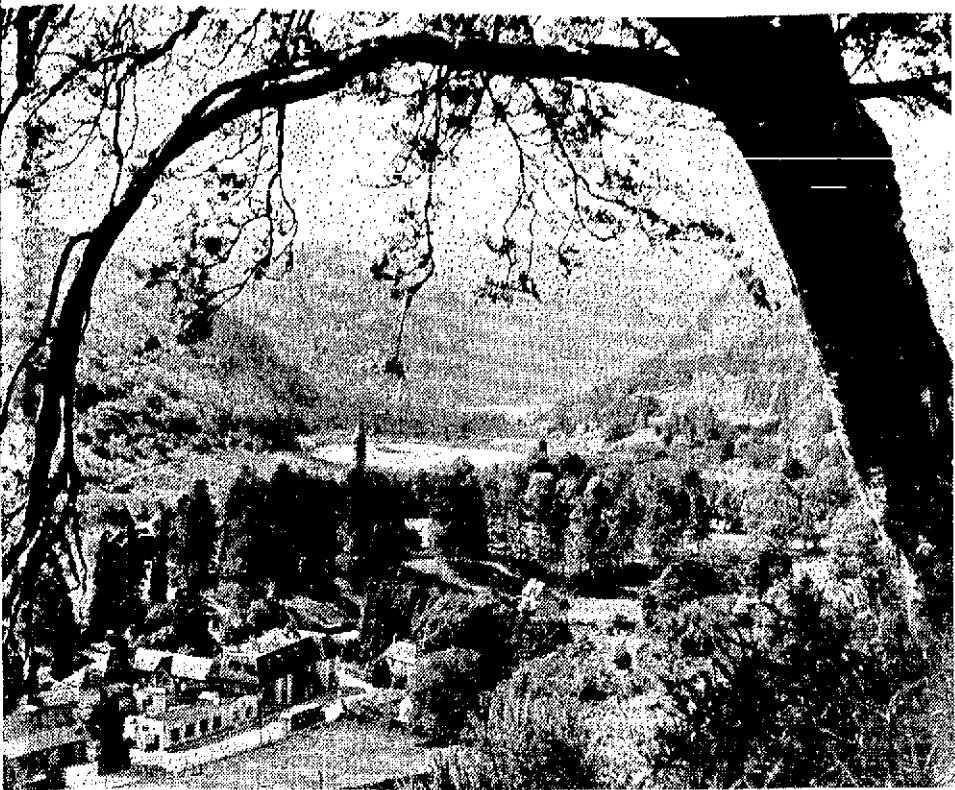

PINCHAS ZUKERMAN

1961, Isaac Stern and Pablo Casals, appearing at the First Festival of Music in Israel, heard him and recommended advanced studies in the United States. He entered Juilliard, won the Leventritt Award in 1967, made his New York debut with the New York Philharmonic in February, 1969, and is now one of the busiest young violinists in the world.

Tickets are on sale at Humphrey's Music Store, 231 Pine Ave. and will be available at the box office after 6 p.m. on the night of the concert.

GLENDALOUGH MEANS VALLEY OF THE TWO LAKES

RISH HOSPITALITY AWAITS Exploring Emerald Isle

The Irish Republic is 26 peaceful counties of wooded hillsides, limestone cliffs, verdant valleys, lakes and streams and sandy beaches, busy cities and fantasy villages.

One of the marvels of this small island, so irrevocably linked to America, is its variety. The southwest coastline is rimmed with an endless series of spectacular bays, quiet inlets and immense beaches that make up its four peninsular fingers, while up in Donegal dramatic mountains dominate the landscape.

In between are the spectral ruins of abbeys and castles, thatched-roofed villages and the misty greens and silvers of such musical place names as Lisdoonvarna, the Knockmealdown Mountains, Connemara and the River Cloone.

The far-off hills are truly green and the Irish full of wit and friendliness. Time seems suspended when, in the long summer months, the light of day lasts until nearly midnight.

There's something for visitors at any time of year. The sportsman may choose from 200 golf courses, fish countless rivers and lakes, hunt, or even ride to hounds. Less active can enjoy the horse races or the Gaelic version of football.

IN IRELAND NO language barrier limits enjoyment of the country's music and drama celebrations. A visit to the Abbey Theatre in Dublin is almost imperative and the Wexford Opera Festival in October combines ten rousing days of grand opera with concerts, recitals, pub singing and a film festival.

Night people join in singing the old ballads at the local pubs, dancing at a supper club or a swinging discotheque, or just sitting back to be charmed by an authentic Irish Cabaret group.

Eating in Ireland can be a kind of entertainment in itself. According to a United Nations study, the Irish are the world's best fed people. The Irish breakfast is a fine example. It is normally comprised of fruit, hot porridge, eggs, the sweet Irish bacon called gammon, and of course, the incomparable brown bread which has become almost a national dish.

Where else in the world would two kinds of potatoes be served at dinner? The Irish take their potatoes very seriously and have been known to debate the merits of one kind over another throughout an entire meal.

The seafood is justly famous; in fact, every morning the products of the south coast waters are flown fresh to Paris, there to appear on the tables of gourmet restaurants.

Every traveler should partake, at least once, of a mediaeval banquet served in an ancient Irish castle. The feast at Bunratty, close to Shannon, is accompanied by costumed singers while at Knapogue, in the same area, a pageant of Irish history is performed nightly.

There are those who say Ireland is heaven on earth and shoppers would be the first to agree. At Shannon, the grand-daddy of duty-free airport shops, everything from French perfumes to Swiss watches are available at a fraction of the normal price. Always tempting are the Irish products themselves—Aran sweaters, tweeds, Georgian silver and Waterford crystal.

GETTING AROUND in Ireland is especially easy. There's plenty of room on the excellent network of roads with nobody behind to hurry the driver who slows for a longer look at the lovely countryside. Car rentals are inexpensive and available to anyone between 23 and 70 with a valid U. S. driving license.

For the non-driver, a well designed system of railroads and buses will take him anywhere in the country. And for those with the time, there's fun and adventure to be found in caravanning in a horse-drawn wagon reminiscent of the American Conestoga wagon but complete with sleeping and cooking facilities. Friendly farmers permit the horses to graze overnight in their fields.

Finally, and best of all perhaps, Ireland is easy on the pocketbook. At the bottom of the price scale are the bed and breakfast guesthouses and farms where for about $4 the traveler can spend the night in a clean room, often with a view, followed by one of the hearty Irish breakfasts already described.

At first class hotels in Dublin and throughout the country, the cost, including breakfast, averages about $13.50 per person.

GAL-IVANTING

Tracing family lineage

By CHORAL PEPPER

We walked through the palace's portrait-studded salons looking for a club. Our Michelin guide book told how the House of Braganza once ruled Portugal, but it stopped short of mentioning our old friend Bill.

Many of us fantasize romantic progenitors. Smiths invariably descend from the indefatigable John and every Burns is a direct descendant of Robert, but never before have I known an American who evolved from the kingly Portuguese line of Braganza.

Sufi is the story of Palm Springs publisher Bill Knyvett whose family history is the history of Portugal.

Before the 60 years that Spain held Portugal, the House of Braganza ruled from a 13th century castle in old Vila Vicosa. When the Portuguese threw off the Spanish yoke in 1640, a Braganza duke assumed the throne and King John IV and his heirs ruled for 167 years.

WHAT happened next had far-reaching consequences. Napoleon began his campaign of conquest and in 1807 declared Portugal's throne vacant. Lucky to escape with their lives, King John and his royal family fled to Brazil, where he transferred his court and set up a new monarchy.

The interim Portuguese regime proved weak, however, and a decade later John VI was recalled by his royal subjects. Appointing his elder son Peter as regent of Brazil, John sailed back to Lisbon where he ruled until his death in 1826.

Then ensued the usual family power struggle. By 1911, things were in such a mess that the people arose and abolished the monarchy forever. The Braganzas fled under pressure to wherever they could find asylum.

Meanwhile, back in Brazil, the family fared little better. During a revolution in 1889, son Peter was overthrown and driven into exile. Although an infant at the time, Bill Knyvett's mother was banished with her royal parents and that was the end of the House of Braganza in Brazil.

Many years later, in middle age, she and her husband migrated to Canada where they died and left Bill an orphan shortly after he was born. His only knowledge of his illustrious ancestry has been acquired from a few family mementos and history books.

THIS LOVELY hillside city was established in the 13th century as the Ducal Court of the Braganzas. A 15th century Ducal Palace is the prime sight-seeing target for travelers journeying between Lisbon and Madrid, but a lesser-known 13th century Braganza Castle in the old part of town is more romantic.

Perched on the crest of a marble hill, its winding, cobblestone approach lined with whitewashed houses and pink, blue and yellow flowers spilling from window boxes is in deceptive contrast to the formidable fortress.

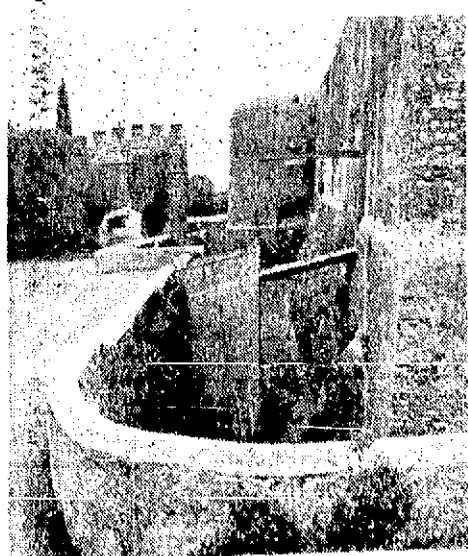

Within the ramparts, a moat, drawbridge, serrated watch towers and threatening dungeons graphically describe the violence of those feudal days.

Knyvett will be proud to learn that the old place has been kept up well. Vaulted ceilings, mosaic floors and walls 12 feet thick protect a library of family records. The lower floor has been turned into an archaeological museum, but Braganza relics are still preserved on upper levels.

The three rooms display ancient weapons used in the Battle of Montes Carlos that took place a few miles away and confirmed Portugal's independence from Spain.

After exploring the castle, curiosity lured us to the Ducal Palace in town where a gallery of Braganza portraits had been left by King Carlos I.

Known to history as the "painter king," Carlos was prolific, if nothing else. Ancestor after ancestor stared down from the palace's lofty walls — fat ones, thin ones, lecherous, haughty, pious and meek ones. In each the family resemblance was remarkable, possibly because the artist was revealing himself.

Scandinavia sets spring scene for all of Europe

By HERB SHANNON
I.P.T. Travel Editor

STOCKHOLM, Sweden A midwinter spring has sprung in Europe. It's too soon to be sure, but the odds are at least eight to five that the official vernal equinox on March 21 will be the balmiest in three decades.

My notes on this speedy seasonal sampling of Scandinavia record clear skies and brilliant sunshine four days out of six in the capitals of Denmark and Sweden, normally on the fringe of the frigid zone at this time of the year.

With winter only half gone, the surroundings of Danish artist Niels Dam Ravn's home in a suburb of Copenhagen could double for a Dublin shamrock stage set. Not a single snowfall has altered the whimsical shapes of his garden sculpture, and Mrs. Dam Ravn has no need of a florist to supply bouquets for her bountiful smorrebrod luncheon table.

Here in Stockholm, ducks slide on ice in the ponds of the Skansen outdoor museum, but the thermometer in the sheltered shade of the air shaft outside my hotel window stays glued to a brisk but temperate reading of 36 degrees most of the day. Sparse snow in the countryside means tough sledding for the nearby ski centers.

IN EVERY language, Europeans are singing of springtime. In Spain and Italy, the calles and piazzas resound to the lyrics of "Primavera." The French prefer "Printemps" and have erected a monument to the word in the form of an elegant Paris department store by that name.

The banks of the Rhine are "Springen" to the season, flower power is rippling Dutch tulip beds with color, brooks babble again in the foothills of the frozen Alps and the nightingales are heading back to Berkeley Square.

This year the festival, fair and frolic season gets off to a fast start from Algiers to Zagreb. Heading the big parade of European events is Ireland's annual tribute to St. Patrick, a week-long Gaelic gala starting March 15. After two months for recovery comes the Irish Maytime Festival of music, sports, dramatic arts and social events.

Here in Scandinavia, Copenhagen's famous

Tivoli Gardens welcomes visitors from May 1, opera Swedish style comes to Stockholm's Royal Drottningholm four times weekly from mid-May, and the Bergen Music Festival in Norway presents recitals in the house of composer Grieg from May 21 to June 4.

APRIL IS the month for combining business with pleasure at the Swedish to 11 p.m. weekdays, 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. next Sunday.

FOR THOSE who wish to concentrate on learning a foreign language while taking a visual holiday through slides, Nancy Michel Van Meter again presents "Frenfor Travelers," a program of the Office of Continuing Education, CalState University, Long Beach.

The course includes 10 weekly meetings on Tuesday evenings from March 4 to May 13, take-home tape recordings for language practice, and the instructor's class manual. Registration fee of $35 may be made at the first meeting, 7 p.m. March 4 in the auditorium of Dana Branch Public Library, 3680 Atlantic Ave.

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

Affording Europe isn't a fantasy

By JANE MORSE

Doctor, you've got to help me. I'm clearly crazier than any patient you've ever had.

I know I can't possibly afford Europe, but here I am, surviving in considerable style. Worse, I keep running into downright bargains. Since that's not possible, I'm mad, right?

Take now. I'm writing to you from the antique-furnished bedroom of a 17th-century Dutch mansion alongside one of Amsterdam's utterly beguiling canals, smack in the best part of town, within walking distance of almost anywhere you'd want to go.

I am paying $14 a day for the privilege (my mansion is one of five houses forming the Ambassade Hotel) and that includes taxes, tips and breakfast of ham, eggs, cheese, bread, butter, jam and tea, served in a delicately pretty, uncarpeted room whose 10-foot-high windows frame street scenes that look like Bruegel paintings come alive. Luxurious it's not (no bars, no restaurants, no TV), but uniquely charming it is.

Last night I went out for rijsttafel dinner (one or two hundred spicy little minute, but in summer try thinking a month ahead.

"Morning, love," says the green grocer when I amble in for some apples. "Here's your Guardian," says the news agent pulling my reserved copy from under the counter.

Perhaps living so much out of a suitcase has made my nesting urges greater than other people's; nonetheless, I suspect there are plenty of travelers who like navigating around new supermarkets, brewing their own coffee, learning new neighborhoods.

MOST OF THE flats I've rented over the years have been elegant in the overall but less so in the particular. My Chelsea Cloisters single, for example, was tastefully furnished with a single bed, dressing table, two chairs and a side table and clean where it counted.

Basically, however, it was one approximately 9-by-12-foot room with separate bath and snuggler than a pair of just-washed jeans. The "kitchen" fit into a small closet, and the sink was not quite as large as a man's handkerchief. Still, there was a stove and a refrigerator and, with the help of a deli, you could put together a dinner party.

When feeling reclusive, of course, you could stir up something for one, put up your feet and watch the color "telly." The programming is good, and reception is so much superior to American that you wonder why we don't bring back the old Empire.

British plumbing and heating may have laid away that notion. All my apartments have suffered some problem with their insides, and Chelsea Cloisters was no exception. Although there was indeed central heating, in my apartment it didn't work.

However, the neighbors' flats "leaked" some of theirs so I hardly used the electric heater the management brought in. Dripping faucets and toilets stubborn about flushing are something else, and in London I suspect they're around to stay.

THERE ARE other things one would never suspect. I learned the hard way to inquire before renting if the hot water was constant hot water, if the central heat was 24-hour central heat, if there were any gadgets that had to be fed coins to function, and if filling the bathtub to the brim would cause overflow problems.

I'll bet that last item is one you'd never have guessed. I didn't until a few years ago when a shopkeeper from below who got, shall we say, soaked came charging up intent on doing me bodily injury. I suppose you wonder how I find these places. I wish I could give you an answer indicating shrewd judgment. But I've usually plucked mine straight out of a newspaper. Additionally, the British Tourist Authority does have a list of furnished accommodations in London along with names of rental agents who handle them. Right now I notice they're ranging in price from as little as $30 weekly to as much as $100 daily. Exceptions abound, but there's also usually a minimum rental period of three or four weeks and a hefty cash deposit requirement.

Indonesian dishes; but when I ordered the king-size version ($7), the horrified waiter said, "Oh, no, that's too much!" and cut me back to the $5 extravaganza. He was right, so what can I say? Excuse me, Europe, for underspending?

The other day in London I tried out the pub around the corner and had three plate-filling slices of cold roast beef, a lettuce and cucumber salad, a tomato and onion salad, a Waldorf salad, about a third of a loaf of French bread and a bill for $1.50.

I also meandered off with a friend to the ultrachic Walton's restaurant for an evening meal that took us through four courses, four hours and $60. Believe it or not, it was a steal (for its type), particularly since we added two bottles of vintage German wine and a half a dozen drinks.

I DON'T KNOW if you're ready for this, but I also stayed in one of the poshest parts of London for slightly less than $11 a day. I know, I know, but I swear I'm not fantasizing.

Chelsea Cloisters on Sloane Avenue is what's known as a "block of service flats."

That's British for a collection of mini-apartments, furnished and with maid service. Most such places are in the "short let" business; and anytime I've ever been staying three weeks or more, they're what I've sought out.

I like them most of all because living outside a hotel makes me feel like a native. In winter, service flats can usually be reserved even at the last

"Echoes of Antiquity", a 22-day group inclusive tour of the ancient land of the Phoenicians, Egyptians and Greeks—plus a cruise of the Greek islands—with escort from Los Angeles is featured this spring by Scandinavian Airlines and Ask Mr. Foster Travel Service with seven departures starting April 27.

Departing by SAS jetliner for Copenhagen, the tour will arrive the following day in time for an introduction to the night life of Denmark's capital. After sightseeing and lunch next day, the tour will depart by jet for Lebanon, the ancient city ruled by the Phoenicians 2,500 years ago.

After a restful night in a modern hotel by the sea the tour will leave for the Middle East's most teeming city, Beirut, for side trips to the 70-centuries-old excavations at Byblos and Dog River, as well as the Roman temples of Bacchus and Venus at Baalbek.

A flight to Cairo will introduce the tour to six days of the magnificent treasures of Egypt including the great Pyramids, the Sphinx, the treasure of King Tut, the city of Luxor, and ancient Thebes where the pharaohs erected vast temples to their gods in the Valley of the Kings and Queens. Through the desert-land the tour will proceed by air conditioned train to Aswan and the New High Dam down the Nile by hydrofoil to the magnificent temples of Ramses II and Nofretari his Queen at Abu Simbel.

THE TOUR will return to Cairo for a day before departing for Athens across the Mediterranean Sea

Swiss bus drivers well trained Tourists settling comfortably into their seats on a Swiss postal motorcoach, about to muscle its way up winding mountain roads to airplane heights rarely think of who's up front.

That's the man behind the wheel who is about to take the bright yellow bus with its picture windows up one of Switzerland's 21 passes, 15 of which are over 6,000 feet high.

One passenger remarked: "I assume if he can hold the steering wheel he'll get us where we're going."

The training of Swiss drivers who must negotiate breathtaking heights and tortuous, twisting roads snaking up formidable mountains is hardly that casual.

To qualify as a driver of a Swiss postal motorcoach, a candidate must serve a four-year apprenticeship as a mechanic and then spend one year driving a heavy truck without an accident. Only then can he apply for the job.

SINCE nearly all professionals and craftsmen in Switzerland must be licensed, prospective drivers then take rigid intelligence, mechanical and medical examinations. He should be ready then, you say? Not by Swiss standards

He has merely qualified to work as a mechanic in the main bus garage in Berne. After a year, an eager prospect is bursting for the opportunity to take a bus up the demanding Alpine roadways. Still, not yet. First he will be given laid windows protected passengers from the caprices of weather.

Today, the bus that climbs mountains is an intriguing way to get close to nature's changing moods in the Alps. Day tours over the Grimsel, Furka and Susten Passes offer travelers seasonal changes in a matter of hours.

The trip can begin in summer warmth and then proceed up past tranquil villages, flowering Alpine pastures to the rocky heights where the air has a frosty chill.

Information about postal motorcoach tours of Switzerland is available free by writing to the Swiss National Tourist Office, 661 Market Street, San Francisco, CA 94105.

Take a fast boat down to Budapest

Zippering down the Danube in a gleaming white Hydrofoil may not be what Johann Strauss had in mind when he wrote the Waltz of the Blue Danube, but for today's tourist in Slovakia, this is the thing to do.

But you have to get up early to catch the boat. From May 11 to September 1, the Raketa, a 50-foot Hydrofoil, whose name means "Rocket", leaves from the Boat Basin in Bratislava, historic capital of Slovakia, at 6 a.m. for a three-hour trip down the Danube.

At Budapest, passengers have a six-hour layover for luncheon before returning to Bratislava at 7:30 p.m. The Raketa leaves every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

On alternate days, the boat goes to Vienna, again leaving at 6 a.m., and allowing passengers a six-hour visit in Austria.

The 64-passenger Hydrofoil, with an inside cabin decorated with lace curtains and flowers, has a snack bar serving Czech beer, wine and sandwiches. The round trip fare to either city is $14 for adults; $7.40 for children.

Come quick.
Go non-stop.

Only Mexicana Airlines jets you non-stop to Guadalajara. That's important. The less time it takes to get there, the more time you'll have to enjoy it. It's not just quick. It's easy. Just make your reservations, pick up your tourist card (get it free at the Mexicana counter in minutes), and you're ready to go.

Get to know it like we do.

Guadalajara is a city of parks, plazas and gay fiestas. You'll love the strolling mariachis. A smile is about all it takes for them to break out in a song.

Ride a carriage past lovely old colonial buildings. Tour a tequila distillery. Visit the museums. It's all waiting for you in Guadalajara.

Save dollars. Spend pesos.

A vacation in Guadalajara is a bargain. Especially if you take one of our low-cost tours. The shops are tempting. And a dollar is still worth 12½ pesos, so you'll come home with some excellent buys.

Get to know Guadalajara like we do. Fly Mexicana, the airline that flies to all of Mexico.

Get out of London for best buys

By STAN DELAPLANE

London

English journalist writes me: "No matter what the Arabs are up to or how gloomy the daily papers, pubs and restaurants seem to be doing as well as ever. Don't expect to walk into a popular restaurant without a booking.

"This is NOT what we are reporting. Officially the Government says tourist business from the States fell off one-fourth last year. Somewhat made up for by 10 per cent increase from the Continent, diplomatic missions from the new African countries — whose bills I think we pay hoping for future orders — and always the wealthy Arabs who seem to stand out more than they did before.

"Prices shooting up all around — but so it goes all over the world."

BRITAIN STILL seems cheaper to me — and friends I talked to — than France or Germany. For one thing, we can speak the language. Thus we aren't forced into the most expensive restaurants and hotels.

Best bet in Britain is to get OUT of London. It's always overcrowded anyway.

There are fine country farmhouses ($5-$8 bed and breakfast). And cozy country village hotels (about $20 for two, bed and breakfast.)

Lists are free from British Tourist Authority, 612 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, 90017: Farmhouse Accommodations and Commended Country Hotels.

"We want to take our children on a tour through Washington, D.C. . . ."

You write your Congressman. They can't do enough for you — you'll probably get a letter asking you to call at his office. Friends of mine did this. Got a half hour chat with the Senator AND he sent one of the office help to show them around. A half day guided tour. Love those voters!

Washington is well fixed for tourists with all sorts of guided tours — lots of them free. Ask your Congressman to have advance literature sent to you.

"Can we buy paperback books — like novels — in Europe written in English?"

Yes. The big tourist hotels have them on the newsstand — fresh from the U.S. (Always find them on a Hilton newsstand.) Also lot of Penguin paperbacks from England. (They have top job mystery stories.)

Paperbacks in Europe will cost about twice what you'd pay at home. But it's either that or lie in bed and stare at the ceiling.

You WON'T find English language paperbacks in small towns. So buy them at the big tourist hotels before you take off for the country.

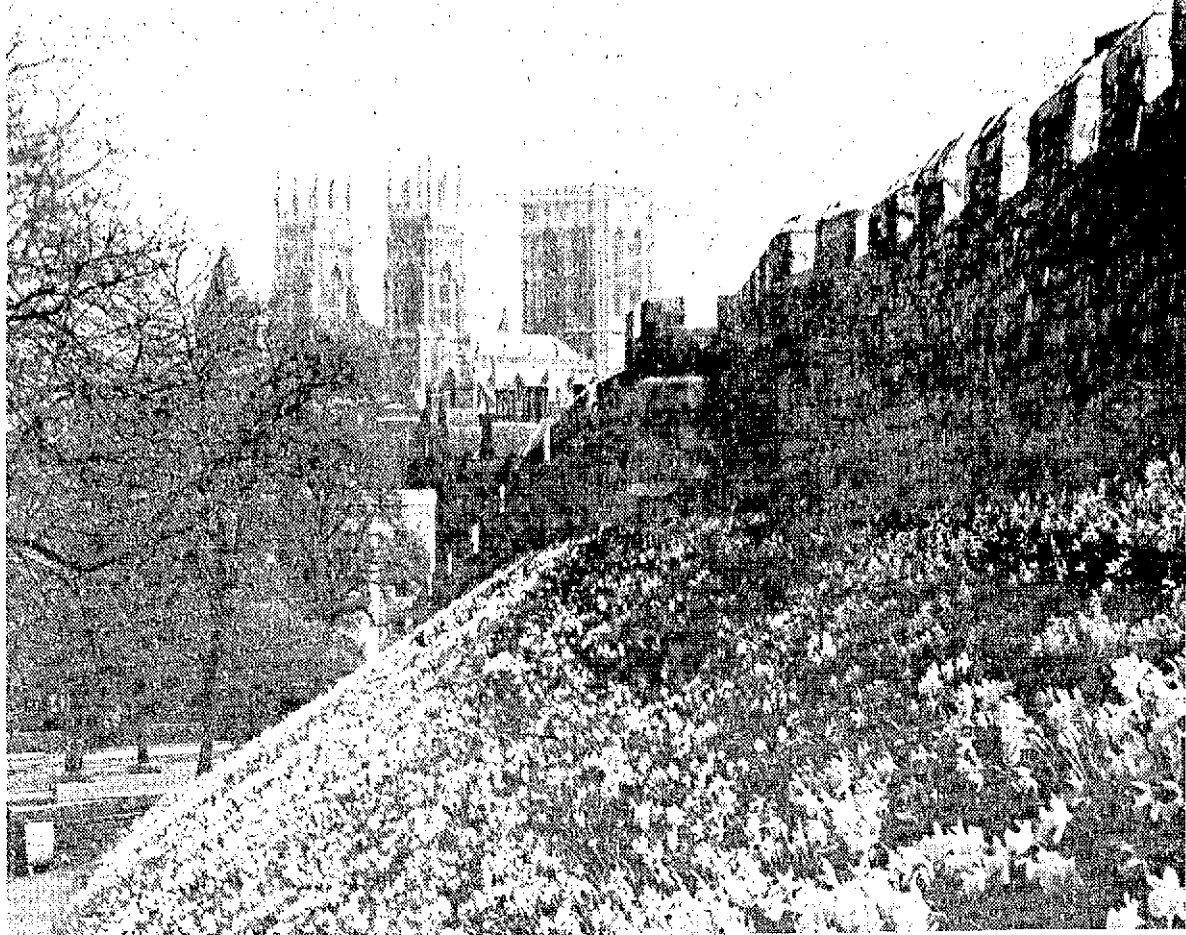

"How do we get our mail in Europe?"

Have it addressed to you then the words "Poste Restante" then name of the city. In the main post office, you'll see a window marked "Poste Restante." Go there and ask for your mail.

The words "Poste Restante" are used in ALL European countries. You'll even find a "Poste Restante" window at the London post office.

As an alternate, you can have mail sent "hold for arrival" to the biggest hotel in town — even if you aren't staying there. You pick it up from the concierge — the man behind the desk with crossed keys on the lapels of his uniform. (And if you tip him something like a half a buck you might get enough smile to see if he's wearing dentures.)

If it's forwarded money in some form that you're expecting, you could have it sent care of American Express. It could make it easier to cash right on the spot.

SPRING brings flowers to Britain like no place else in the world. Here, daffodils dot ramparts of wall at York like snow. Famous York Minster looms in the background.

The year of sauce centenary in Britain

By ANDREW GLAZE

"Hereford, Gloucester and Worcester" isn't "Hertford, Hereford and Hampshire" as in "My Fair Lady."

But it is the acme of Englishness. Three state-ly and lovely cathedral towns in western Eng-land, they form a triangle about 30 miles a side, at the Welsh border.

Hereford is famed in the popular mind for cows. Gloucester for cheese and Worcester for steak sauce and china.

All things for which England is pre-eminent. A government commission recently upset the ar-rangements of ages and formed the three counties about these towns into two. But the local people knew better. There are still three, in their minds.

They happen to be three distinctly different places which happen to be neigh-bors. Such good neighbors that the cathedrals have taken turns for 260 years hosting what is believed to be the oldest musical festival in the world.

It's "The Three Choirs Festival" in which musical resources of the three cathedrals join for a week's splendid singing and playing. This year it's to take place in Worcester August 17 through 23.

Two famous and pictur-esque rivers bound the triangle in which the three towns sit. The Wye, famous for its salmon, meanders through hilly country from Hereford to the Severn estuary just below Gloucester.

The river is famous for the Severn bore, which is not a longwinded fisher-man but a tidal wave.

When the celestial pos-itions are correct, which is two to seven times a month, ships can ride northwest from the Sev-ern estuary to Gloucester on moon power.

It's possible to buy a booklet locally which gives times and places and points out the best points of vantage to see the bore pass.

Gloucester used to be the Roman Glevum, a name of which the Anglo Saxons made short work, preferring multiple syllab-les with lots of conso-nants. It was already Gloucester when King John decided he preferred it to London and King Henry III was crowned there.

Worcester's Cathedral stands by the river in a scenic spot which looks as though it were designed by John Constable. Bad old King John is buried there. His effigy is unre-pentant, proud, imperious and petulant. Worcester has always exemplified his royalist viewpoint. It was faithful to the king throughout the Civil War and is still called "The Faithful City" on its coat of arms.

Though 40 miles inland, it still takes ocean-going ships. Its newspaper, the Worcester Postman, (1690) is the oldest English newspaper still published. Local industries are dis-tributed equally among old and new. A new firm established last year tests aircraft engines. Worces-ter Royal Porcelain has been made at the works on Severn Street for 200 years. Worcestershire sauce will be celebrating its 200th anniversary this year.

Charles II was beaten by Cromwell in a disas-trous battle before Worcester in 1651 and hid all night in an oak tree to escape the troopers. He might have chosen a fruit tree eastward in the orchard-filled Vale of Evesham, but he chose an oak to the north, because it was thicker and more opaque.

Turning west toward Hereford, it's apple coun-try. On the way you cross the Malvern Hills, some of England's finest walk-ing country with tremen-dous views in all direc-tions. The local drink is cider. Hereford's lovely cathedral is small but makes it up in books. It has the largest medieval library in the world — nearly 1500 chained volumes.

From here you can ei-ther proceed on across the Wye into Wales, or return to Gloucester with a drive through the Forest of Dean, once a royal hunt-ing ground whose ancient oaks provided the timbers for Admiral Nelson's ships.

Watching whales by air, sea

A new kind of whale-watching trip is offered in a joint venture by Club Baja of Long Beach and H & M Cruiseships of Punta Abreojos, Mexico.

A typical four-day tour begins by boarding Club Baja's airliner at Long Beach Airport for an unforgettable sightseeing experience observing the migrating California gray whales from the air en route to Punta Abreojos, Baja California.

At this first destination on the trip, passengers board one of the H & M ships to cruise into San Ignacio lagoon for closeup snapshots of the whales. The last leg of the journey brings the group to Cedros Island, where Club Baja's magic carpet awaits the flight home.

This excursion is $275 per person, including round trip airfare, cruising along the Pacific coast in a luxurious motorship and gourmet dinners.

Further information is available by writing Club Baja, 4100 Donald Douglas Drive, Long Beach, 90808.

Pompeiiian ruins yield achaeological treasures

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press
POMPEII, Italy — C. Julius Polybius was running for office in the political campaign current in the Roman city of Pompeii when it was destroyed by the eruption of Vesuvius in A.D. 79.

His name was one of hundreds scrawled on the walls of the ancient city. Polybius was running for an administrative office somewhat akin to that of mayor; and, in one of the graffiti, three bar girls urged his election, signing the names Aegele, Maria and Zymrina.

Now, almost 1900 years later and 200 years after the first systematic excavation of the city, his house is being uncovered, yielding some remarkably well preserved frescoes which scholars believe date to the second century B.C.

Prof. Alfonso de Franciscis, superintendent of Pompeian antiquities for the Italian government, writes in a recent issue of the Smithsonian magazine that, when it is fully excavated, the Polybius house "will undoubtedly stand forth as one of the most noble and interesting dwellings of Pompeii."

Archaeologists have known of the existence of the house since 1925; but, because of time and financial limitations, they have been excavating for only the past seven years.

Polybius was the owner of a posthouse which offered meals. "Before Julius Polybius it belonged, certainly, to another Pompeian family of ancient and noble birth," Franciscis writes of the house. "From what we can tell at the present stage of our research, the house dates back to at least the second century B.C."

AUTHORITIES recognize four styles of painting in the ruins of Pompeii, and those in the Polybius house are in Style I, which flourished in that period. Style IV was at the height of fashion in A.D. 79, so it is the one most commonly found.

The building was apparently badly damaged in the earthquake of A.D. 63, now recognized as a warning of what was to come, and the owner decided to make renovations, including new frescoes. "The work was well along on the bottom part of the walls, but on the upper part, fortunately, the originals remain," Franciscis writes.

Except for the frescoes, he says, nothing of notable value has been found, but he adds: "Still, we can already say that the Polybius house ... represents a find in the same class with the most famous ones of our dead city."

TWA TOURS GIVE YOU MORE EUROPE FOR YOUR MONEY.

Fly/drive tours to the East

Trans World Airlines' expanded Freewheeler East fly/drive plan for 1975 offers a wider selection of eastern and mid-western destinations guaranteeing vacationers maximum mobility and flexibility of travel at a minimum price.

Starting at $13 per person daily, based on a party of four, freewheeling travelers will have their choice of 14 major cities and surrounding areas including New York, Chicago, Washington, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Dayton, Kansas City, St. Louis and Hartford.

The packages include use of a Hertz car with unlimited mileage, nightly accommodations, a TWA Freewheeler U.S.A. vacation plan kit containing travel vouchers and, when traveling to New York City, Boston or Washington, a Getaway Guide with discount coupons for sightseeing, shopping and meals.

Motor hotels participating in the Freewheeler East program are Travel Lodges, Ramada Inns, Holiday Inns, Treadway Inns and Resorts, Howard Johnson's Motor Lodges and Sheraton Hotels and Inns, providing an extensive selection of accommodations in each city and surrounding area.

UNDER THE plan, vacationers may fly to one TWA city and return from another.

The Freewheeler plan can be purchased for as little as two nights at a hotel and use of a car for five days, up to a touring vacation of six days or more with hotel and car.

Contrary to popular opinion, you can still have a good time in Europe without spending a lot of money. Particularly if you take one of TWA's money-saving Getaway¹ tours.

But at TWA we know that in deciding where you'll spend your vacation, you're not only looking for a good price, you're also looking for a good time. That's why we give you such a wide variety of two- and three-week European vacation packages. To help you choose the vacation that's exactly right for you.

many are priced significantly lower than those offered by our major competitors.

Please keep in mind that these prices* include just about everything. Round-trip airfare, hotel accommodations, sightseeing. Even most of your meals and tips are included. And in some cities we throw in extra goodies—free theatre tickets in London, for example.

On all our Motorcoach tours you'll travel from place to place with the full-time services of a multilingual tour director on some of the most comfortable motorcoaches ever built. (Some are even outfitted with refrigerators and 4-channel stereo to make your travels even more enjoyable.) And on a TWA Motorcoach tour you get the option of touring as few countries as one or as many as eleven.

Spain/Portugal	$803 to $935
Basic Europe (7 Countries)	$982 to $1083
Italy (9 Cities)	$1042 to $1182
Britain/Ireland	$1047 to $1167
Basic Europe (9 Countries)	$1105 to $1216

*Prices depend on when you go and where you stay, and are per person, based on double occupancy. They do not include the $3.00 International Departure Tax. Airfares are based on TWA's low 14/21 day Group Inclusive Tour prices, where TWA forms the groups and sets the departure dates. If the minimum group size of 10 is not attained, TWA will arrange alternate departure dates if possible. Packages must be purchased at least 15 days before departure. And airfares are subject to revision and revalidation after March 31, 1975.

TWA's City Hoppers

For those who prefer to travel Europe on their own and still take advantage of low group rates, TWA has special one-, two- and three-week "City Hopper" packages.

London/Paris/Rome	$887 to $1125
Lisbon/Madrid/Costa del Sol	$768 to $956
London/Paris/Geneva/Rome/Madrid	$1095 to $1288

Included in these prices* are round-trip airfare, transportation between airport and hotels, sightseeing, tipping and many special TWA extras. Like the services of English-speaking hosts and hostesses who'll be on hand in every location. City Hoppers also offer the flexibility of seeing as few cities as one or as many as six. So if you're thinking of spending your money on going to Europe this year, call TWA or your Travel Agent and ask about our "City Hoppers" and Motorcoach tours.

All things considered, you'd have a tough time finding a better vacation, or a better vacation bargain anywhere in Europe.

TWA's Tour Warranty

If any element or service is not delivered as described in the TWA brochure, TWA certifies that an appropriate refund will be made of that portion of the tour price covering the undelivered tour elements as outlined in the brochure.

The animal farm

One of western Canada's most popular tourist attractions is the Okanagan Game Farm at Penticton, British Columbia, which annually attracts upwards of 100,000 visitors.

Supporting some 350 animals of 70 species ranging from 15-foot-tall giraffes to diminutive 14-inch-high Muntjac deer, the farm offers miles of open rangeland where they can wander at will.

Changing world affects mankind

By RICHARD HUGHES
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK — The world economic order is in a state of change unequalled in magnitude in the history of mankind.

Inflation, recession, raw materials shortages, land and water scarcities and food starvation are apparent, to a greater or lesser degree, throughout the world.

These powerful forces are bringing changes in the standard of living that mean dramatically different things to different people.

It means a child in India who would subsist will die. It means a businessman in Japan who would entertain lavishly will do it moderately. It means a worker in America who buys a new car every three years will do it every four.

A new car every fourth year instead of every third certainly does not equal the magnitude of death instead of life. And herein lies the paradox.

The four-fold increase in oil prices has been disruptive to industrialized nations but it has not yet brought disaster and most economists now believe it will not.

But the shortages — and higher prices — in foodstuffs and fertilizers can mean the difference between life and death for millions of people.

A three-year drought in India has reduced its domestic food production to dangerously low levels and raised its dependency on more expensive imports, a dependency that is critically high even in normal times.

INDIA NEEDS 115 million tons of grain a year to feed its population of 574 million, but the nation can expect to fall seven to 10 million tons short. Thousands already have died of malnutrition.

Recent estimates of grain production indicate there will be a greater world supply than originally anticipated and this will bring some relief to the food-starved developing nations. But the economic problem of higher prices remains.

"As in the case of petroleum, the developing countries had come to depend on cheap grain imports to supplement their own production, and implicitly on grain stocks in the exporting countries," Hollis B. Chenery, a World Bank economist, says.

"With hindsight it is now clear that they overestimated the increased productivity stemming from the 'green revolution,' relied too heavily on continued availability of cheap imports, and devoted insufficient resources to agricultural development."

Chenery estimates it will take at least five years to make up "for the lags in fertilizer capacity and in agricultural investments in the developing countries so as to balance supply and demand, restore stocks, and bring food prices down to more normal levels."

This means, says Chenery, the wealthy countries of the world will have to do with less, least they bid away the foodstuffs and fertilizers needed by poorer countries that cannot constrain consumption further.

EXCEPT FOR THE few developing nations that have been able to exploit their rich sources of raw materials, such as Nigeria has with oil, the gap between the rich and poor nations has widened, not narrowed. And the poor are getting impatient.

Those that are rich in resources are attempting to band together to control commodity markets in the manner in which the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has controlled the world market and price of oil.

OPEC's 400 per cent increase in crude oil prices brought within a year the biggest transfer of wealth in history and magnified — but was not the root cause of — worldwide inflation and, in many industrial nations, recession.

Although not as dependent on imported oil as other industrialized countries, such as Japan and Italy, the United States nonetheless relies on foreign sources for approximately 38 per cent of its crude supplies.

It is enough to cause a serious trade imbalance and bring about serious public debate about energy self-sufficiency or, at least, insulation from foreign manipulation.

But at what cost?
"To become independent you have to pay a big price," says John G. Myers, economist for the Conference Board, an independent business research agency. "To become completely self-sufficient is an unreasonable goal. You could do it but it would be silly to try."

"THE PRICE TO BE insulated is very high, too, extremely expensive. Do we want to go that far? That's the choice."

The alternative, Myers and other economists say, is to reduce consumption and to force the inevitable change in a high standard of living based on cheap energy and cheap raw materials.

When raw materials become scarce and expensive, says E. Patrick McGuire, a Conference Board economist, there are two things that can be done: "You either replace them or don't use them."

For example, he said, Americans need to abandon their tendency to buy a new car when the odometer on their old model turns 50,000. "It means an environmental destruction that we can no longer afford," McGuire said.

It may mean Americans will have to drive their cars four years instead of three.

Americans, too, will have to restrain their overwhelming passion for new products. In the recession economy, U.S. industry already has "stalled or abandoned" development of new consumer products, a survey by McGuire showed.

Grenada—a good place to be poor

Fishing, farming keep islanders smiling

By EDGAR MILLER

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — If you have to be poor, you could hardly find a better place to be than on this colorful, sun-splashed Caribbean island nation.

Virtually all of the island's 109,000 people qualify as poor under the standards of material wealth set by the rest of the world. That is, they have little or no money and very few material goods. Per capita income is estimated at $215 to $250 a year.

Even though economists estimate that five or six of every 10 workers are unemployed, Grenadians do not seem to be suffering. There isn't the hard-core poverty of other areas, of other parts of the world. No one is starving here.

You do not see the distended bellies of youngsters in Grenada. You see very few people in rags and you are almost never bothered by street beggars.

Instead, you see troops of smiling, well fed, well dressed school children lugging their books as they stream to and from classes. Most of the islanders read and write.

You are received by the islanders with a courtesy and friendliness that contrasts to other parts of the Caribbean where emerging black power consciousness is reflected in hostility to white tourists and visitors.

Grenada is the most southerly of the Windward Islands group of the eastern Caribbean. The 133-square-mile island is about 1,800 miles southeast of New York.

Virtually all industry has bypassed Grenada which is off the beaten track, even for the Caribbean.

The only industry of consequence is agriculture and there are only three major crops — nutmeg and related spices, cocoa and bananas.

The rest is barely subsistence farming.

But nearly every peasant has his little plot. He grows enough to keep his family in fresh vegetables and fruit. He fishes enough from the blue Caribbean and the many inland streams to provide protein for his family. He may even sell enough fish to buy school clothes for his children and staples such as flour, cooking oil and salt.

Grenada's climate is always warm, usually sunny and rainy enough to keep the crops growing. Its soil is fertile. And, it has natural beauty: broad, white-sand beaches and rugged mountains whose lush green foliage is punctuated by bright orange splashes of poinsettia.

In a typical peasant family living in the hills around St. George's, the capital city, the husband will be up at dawn tilling his small plot of ground. He grows yams, bread fruit, pigeon peas, plantains (a form of banana) and tomatoes.

In the yard, there are a few chickens, a couple of sheep and maybe a goat for milk.

For cooking, these days he probably is using firewood gathered in the hills. When times are better, he buys kerosene.

Lighting in the two-room house is provided by kerosene lamps.

The No. 1 priority of a Grenada family is to keep the children in school.

"The parents won't send the children to school unless they have been fed," commented Leslie Seon, a Grenada journalist. They also make sure the children's school uniforms are neatly pressed and without holes.

Any extra money goes to buy school clothes and supplies.

St. George's rises on the hillside above one of the Caribbean's most beautiful harbors. It looks like a Normandy fishing village.

Through the harbor passes about 32 per cent of the world's nutmeg and mace, as well as clove and cinnamon. The smell of spices in the air add to the island's singular charm.

Despite Grenada's obvious charms, it never has been a major tourism center. Tourism has been particularly bad for the past two seasons due to the island's political troubles and the general world economy which has sent tourism into a tailspin everywhere.

Several hotels have closed and those that are open were only about 20 per cent of capacity at the height of the season.

Further complicating the tourism picture is the difficulty in getting to Grenada. The Canadian and American visitor must fly to Barbados or Trinidad and change to a small island-hopping airline for the 35-minute flight to Grenada.

The airport is located on the eastern or Atlantic side of the island while St. George's and the main resort areas, such as Grand Anse Beach, are on the western or Caribbean side.

Poly tops Wilson on last-second heroics

Unheralded Clyde Johnson sank a 14-foot jump shot with four seconds to play Saturday night to give Poly High a 65-63 victory over long-time rival Wilson before a crowd in excess of 3,000 at Long Beach City College.

Until Johnson's game-winning basket, Poly had never led, drawing even for only the second time at 63-63 when Percy Jackson scored on a layin with 1:34 to play.

The victory enabled the Jackrabbits to move into sole possession of first place in the Moore League race with 7-1 record.

Wilson, which is now 6-2 and tied with Compton, suffered only its third loss in 23 games — all of which have been by two points. Johnson, who finished with a season-high 20 points, 14 over his average, took an inbound pass from Leif Hertzog, then used six seconds to dribble into position and get

Stones calls it: record 7-5 1/2

OKLAHOMA CITY (Special)—Brash Dwight Stones, as he had predicted all week, broke his own indoor high jump record with a leap of 7 feet, 5 1/2 inches to climax the United States Track and Field Federation's National Indoor Championship Saturday night.

Stones, a Long Beach State student competing for the Pacific Coast Club, cleared the bar on his third attempt at 7-5 1/2.

He thought he had done it a week earlier in the Indoor Games at the Forum, but that effort was erased by officials' failure to properly measure the height before the jump. It was determined to be only 7-5 1/4—officially 7-5 1/4.

"We got it measured right this time," said PCC coach Tom Jennings, who was in Oklahoma City for the meet.

The crowd of 6,200 in the Myriad cheered the achievement that Stones had forecast in local TV, radio and newspaper interviews during the week. Stones merely acknowledged the ovation by raising his hands over his head, then proceeded to miss three times at 7-7.

On his second attempt at 7-5 1/2 Stones appeared to have broken the record but the bar fell after he hit the pit. He cleared the obstacle easily on his third attempt.

Stones' winning height was 7 1/2 inches better than second place, which was shared by Bill Jankuis and Barry Schur of the Gulf Coast Track Club. His next competition is scheduled to be in the U.S. Olympic Invitational at New York Friday night.

Nine meet records fell in the USTFF meet—one as Wilson Waigwa, of Texas El-Paso, ran the open division mile in 3 minutes, 57 seconds.

Waigwa, a native of Nairobi, Kenya, beat challenger Mike Slack, competing unattached, by 4.6 seconds. The old meet record was 4:03.8, set by Tom Von Ruden of the Pacific Coast Club in 1972.

It was Waigwa's best indoor mile to date. He had a 3:57.2 at the San Diego Invitational in January, 1974.

Meet records toppled quickly in the early going of the finals.

get a hand on and control. The Bruins took a time out to set up a last shot that never materialized.

Until the last-second heroics, it had been an uphill battle for Poly which was outplayed much of the way, yet never folded.

Wilson led by as many as 13 points with 2:46 to play in the third quarter, 47-34, yet started to stagger when Jerry Anderson, then Gary Mulder, Rich Rivera and Neil Arnold drew their fourth fouls.

Poly at that point outscored Wilson 10-2 and was down 49-44 at the end of the quarter, the closest it had been since midway

Funseth struggles into 1-stroke lead

By DOUG IVES

SAN DIEGO — Strange as it may seem, a golfer from Napa is leading the $170,000 San Diego Open and it isn't Johnny Miller.

Rod Funseth, a 41-year-old who has won only twice in 15 years on the PGA tour, started out Saturday like he was going to blitz the field, a la Miller, but had to settle for only a one-stroke lead at 10-under 206.

Funseth went out in 31 on the tough Torrey Pines South course and once led by four shots. But he struggled in with a 38 and it allowed six other golfers to remain close enough to challenge for the $34,000 first prize today.

If Funseth survives the winning purse will be more than his total earnings in 1974 when a hand injury affected his swing and grip.

Former PGA champion Ray Floyd carded a 68 to take over second place, one stroke in front of defending champion Bobby Nichols, who also posted a 4-under-par round.

There is a traffic jam at 7-under, led by second day tri-leader Billy Casper who shot a 72. Big Leonard Thompson (68), Bruce Devlin (69) and unheralded Rob Wyann (68) are tied with Casper

Bruins chill OSU, 74-62

By GARY RAUSCH

It took three applications of mortar but UCLA finally cemented in the cornerstone of another Pacific-8 Conference basketball title.

The Bruins unleashed a pair of withering blitzes on Oregon State Saturday evening and only registered their 79th successive success in Pauley Pavilion, 74-62, after the Beavers' phenomenal Lonnie Shelton had fouled out with four minutes remaining.

A moving mountain with the moves of a Nureyev and the speed of a Bob Hayes, Shelton had given the Bruins fits. The 6-8, 235-pound sophomore enticed Richard Washington into his fourth personal foul 11 seconds into the second half and caused Ralph Drollinger to draw his fourth eight minutes later.

UCLA merely went with its other strengths. On a night when the famed Sports Illustrated cover jinx grabbed Dave Meyers by the throat, guards Andre McCarter, Pete Trgovich and Jimmy Spillane carried the load.

They ignited a 10-0 blitz that gave the Bruins a 49-38 advantage with 14:05 remaining. Oregon State lightened its defense, forcing the Bruins into missing five of their next six shot, and Shelton and Don Smith each hit a pair of baskets in a 12-2 burst.

Three and one-half minutes later, the Beavers trailed only 51-50. But the explosion took its toll. Shelton was puffing noticeably, and his teammates started committing costly fouls. When Shelton received for his fourth personal in a rebound scramble with Washington at 6:18, the Beavers trailed, 65-55, and their hopes of an upset were all but gone.

McCarter led all scorers with a career-high 18 points, hitting half his 10 field goals and 8 of 11 free throws. Washington added 14.

Meyers missed his first six shots, didn't net a field goal until 24:21 had elapsed and connected on only 3 of 12 attempts for the evening. His eight free throws added up to 14 points.

With Smith neutralized (5 of 13 and 10 points), Meyers concentrated on Shelton when Washington and Drollinger got into foul trouble and his success was a vital factor in the outcome.

John Wooden was impressed with Shelton.

"He's a fine basketball player, very strong with good feel and a fine touch. He's going to be great in a couple of years—not that he's not right now, but he has a tendency to foul a lot."

The Bruins' two-game lead with five remaining also didn't go unnoticed.

"I'd say we have a nice lead in the Pac-8, but anything can happen at this point," said Wooden. "However, we didn't look at this game as any more special than the other conference games."

Evans rescues Troy, 92-90

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

Earl Evans was like a slap in the face. USC needed him badly.

The 6-6 freshman from Port Arthur, Tex., blazed down the stretch with 12 points in less than six minutes Saturday night and the Trojans hung on for a 92-90 victory over Oregon before 7,154 fans at the L.A. Sports Arena.

USC had developed the staggers when Evans, from whom so much was expected when the season began, took charge of USC's offense and provided a victory that kept the Trojans in the running for second place in the Pacific-8 Conference and a possible berth in the NCAA basketball tournament.

The Trojans were trailing, 73-72, with 6:31 remaining when Evans maneuvered niftily through Oregon's kamikaze defense for a basket and, when fouled, sank a free throw that sent USC ahead to stay, 75-73.

He followed with an 18-footer, then yielded the spotlight temporarily as another freshman, 6-9 Steve Malovic, rammed in a rebound to give USC a six-point lead.

Oregon, which lost its sixth conference game in nine starts, regrouped after a timeout and Mark Barwig broke the string of Trojan points.

Evans, who had seemed to lack confidence the past six weeks, used his quickness twice to drive for field goals and USC suddenly was out in front, 83-75.

But that wasn't all from the newest pearl in basketball. When Oregon threatened at 83-78, he sank two clutch free throws and, when the Ducks came to within one of the Trojans at 88-87, Evans slipped free for a 10-footer.

He fouled out with 31 seconds remaining and his more experienced teammates were able to stay in front, although Oregon's Ronnie Lee missed a 42-footer by inches at the final buzzer.

It was a lost week for Oregon coach Dick Harter, who began an exciting five days on Tuesday

49ers halt Fresno, to get 'back in it'

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

FRESNO — Long Beach State's basketball team began its "second season" in impressive fashion Saturday night, jumping away to a healthy lead and then holding off host Fresno State, 84-76.

The triumph, Long Beach's 15th in 22 games, improved the 49ers' Pacific Coast Athletic Association record to 4-2, leaving them one game behind league-leading San Diego State.

"This was a great win for us," bubbled 49er coach Dwight Jones, "because we're back in it now."

The 49ers have a rough road ahead — games next Thursday and Saturday at San Jose State and Pacific — before a Feb. 27 rematch with San Diego State in Long Beach. But the 49ers gave indication Saturday night that they can handle it.

The 49ers were a completeley different team than the one which fell to Fresno State a week ago in Long Beach, 71-69.

"The difference was intensity," explained Jones. "We took three days off to rest and the kids came back tonight and played hard. That was the difference."

A classic example was the 49ers' 6-foot-8 postman Carlos Mina. The senior from El Centro, exploiting the defensive weaknesses of Fresno's 6-11 Bruce Henning, dazzled a Selland Arena crowd of 3,003 by pumping in a game-high 27 points before retiring on five fouls with 6:37 to play.

The 49ers were in healthy command at that point, leading 71-59.

Mina collected 20 of his points, mostly in close, in the first 20 minutes as the 49ers established a six-point intermission advantage.

That margin could have

Muser no longer in Allen's shadow

The Musers - a new era

Dick Allen has retired. Thus the eyes of the baseball world will be on his successor, Anthony Joseph Muser, a 27-year-old former quarterback and infielder at Lakewood High who has been the superstar's late-inning defensive replacement the last three seasons for the Chicago White Sox.

How is Tony reacting to this pressure?

"I've been sitting around the house a lot, struggling to keep my emotions in check," succinctly replied the southpaw first baseman from the confines of his new home in Rossmoor.

"The feeling I have is hard to describe. I just keep thinking that the time I spent on the bench when Allen was playing, perhaps will work to my advantage. I kept my eyes and ears open, waiting for this opportunity. But I'm really anxious and ready to go—right now."

MUSER THEN let it all out. "It was difficult playing behind Allen. I'd still get my 250 at-bats playing as his sub, but I'm not going into this season trying to be a Dick Allen. I'm going to be Tony Muser.

"The White Sox are going to be a team this year like Oakland. We're going to play fundamental baseball, something which we haven't been doing. When Allen played, he didn't think defense. He liked to hit period, and I think he hurt the club in that respect.

"Honestly, I had kind of had it. That's a tough feeling to describe also. Playing fulltime every day is much easier both physically and mentally than sitting on the bench.

"But I don't want to think about Dick Allen now. We didn't win with Allen, but I hope we can win with me. We will win with me."

COMING OFF the bench, Muser has hit .285, .289 and .291 the last three seasons for the White Sox. That was playing under non-pressure. Does the White Sox new starting first baseman think he can handle this new type pressure?

"The only pressure I will feel is the pressure that I apply on myself. I have to have my own battle plan. The main thing is I know I can help my ball club.

"When I would go into a game, I'd hear the taunts, 'You're not a Dick Allen.' I knew THAT. But I also knew I was Tony Muser, a team player.

"I know the pressure on a player taking over for a superstar. Go back a season to 1973. THAT was pressure for me. I was just a late-inning defensive sub and sometimes a designated hitter for the White Sox, then Allen broke his leg and I became the regular first baseman. Well, we started winning and I hit .302 playing regularly. I think I handled that pressure okay."

HOW WAS your relationship with Allen?

"One day Allen was the greatest guy in the world, then the next day he'd be totally opposite. He didn't like too many people. But he did like me and he did help me. He loved horses. He just might be in that business for good now. He was a very hard man to understand."

How do you feel your manager, Chuck Tanner, is reacting to Allen's loss?

"Tanner always liked me. We had a good relationship and you've got to remember that Chuck often has said he thought Dick Allen was the greatest all-around player in baseball today. Tanner realized I had a tough job backing-up Allen.

"As I told you last September, Tanner knew I wanted to play regularly and he gave me a lot of chances other managers wouldn't have. Like putting me in during the last half of several TV games-of-the-week and using me a lot against righthanded pitchers."

DO YOU THINK the White Sox can catch Oakland this season?

"Definitely. For one thing, we're hungry. For another, the A's are going to miss Catfish Hunter a

"He played behind Yastrzemski at Boston and Allen at Chicago. Now he's on his own. He'll make it. He'll drive in runs."

lot. The A's weren't that great on hitting, but they had great defense. So do the White Sox. We can stay with Oakland there. I am sure I can help the cause, too."

You don't lack confidence. Is that a longtime trait or something newly acquired because of your unique position now?

"I always have had pride in myself. Everybody kind of gets labeled. I was labeled 'no power, can't run, but good defensively.' Well I CAN run and am good defensively, but don't have power. But I get hits and bat in runs, and I figure that's better than being a home run hitter who will often go 0-for-4."

ONE MEMBER OF Muser's family who has supreme confidence in the breadwinner is Tony's wife, Nancy, his Lakewood High sweetheart. Asked what she thought of her husband's sudden escalation, Nancy replied:

"It is the most exciting thing that ever happened to us. Tony is 27 and not getting any younger. He deserves this big chance.

"We just bought our new home in Rossmoor, but we'll base ourselves in Chicago with Tony. I'll take Tony, Jr. (age 4) and Michael (7 months) there with me."

But what about the new home?

"We'll close it up, not rent it out to anybody. When you finally live in a place that's yours, it becomes something special. So we make two

"I don't want to think about Dick Allen. We didn't win with Allen but I hope we can win with me. We will win with me."

rent payments (in Los Alamitos and Chicago). So, we just hope Tony makes it big, and I know he will."

ANOTHER CONFIDENT Muser fan is his father-in-law, Bob Bumcrot, who played professionally with Reno in the old Sunset League and Bisbee in the Arizona-Texas League.

"Baseball is a game of breaks and Tony never has gotten many," said his father-in-law. "He played behind Carl Yastrzemski at Boston and then Allen at Chicago. Now he's on his own. He'll make it. He'll drive in a lot of runs and that's what wins ball games."

A final question to Tony: Are you ready?

"I hope I'm not overly ready. I think I've earned this opportunity. I busted my fanny to get it. I know people still will be going around comparing me to Dick Allen. But there's no way I'm a Dick Allen. I am Tony Muser."

If confidence means base hits, Tony M. will have a .300 season in '75.

QUOTES OF THE WEEK

DAVE MARR, when he heard that Mrs. Billy Casper was expecting her 10th child: "Can you imagine having to put buffalo meat on the table for 10 kids? Man, that'd thin out the herd in a hurry."

CHARLIE FINLEY: "There's an old saying that pigs get fat and hogs go to market. Well, some of the players these days aren't even pigs or hogs—they're glutons."

MUHAMMAD ALI: "Hank Aaron is the only person I idolize more than I do myself."

LINDA MILLER, wife of Johnny Miller: "He's human all right. It's impressed on me every day just how human he is when I'm walking around the house picking up his dirty socks."

JIMMY CONNORS: "If you're going to be a louse, you might as well be a good one. So I'm the biggest louse of all."

GLORIA CONNORS, Jimmy's mother: "Jimmy is misunderstood. He is just a fun-loving, mischievous boy—full of himself."

BILL RIORDAN, Connors' manager: "He (Connors) has saved tennis slaves from the pirates...he has brought the game out of the wilderness to the promised land. When the history of tennis for this period is written, it will show that Connors was the great emancipator. His independence has saved the game from the establishment and the big time wheelers and dealers."

CONNORS AND CHRIS THE BEST

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert have been officially acclaimed the top men's and women's tennis players in the United States, it was announced Saturday.

Connors finished ahead of Stan Smith in the United States Tennis Association's men's rankings while Miss Evert was ahead of Billie Jean King on the women's list.

Completing the men's top 10 after Smith were Marty Riessen, Roscoe Tanner, Arthur Ashe, Tom Gorman, Dick Stockton, Harold Solomon, Charlie Pasarell and Jeff Borowiak.

Following Ms. King were Rosemary Casals, Nancy Gunter, Julie Heldman, Kathy Kuykendall, Pam Teguarden, Valerie Ziegenfuss, Jeanne Evert and Marcie Louie.

Garvey's fame spreads, ego doesn't Unspoiled by success

Dodger faithful attending today's free pre-spring rite and public workout at Dodger Stadium will be pleased to learn that Steve Garvey can still get into his old uniform, including the hat.

Feasted and fawned over from coast to coast this winter, the Dodgers' first baseman appears to have survived the adulation that goes with being the National League's most valuable player without noticeable accumulation of fat around the waist or between the ears.

"I'm in pretty good shape, really," says Garvey, who has finally returned to his Calabasas home "trying to settle down and get the clothes washed" before the start of spring training.

For the most part, since last October's World Series, Garvey has been home only long enough to check his next booking.

"I've got a big calendar that's pretty well covered with ink the last few months," he says. "I guess I've been the primary speaker at about 30 or 35 banquets, every place from New York to Florida to Columbus,

"Winning awards like the MVP, you have to capitalize on it financially, but my ideal is promoting baseball. I work just as hard off the field for the Dodgers as I do on the field."

O., and everything from a Michigan State football banquet—that's my alma mater and there were about 1,800 people there—to a B'nai B'rith father-son night in the Valley."

GARVEY USUALLY has departed these affairs with something under one arm.

"I've got everything from swinging batter statues to the Citizen Savings Southern California athlete-of-the-year award, which is a beautiful marble vase. There are quite a few plaques. I'm using them for contemporary art right now...just spread 'em out a little and try not to be too flaunty."

That would be Garvey's way. He doesn't reject the glory like Bill Russell but he doesn't revel in it, either.

"Winning awards like the MVP, you have to capitalize on it financially for your family," he says, "but my ideal is promoting baseball."

"I don't want to do things strictly for money—the $1,000 banquets and such. I've tried to do an equal amount of charity things, like for multiple sclerosis, the heart fund and other benefits. I get just as much satisfaction out of speaking for people like that. I try to visit a hospital every few weeks."

HIS MOST poignant memory is of a lad who had lost a leg because of cancer.

"It was pretty quiet in there," Steve recalls. "I guess he had about 18 per cent chance of living, but his mother recognized me, said hello and told me he had just had the operation and was pretty heavily drugged."

"So I just held his hand for awhile and he gradually started to wake up until he knew who I was. I could feel his hand gripping a little tighter and tighter, and I could see a little twinkle in his eye."

"Then two years later he walked from the dugout at Dodger Stadium to first base with me—not that I did anything to cause that but maybe it picked him up at the time. You have to have some compensation for the time you're gone from your own family, but long after the fees are gone you'll have memories like that."

MANY OF GARVEY'S appearances have been in his public relations role for Pepsi Cola, one of the Dodgers' broadcast sponsors. The all-America image is perfect.

"I'll go to a party," Garvey says, "and somebody says, 'Want a drink?' I'll say, 'No, just give me a Pepsi.'"

He was among 30 nationally prominent athletes honored at the Columbus Touchdown Club's annual blast, but perhaps Garvey's most meaningful appearance was in Tampa, Fla., his hometown.

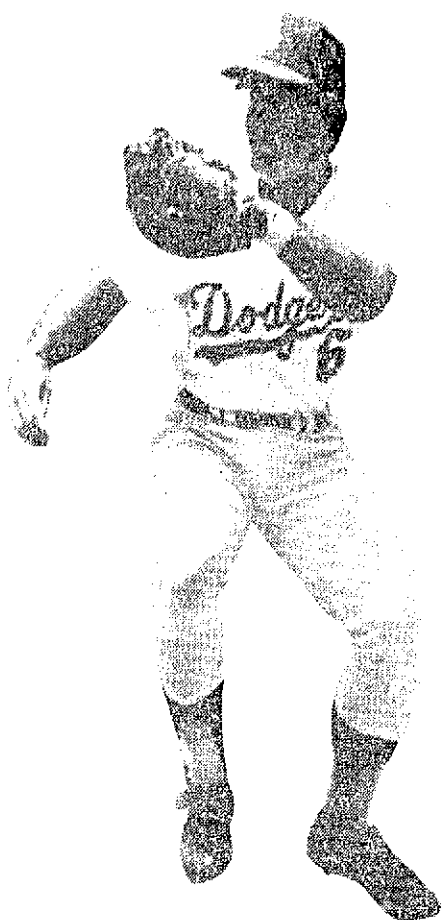

"I was given a day there and a dinner that night," he says. "It was kind of hard to describe. You're 26 years old and being honored by your city."

Garvey also was in Florida to compete in the Superstars competition but wasn't at his best.

"I had a pretty bad case of the flu. Got out of bed, competed and went back to bed. I still came in fifth, which wasn't too bad out of 14 guys, and missed the finals by a point."

IT WAS THERE that Garvey's path inevitably crossed that of Lou Brock, who was bitterly outspoken after losing the MVP vote to Steve.

Garvey batted .312, with 200 hits, 21 homers and 111 RBI, and won the league's Golden Glove for first basemen. He was the outstanding player in the All-Star Game—as a write-in—and batted .389 in the pennant series and .381 in the World Series. His longest hitless slump was three games.

Brock, in breaking Maury Wills' record, stole everything except the hearts of the writers.

"He didn't mention it and I didn't bring it up," says Garvey. "We were the same as we've always been, but I knew Lou was a little depressed about it. Anytime you look forward to an award and you don't receive it, you're going to be let down and maybe say some things you don't mean."

"It happens. He had a good year and in his way he was the MVP for the Cardinals. But four or five guys had a good shot at it and the writers chose me by a pretty good margin. It was a year that I put everything together to help my team win a pennant."

"I cherish the award, and I also realize that there were quite a few guys who won the award before me and there will be guys after me. I'm just going to try to win it again, that's all."

BUT WINNING the MVP wasn't the biggest event in Garvey's year. Wife Cindy presented him with their first child, daughter Krishna Lee, on the fourth day of the World Series.

"That was the highlight of my year," Steve says. "She was my MVP."

Steve's only concern is that every time he returns home he notices that "she looks too much like daddy."

It's probably the Dodger blue showing through. Steven Patrick Garvey could never see himself playing for any other club. Now he's the hero of thousands of youngsters across the nation. His own hero was the late Gil Hodges.

"Living in Florida, I was batboy for the Dodgers a couple of times," says Steve. "I knew Gil and played catch with him. Now to become first baseman for the Dodgers..."

THAT'S PART of the reason Garvey anticipated no difficulty in reaching a contract agreement.

"We decided there's no need for arbitration. We decided to keep it right in the family. There's always going to be a few things said to win a case and you never know how much is going to linger. I think we're at a fair contract right now, so we'll see."

"I firmly believe there is such a thing as a Dodger, and I am a Dodger. I work just as hard off the field for the Dodgers as I do on the field."

Garvey is especially proud of the Dodgers' victory over the A's, Vikings and Steelers in the "Super Teams" competition in Hawaii last week.

"We beat the Minnesota Vikings in a tug-of-war," he says. "It was the greatest upset since David and Goliath."

"There were eight of us and six of them, but they had Carl Eller, Alan Page, Ron Yary and all those guys. We just out-tacticked 'em. It was good for us to get together as a team again."

It's just one man's opinion

Nobody stuck his head out of a man-hole and asked me, but...

The front office of the Lakers is resigned to the obvious for this year and concentrating on the college draft and next season.

If class was one of the missing items with the San Diego Chargers, they now have it with the arrival of Johnny Sanders as the assistant to the president.

Just because it is now easy to carry a $20 bag of groceries doesn't mean you're getting stronger.

The Rams had no idea the public would raise such a howl at the team's failure to draft local hero Anthony Davis.

Billy Jean King's women's sports magazine may not be financially successful, but it is constructive with items every girl should know, such as how to catch a baseball and throw a football.

Despite a bout with the flu, Bobby Chacon will be favored over Newsboy Estrada in their March 1 featherweight title fight at the Olympic.

If you don't think times have changed, consider the chance of major league players vetoing an inter-league trading period 10 years ago.

Obviously, Von Joshua's demand to the Dodgers should have been, "Play me or trade me, but not to the San Francisco Giants."

We probably should have known

UCLA would not permit an exciting basketball race in the Pacific-8.

Bobby Winkles will probably advise Rod Dedeaux to stay where he is and enjoy the game.

Of all the one-word descriptions of Johnny Miller, the one I prefer is "confident."

The old saying, "It's great to be with a winner," applies everywhere but in Oakland.

Surely someone will explain to Ray Kroc why Catfish Hunter would find more desirable to operate out of New York than San Diego.

BUD TUCKER

Hopefully, the day is coming when men will return to television newscasting.

Bill Shoemaker's behavior at Santa Anita creates the suspicion that he is in his second childhood.

A Laker fan called this desk to ask if there is any way he can take ticket prices to arbitration.

It goes without saying the Dodgers' Mike Marshall will not be on hand to receive his award at the baseball writers' dinner, but there may be trouble finding someone willing to accept it for him.

Any horse owner—or horse player for that matter—will tell Dick Allen he had best play baseball.

It is being told around that Euell Gibbons made a TV commercial while suffering from a painful bone spur in his ankle.

If Anthony Davis becomes rookie of the year in 1975, it won't matter so long as the Rams win the Super Bowl in 1976.

One wonders what is the closest the rules committee has ever come to putting an offensive clock in college basketball.

There is no such thing as an economy car.

This is recruiting season, which means that many college football games are now being won and lost.

Now the only sure things are death, taxes and the Boston Celtics.

The search goes on for a fourth for bridge for Jack Kent Cooke, Andy Granatelli and Howard Cosell.

Nationals at Western Illinois LBSU defends badminton title

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Long Beach State's women's badminton team will leave Wednesday for Macomb, Ill., to defend its national title.

The tournament runs Thursday through Saturday at Western Illinois University. Last year LBSU players virtually swept the tournament, placing first and second in both singles and doubles competition.

Nancy Larson, Janice Crawford, Mackie Keenan and Geri Duple are on the team, which is coached by Sheila Rutherglen.

"Nancy and Janice are my No. 1 team this year," Sheila said. "They finished second in the doubles last year at the nationals. Janice was eliminated in the singles in the second round."

"I think we can hold our own in doubles this year, but we are weaker in singles. It would have helped us greatly if we had been into our regular season play before tournament time."

California schools face a handicap at the national event because it comes at the beginning of the local conference season. League play, which is coed, doesn't begin for LBSU until Feb. 27 when the 49ers meet UCLA.

Eastern schools, which are expected to be strong contenders, schedule badminton as a fall semester sport.

PEGGY STOLL, coach of the Long Beach City College gymnasts, will take her team south Thursday to meet El Camino and San Diego Mesa at San Diego.

"My Class I team is capable of winning," she said, "but Mesa may be best in the Class II competition."

LBCC coaches Nancy Kelly, Betty Crilly and Marte Gunning have started drilling their softball, volleyball and swim teams. Conference season for all three sports begins the first week of March.

LBSU's women's basketball team will host Cal Poly Pomona Wednesday, 8 p.m., then travel to Las Vegas for a non-league game Friday with Nevada-Las Vegas.

The 49ers hope to even the score with Cal Poly, an upset winner when the two teams met earlier in the season. "Cal Poly moves well and has height," said coach Fran Schaafsma. "We will change our game plan to take advantage of the things we do best against them. For example, we plan to begin with a player-to-player defense, which was more effective than the zone defense we opened with last time."

THE RAIN last weekend may have cost Robin Kahn of Long Beach State a win when the UC Santa Barbara Invitational tennis tournament was washed out before completion.

"Robin upset the No. 1 seed from Stanford, Marcy O'Keefe, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4," tennis coach Gloria Hendricks explained. "That put Robin in the semifinals against Cindy Thomas of UCLA. Robin had beaten Cindy in straight sets just the week before in a practice match."

WOMEN IN SPORTS

DeeDee Cronk, Gigi Antonacci (who has been chosen team captain) and Terry Standley also played in the tournament. All lost in the early rounds, though Terry reached the semifinals in the consolation bracket.

First league match for the A team is Tuesday, 2:30 p.m., against L.A. State on the LBSU courts. The B team, which faces the Diablos Thursday at L.A., won its first league match last week, beating UC Irvine, 5-1.

Players were Kathy Kindig, Susan Wendell, Laura Menden, Arlinda Cantu, Barbara Miller and Conna Edwards.

Doubles matches were called because of darkness.

Mrs. Hendricks expects UC Irvine to be the top challenger in the league this spring.

"I have a small squad but the girls are hardworking and conscientious about improving their games," she said.

Bob Lewis, an LBSU graduate student, is serving as volunteer coaching assistant.

LBSU conference fencing competition ends this week, leaving only three meets before the NCAA Championships in April at Cal State Fullerton.

The first of these final events will be an individual championship tourney Saturday, 9 a.m., at UC Irvine. Awards will be presented at a banquet that evening.

Although complete results of league standings will not be announced until sometime this week, coach Jo Redmon expects her women's team, led by Gudren Hommer and Laura Horn, to finish among the top three.

Gudren fenced for LBSU last year, ending the season with 20 wins, no losses. Laura, an alternate last year, moved to the No. 2 spot this season. Ms. Redmon also praised a promising freshman, Robin Huddleston.

Inexperience has handicapped the men's team, which had no returning fencers. Ms. Redmon does not expect Robert Bea-

49ers split gym meet

Despite four victories by freshman Yoichi Tomita, Long Beach State fell to the University of Arizona in a triangular gymnastics meet Saturday afternoon at LBSU.

The 49ers lost to Arizona 204.00-196.75 but beat UC Santa Barbara, which scored 143.30.

Tomita, from Japan, captured vaulting (9.45), the parallel bars (9.35) and the high bar (9.3) and the all-around with 53.25 (8.87 average).

FUNSETH IN LEAD—

He had to make a nice chip to keep from losing another shot on 15 and he holed a 4-footer to remain 2-over on the 17th.

"I played the first 11 holes super," said Funseth. "After that I was more like a 12-hadicap. This is an open course, so I got it in my mind I could hit it a long way. I've had the same problem of a fast down-swing for years."

Funseth insisted he wasn't playing it safe.

"There are so many great players out here it is foolish to ease off with a whole day left," he said.

Funseth is not a humorous man, but he told a cute story about Miller, the man who has won more than a quarter of a million dollars on the tour since last August.

"PART of his garage is on my property," Rod related. "After his great play lately I decided in order for him to get the easement he needed, I would hold out for a little extra cash. Either that, or he won't be able to get into his garage."

Floyd, the 1969 PGA champion, needed only 25 putts to post his 68. He started by chipping in from 90 feet with a wedge on the first hole, then canned a 10-footer on the second.

"This game is funny," said Floyd. "The first two days I hit it great and can't make a putt. Today I scrape it around and make a whole lot of putts."

Floyd canned a pair of 18-footers on the fifth and ninth holes to turn in 32. But he couldn't keep it going and had to settle for a 36 coming in, making birdie on the 15th and bogey on the 17th. He had to get up and down for pars three times on the last nine holes.

GABELICH INJURED IN BOAT CRACKUP

MODESTO (AP) — Gary Gabelich of Long Beach, holder of the world land speed record, was injured Saturday in a drag boat racing accident at Turlock Lake State Park.

Gabelich was about 500 feet into a quarter-mile qualifying run when his hydroplane became airborne and rolled on its side. He was thrown from the cockpit and skipped along the water ahead of the boat, which observers estimated was traveling at 100 mph.

The boat's parachute partially deployed and probably prevented the hydroplane from running over Gabelich. The boat then disintegrated and sank, but the engine was salvaged later.

Gabelich was reported in satisfactory condition at Doctor's Hospital with a shoulder separation and multiple abrasions.

Gabelich set the existing world land speed record on Oct. 23, 1970 at Bonneville, Utah when he drove his jet-propelled Blue Flame to a speed of 622.407 mph.

Things looking up for Wynn, too

The return of Ray Floyd

By DOUG IVES
Staff WriterRAY FLOYD
Changed his image

SAN DIEGO — Ray Floyd knows what it is like to wander through life aimlessly, to hit the night spots and the swank clubhouses, drinking and gambling.

For longer than he cares to remember, the 32-year-old Floyd played it fast and loose, never worrying that his lifestyle would one day affect his play on the golf course.

In 1969 he was at the peak of his game. He won the National PGA Championship, the Jacksonville Open and the prestigious American Golf Classic. He was 27 and considered the boy wonder that Johnny Miller is today.

It can only be assumed — Floyd doesn't flat out admit it — that the carefree existence, the late hours and perhaps the drinking finally got the best of him, because in 1972 and 1973 he wasn't among the top 60 money-winners.

Fortunately, winning a PGA championship carries a 10-year exemption, so Floyd didn't have to join the ranks of the rabbits. It might have proved to be his undoing.

But Floyd woke up in time to decide to settle down. He got married in the fall of 1973 — the year he appeared to hit rock bottom. Immediately, he made his move back toward the top.

In 1974 he finished 18th, a great comeback, and collected $119,385. It was his first six-figure year since 1969. Still, he couldn't quite find the winning touch, finishing second three times.

Floyd won just under $7,000 the first month of this year and once again he is on the verge of victory. After three rounds of the San Diego Open, he is 9-under-par and one stroke off the pace of Rod Funseth.

"I didn't use to have any goals," Floyd admitted following his sparkling round of 68 Saturday. "That's the way it is when you run through life aimlessly. But I've changed my image. I'm a new person now."

The Floyds have a 5-month-old son and both wife and baby travel with him on the tour. He says the marriage has turned his life around and he intends on keeping his family with him all the time.

BOB WYNN is one of those faceless journeymen pros who plug along, hoping one day to strike it rich. But at age 35, time is running out on the slender Ohioan.

He lost his sponsor this year shortly after purchasing a house in Santa Clara and he decided he had only about $1,500 left as a grubstake for the tour this year.

Now, after many lean years, some nice things are happening to Wynn, not the least of which is his current fourth place standing at San Diego.

Following his move to California from Ohio, Wynn decided to enter the Confidence Open, a pre-tour event held in Monterey the first week in January. He finished second and quickly had $5,000 more to work with.

But it was a frustrating second place finish. He talked his friend, Forrest Fezler, into playing in the tourney instead of going to Palm Springs. Fezler won and collected $10,000.

"I'm sorry I asked him now," Wynn laughed.

Wynn has won only $1,983 in six weeks but he received another unexpected bonus in the Crosby when he won a new car for hitting closest to the pin on the par-3 17th hole.

"I sold the car and got $4,700," Wynn related, "then I asked if I could get a rebate. The dealer just laughed."

Wynn finds now that losing his sponsor was a blessing in disguise.

Perfect sailing for Midwinter

By DONNELL CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

The 46th annual Midwinter Regatta of the Southern California Yachting Association got under way at noon Saturday under the most ideal wind and weather conditions a sailor could ever expect.

More than 70 classes of boats were sailing all the way from Newport Harbor to Marina del Rey, with the majority of the activity centered in Long Beach and Los Angeles harbors and the ocean outside their breakwaters.

There had been some doubt about what kind of start the yachts would have inasmuch as small craft advisory flags were flying Friday afternoon, all through the night and even until 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

The wind then dropped to zero and it looked for a while the weather would be more suitable for canoes and rafts than any kind of yachts.

The wind then started out of the northwest at 11 a.m. and by noon there was a fair breeze for the start of all races, inside and outside.

Before the afternoon ended, the wind was blowing 15-20 knots and it was a brilliant, sunny day.

It appeared the preliminary estimate of 80 classes and 1,000 yachts would fall just short of those marks. There were 74 classes and 12 of the 14 sponsoring yacht clubs had reported at this writing that there were 784 boats.

California and Del Rey yacht clubs had not reported and the classes there should swell the total number to between 950 and 1,000 entries.

It was a perfect day and there were no accidents among the many boaters.

The largest class was the Lasers at Alamitos Bay Yacht Club with 102 entries all racing outside the breakwater. Another class of 33 Lasers, all manned by teen-agers, was racing inside at Huntington Harbour.

All boats will race again today. Results will be compiled at SCYA headquarters this afternoon and tonight. The only boats racing Monday will be the large blue water yachts out of Los Angeles YC.

A PINCH OF SAND

I never knew they made sand in so many textures until I got on the golf tour. Some of it's fluffy as whipped cream, and some of it's coarse as buckshot.

It takes a bunker whiz like Gary Player to handle 'em all—dry, crusty or wet. A guy like ol' Billy Barbell, with more muscle than finesse, would have better control coming out of the sandpiles if he'd chip instead of blasting.

ALL I KNOW is they don't ask you how, just how many, when you turn in your scorecard. So if you can nip that baby out of the grit with a midiron, go ahead.

To chip from the sand, place your hands slightly ahead of the ball. This prevents scooping. Try to keep the wrists out of this shot. It's more a putting stroke than a full bunker swing, with the hands taking the club down into the ball.

The ball won't come out with much elevation on it, so be sure the lip of the bunker is shallow.

Clip the ball crisply with a 9-iron or sand iron, as on other short chip shots. Take just a pinch of sand as you hit the ball.

Tim wins 100 back at Paris

PARIS (AP) — Tim Shaw of Long Beach won the 100-meter backstroke and Rick Hofstetter of McKeesport, Pa., won the 100-meter breaststroke for the only U.S. victories in 10 events in an international swimming meet Saturday.

Shaw, who won the 1,500 meters Friday, finished fourth in the men's 100-meter freestyle event Saturday, then won the 100-meter backstroke in 59.75 seconds.

Hofstetter was timed in 1:04.84 for the 100-meter breaststroke.

Gary Hall, a University of Cincinnati medical student, finished second in the 200-meter individual medley and was runner-up behind Shaw in the backstroke.

Scott Lautmann of Ann Arbor, Mich., finished second in the 200-meter butterfly, which was won by Briton Brian Brinkley in 2:03.40.

U.S. women had three second-place finishes.

Kathy Reddy of Summit, N.J., was 48-hundredths of a second behind East German Barbara Krause, who won the 100-meter freestyle in 57.65.

Jill Simons was little more than 1/4 seconds behind Angela Franke, also of East Germany, in the 200-meter individual medley which was won in 2:19.91.

Valerie Lee finished second in the 200-meter butterfly, only three-hundredths of a second back of Anne Katrine Leucht, another East German, who won in 2:16.63.

WINTER SPORTS

Italian pair leads

Combined news services

CERVINIA, Italy—Italians Giorgio Alvera and Franco Perruquet outraced the West German favorites in both heats Saturday to build a half-second lead toward the world two-man bobsled championship.

Jim Morgan, 27, of Saranac Lake, N.Y., and Tom Becker, 26, of Indianapolis, took seventh place in the American No. 1 vehicle.

In contrast to the last world bobsled championships here in 1971, when one racer was killed and dozens were injured, only one sled overturned.

The 29 sleds from 15 countries will compete in the final two runs today in the shadow of the Matterhorn.

U.S. skater 3rd

GOTEBORG, Sweden—Sheila Young of Detroit won the women's 1,000-meter race in the track-record time of 1 minute, 20.24 seconds Saturday but was third in the overall standings after the first two races of the world sprint speed skating championships.

The 21-year-old Miss Young, the 1973 women's world champion, finished sixth in the 500 meters.

Alexander Safronov of the Soviet Union and Monika Holzner of West Germany took the lead after the two first races.

World luge

HAMMARSTRAND, Sweden—Wolfram Fiedler and Margit Schumann gave East Germany the lead in both the men's and women's division Saturday midway through the two-day world luge championships.

Fiedler, a 24-year-old from East Berlin, shattered the existing track record in both his runs to take the lead with a total of 1:46.061 seconds.

USC LEADS CANOE RACE; LBSU LAST

Defending champion USC splashed into an eight-lap lead Saturday after 22 hours of the 72-hour canoe race at Busch Gardens.

After 22 hours, USC had completed 134 laps or 100 miles. UCLA was running second at 126 laps or 94 miles with San Diego State one lap back.

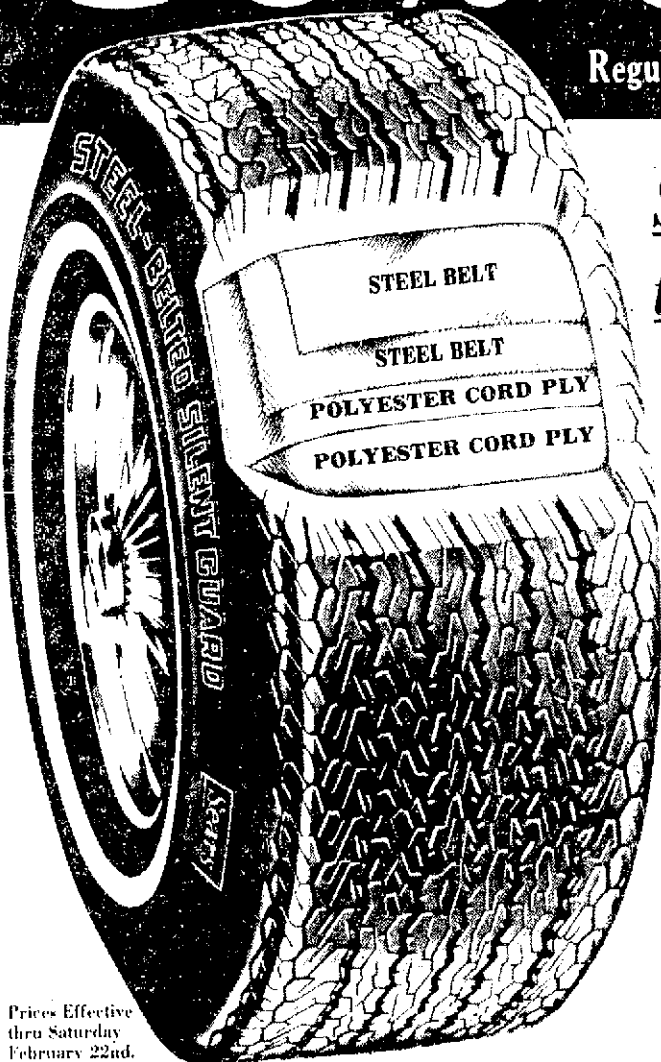

Long Beach State was trailing by 17 laps, completing 108 laps or 80 miles.

The race started at noon Friday and will end at noon Monday.

ANNIE AND DAVE . . . Bruin twosome. —AP Wirephoto

My-oh-Meyers—only this one's name is Annie

By DAN BERGER
Associated Press

Spaces abound; there's no crowd around the building, the ticket office is closed and Pauley Pavilion looks empty.

Inside, however, UCLA's basketball team is demolishing another foe with leading scorer Meyers getting most of the plaudits.

The incongruity of a small crowd for a UCLA home basketball game is resolved when one steps inside and notices that the team is all female and that the leading scorer for the Bruins is not 6-foot-8 David but 5-foot-8½ Annie, Dave's little sister.

David leads the Bruin varsity in scoring and Annie does the same for the ladies' team, which is 10-2 despite having a small team with no player over 5-10.

Annie, however, is the real star.

SHE DRIVES with the authority of a polished guard; she rebounds with the sureness of a veteran forward; she shoots with the confidence of a 55 per cent shooter, which she is, and she plays defense like her brother, who is so acclaimed as a defender he's known as the Spider.

"I've been playing since I was in the second or third grade," says the shy Miss Meyers, who wears her sandy blonde hair in a short boyish cut and whose deep-set blue eyes make her strikingly attractive.

"There were 11 kids in the family and everybody played basketball. But I don't play with Dave. Oh, he helps me with my shooting sometimes, but he's much too good to play one-on-one."

David was called "the best forward in America" recently by USC coach Bob Boyd. Lee Green, the public relations man for the UCLA women's team, likes to call Annie the best woman player in the United States.

"But remember," he says, "she's only a 19-year-old freshman. Don't expect too much."

In 11 games this year, Annie has averaged 20.1 points per game, seven rebounds and about five assists per contest.

"The biggest problem," said Green, "is that she's so unselfish she's always throwing the ball to teammates and they often miss the layup, so she doesn't get the assist."

"Sure I'm proud of her," said Dave. "Any guy who had a sister who's as good as that would be. She's really good, on offense, defense, everything."

Dave was interviewed during one of his sister's games and each sentence was punctuated with, "Wow, d'you see that?" and "That's the way, Annie!"

Kenny Washington, a leading contributor to UCLA's first two NCAA champion teams, is the head coach of the women's team and he downplays Annie's overwhelming contribution:

"She's just a very good 5-foot, 9-inch basketball player, but she has a long way to go," he said. "She does things fundamentally very well, but she's not polished yet."

THE FANS seem to think otherwise. Small crowds—fewer than 500 people—dot the stands in Pauley Pavilion and scream their heads off for all the women, but Annie gets the most applause.

"Last year it was only parents, but the crowds are getting bigger," she said.

Last summer Annie played in a boys summer league and didn't score much, but Dave was impressed.

"She took on these two 6-foot kids from Locke High School and held them scoreless and she got five points."

"Yeah," said Annie, "but the big difference is the quickness and the speed. The boys are much quicker. That was what took me by surprise. And they're much more physical."

She's undecided on her collegiate major but says she wants to play four years of basketball for the Bruins, play in the World University Games and then on the United States team as a regular.

An older sister played at Fullerton State a few years ago, Meyers will undoubtedly play professional basketball and Annie hopes to lead the Bruins to a national title.

WALTON 'HAD IT TOO GOOD' —TRGOVICH

By JIM COUR
United Press International

Pete Trgovich isn't surprised Bill Walton has had his problems in his first year of pro basketball.

Trgovich is as puzzled about Walton's conduct this season as your average NBA fan, and he played two seasons with Walton at UCLA.

"He had it nice here at UCLA," analyzed Trgovich. "It was really great for him. In fact, it was like heaven."

"Now he's in the real world. Nobody cares who Bill Walton really is. People only care how he plays basketball and that's all. I think he had it too good at UCLA."

One of two seniors on the No. 2-ranked Bruins, Trgovich admitted he was "curious" about Walton's problems this season.

"I just think Bill doesn't know what he wants," the East Chicago, Ind., product said. "Let's imagine he doesn't want to play pro ball now. But he signed his name for all that money. He should just go out and work for his money."

"There are all sorts of rumors that he wants out of his contract. But I don't know. I imagine he's the only one who knows what he wants and I don't know if he's that sure."

Trgovich lived at the same boarding house with Walton when he was a sophomore.

"The next year (Walton's senior season) he was a completely different person," said the 6-5 guard. "After that, I didn't communicate with him. But a whole lot of other people didn't, either."

"When I was a sophomore, I had a lot of discussions with him, though. What he and I wanted were two different things. If I had big money, I'd want a big car and a couple of houses. I think he thought I was kind of crazy."

"Maybe the way we were brought up has something to do with it. My father did a great job with me but my family was never wealthy. It was a lot different than the way Bill was brought up."

Trgovich doesn't think Walton was ever or will ever be another Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

"I don't compare him with Jabbar playing-wise," said the UCLA backcourt regular. "Bill and Jabbar got the same publicity in college but Jabbar's definitely better. Not that Bill isn't good. He is. It's just that he isn't that good."

Of Walton's reluctance to deal with the news media, Trgovich said the Portland Trail Blazers' center never attempted to influence the other UCLA players against reporters.

"He got a lot of publicity which he deserved," said the former Indiana schoolboy star, "but he didn't like microphones and he could have handled the press better."

"There's no need for being rude to people. I can see it if people are pestering you and badgering you. But not if somebody just asks you a question."

5,000 TREES TO ADD TO CLOCK TOWER ENTRANCE

Beachwalk opens 90 townhomes with varied plans

With the Grand Opening of Unit 5, A. J. Hall celebrates the continuing development of the new Beachwalk townhome community located in Huntington Seaciff. The 90 townhomes in the new unit are priced from $46,500 to $66,500 with two, three and four bedrooms available in one and two story designs.

When completed, the entire community will contain 449 townhomes.

Facing the broad, winding greenbelts in the very heart of the development, the new family-size homes are complete with a long list of luxury appointments. Five different floorplans have ceramic tile entries, large living rooms with vaulted ceilings and wood burning fireplaces with log lighters, secluded master bedroom suites with dressing areas and private baths, fully-equipped kitchens and a private, fenced patio.

Ceramic tile countertops, wall-to-wall nylon carpeting, and stained hardwood cabinetry are examples of the superior materials used throughout the quality townhomes. A kitchen pantry, broom closet, linen closet, and spacious wardrobes provide the additional storage space needed for clutter-free living.

All sliding glass doors are of safety glass, bronze anodized window and sliding door frames are standard and all walls and ceilings are fully insulated.

All exteriors of homes, landscaped grounds and recreation facilities are maintained by the homeowners association of which each buyer is a voting member upon close of escrow. The Beachwalk Homeowners Association fee is from $40 to $42 per month depending on model size.

Immediately across from Beachwalk is the 18-hole golf course of Huntington Seaciff Country Club and the $300,000 membership facility of Huntington Seaciff Tennis Club. Twelve night-lighted public tennis courts are located next door and the entire residential development is only 1000 yards from the miles of clean, sandy beaches for which the city is so famous.

Heavy landscaping within the grounds, with an average of 11 trees per home, provides an environment of beauty and seclusion, while still maintaining convenience to shops, schools and all professional services plus easy access to the vast freeway network covering the Southland.

Walter Richardson is credited with the distinctive architecture of the extensive community which is highlighted by the 40 foot wooden clock tower located at the entrance to Beachwalk. Landscape design was by Pod 2, Inc., of Orange, and there are more than 5,000 trees planned for the property in addition to the eucalyptus, cypress and palms previously established on the site and preserved by the builder. Recently over $10,000 was spent to save a few extra trees in Lot 7.

TO SEE the ocean-close family community of elegant townhomes, exit the San Diego Freeway at Beach Boulevard. Drive south on Beach Boulevard five miles to Pacific Coast Highway. Turn right on Pacific Coast Highway to Golden West Street, right on Golden West for one-quarter of a mile to Beachwalk in Huntington Seaciff, a master-planned community in Huntington Beach.

Sales are under the direction of Don Bird Realty and furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

TOWNHOMES in the previous units are ready for immediate occupancy and a recently completed independent survey shows that over 93 per cent of the almost 300 families who have purchased Beachwalk townhomes would buy at Beachwalk again. Each owner receives an insured grant deed for his home and lot, plus a share in all of the common areas which includes the outstanding recreation facilities.

A junior-size Olympic swimming pool, a cabana building with saunas, an outdoor therapy pool, volleyball court and two huge clubhouses provide a wide range of activities for residents. There will be seven swimming pools at Beachwalk when the development is fully completed.

Shadow Run in Phase 3

The third phase of the 190-unit Shadow Run Community in Westminster is holding its grand opening this weekend with models of the four available plans in the new development on display.

The 21 one and two-story residences, from $51,990 to $66,490, represent the top of the line of single family dwellings currently being built by Warmington Development, Inc.

Occupancy is scheduled in May. Size ranges from a three-bedroom, two-bath plus family room single-story plan at 1,704 square feet to a four-bedroom, two-bath model which features a downstairs guest room or den, a family room, powder room, breakfast nook, formal dining area and three-car garage in a two-story plan occupying 2846 square feet.

Shadow Run also offers a choice of four individualized exteriors.

FOR LARGE families, the design provides an ideal arrangement for different age members of the family to pursue their interests without interrupting the activities of the others.

Shadow Run homes also have such design bonuses as block wall fencing, underground utilities, heavy rustic shake roofs, double entry doors, and wood-burning fireplaces with gas log provision. High grade carpeting and padding are standard in all bedrooms, living and dining rooms, halls and stairways.

The huge master suite, complete with twin wardrobes, double vanity dressing room and private bath, features a vaulted ceiling in all plans. In the largest home, the unique master suite has a split level layout.

SHADOW RUN is within half a block of the neighborhood shopping center.

To view the models, open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., take the San Diego Freeway south to Brookhurst off-ramp. Travel north on Brookhurst past Mile Square Golf Course to a half block past Edinger. The sales office is at 10222 Banbury Ave.

Rossmoor Chateau offering lowered interest rate—7.9

Interest rates as low as 7.9 per cent with a 30 per cent down payment are being offered at Rossmoor Chateau announced exclusive sales counselor John Papageorge.

Additionally, these rates may be acquired: 8½ per cent interest with 20 per cent down and 9½ per cent with 10 per cent down.

"These interest rates, especially the 7.9, are the lowest rates for such quality condominium homes that I know of in the entire Long Beach area," said Papageorge. "Prices still range from $39,950 to $56,950," he added, and reminded viewers that the $39,950 price purchases a spacious, full size two-bedroom, 2-bath luxury unit.

The Chateau is a new all-adult condominium home project of National Mills Associates. Furnished models are open from 10 a.m. 'til dark and are on display at 12400 Montecito Road adjacent to the Rossmoor Business and Shopping Plaza.

THE 70-UNIT development is valued at $3.5 million. Five different floor plan arrangements are offered in one bedroom with convertible den, two or three bedrooms and two bath plans. Units are available on the second, third, and fourth floors of the Regency styled building.

Sales counselors have advised interested home-seekers to inspect the exclusive community as soon as possible while a choice selection is still available.

Since the official opening sales have reached one-third.

Recreational amenities include a heated swimming pool, sauna, and therapeutic whirlpool, a fully equipped gymnasium and outdoor barbecues.

A large recreation center features lounge areas and complete kitchen facilities for resident use. Bernie Solomon, owner of Mills Construction Co. and joint venture partner with National Life Insurance Co. of Vermont called particular attention to the security features.

"We have installed a unique building, security system," Solomon said. "It provides a combination of closed circuit TV of both lobby areas and special monitor screens that are tied into a built-in intercom system," he added. Parking is underground, accessible through electrically controlled security gates. Guest parking is also available.

The condominium concept of carefree, leisure living is made possible through the residents homeowners association. For a $49.50 monthly fee exterior maintenance, landscaping, and care of the complete recreational facilities are performed by a professional firm retained by the association.

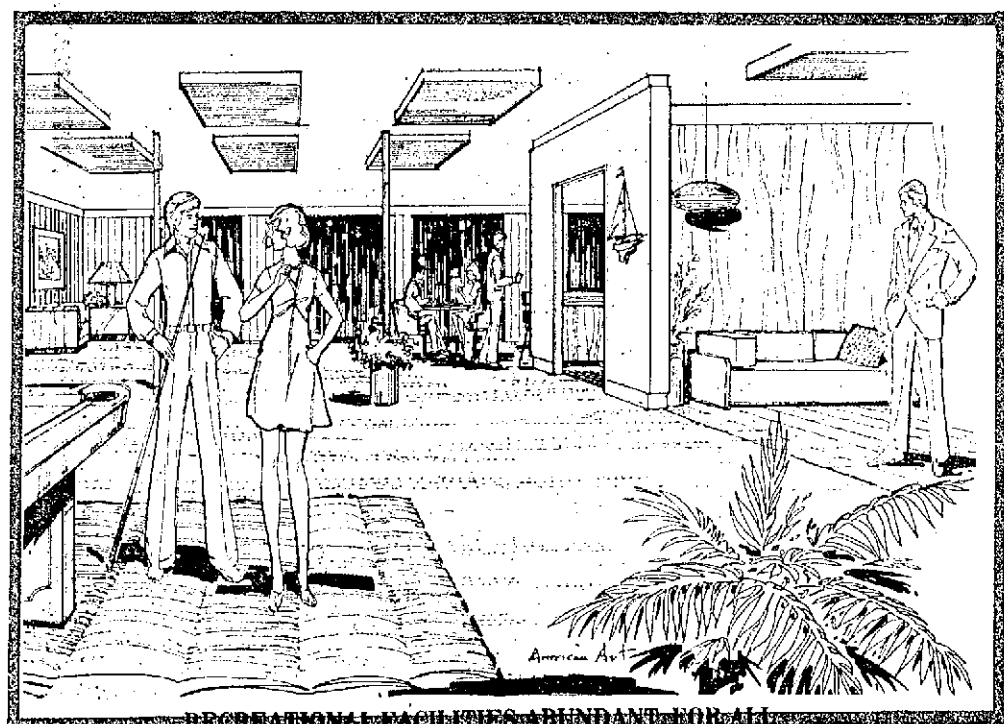

INTERIOR appointments include a selection of nylon carpeting, central air conditioning with individual thermostats, and luminous kitchen ceilings. Kitchens are all-electric and feature range, oven, disposal, dishwasher, cast iron terraced sinks and copper plumbing. All units feature acoustically-planned sound proofing and "Quiet Control" insulation in floors, ceilings and all walls.

Common balconies and courtyard areas are elegantly carpeted with "astro turf" type carpeting. Garden-view patios, and view balconies are offered on each level of the red-tiled building. Fireplaces are included in all plans as are convenient kitchen pantries.

Four of the five plans feature roomy walk-in closets in the master bedroom. A complete combination washer-dryer is included within each unit. Two conveniently located elevators serve the building, as does a separate laundry room area.

RECREATIONAL FACILITIES ABUNDANT FOR ALL

Bixby Heights sells out 70%

About 70 per cent of the one-and-two-bedroom homes have been sold in the Bixby Heights condominium complex in Long Beach, it was reported by Arpad Domyan, president of Atlantic Pacific Construction Co., Inc., builders of the community.

"Our goal was to offer a moderately priced condominium with amenities usually found only in much higher priced homes," Domyan said. "The excellent sales pace is proof that homebuyers recognize outstanding value when it is presented to them."

Bixby Heights homes are priced from $35,950, with 8½ per cent interest. For a limited time, the builder will continue to pay all closing costs (except mortgage insurance premiums, if any), Domyan added.

Special features of the complex include formal dining areas, huge walk-in closets, private terraces or balconies, wall-to-wall carpeting, mirrored wardrobes and continuous cleaning ovens.

Bixby Heights is a full security building, with admission to the lobby area at the discretion of the resident. The subterranean garage is another security area, as the electronic gates can be opened only by a homeowner.

The three-story complex is served by two elevators, and for the convenience of the owners, two centrally located trash chutes are provided. A large, professionally landscaped courtyard, complete with therapy pool, sets off the central area of the building.

Immediate occupancy is available for any of the wide variety of floor plans. Located in the prestigious Bixby Knolls area of Long Beach, the complex is within walking distance of Bixby Knolls Shopping Center, the Virginia Country Club and bus transportation and less than a mile from the San Diego Freeway.

Beautifully furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Bixby Heights is located at 4170 Elm Ave., between San Antonio Drive and Carson Street.

Winding creek feature at Huntington Garden

Huntington Creek Garden Homes are secluded from areas of heavy congestion. The new residential neighborhood has two and three bedroom garden homes set in broad green lawns with 90 per cent of the homes facing the winding creek which runs through the grounds.

Trees and banks of shrubbery border the waterway, the paths and drives of the development built by Covington Brothers. Huge boulders and logs along the bed of the creek create pools and rapids adding to the country feeling within the grounds.

The quiet serenity is also characteristic of the surrounding community, and the seclusion is balanced by the convenience of nearby shopping centers, schools and parks. Pacific Ocean beaches are less than two miles away for a full range of recreation attractions.

Priced from $36,990, the family-size Huntington Creek Garden Homes have resort facilities for the use of residents. A swimming pool and recreation clubhouse with a wet bar are placed in a park-like area and all maintenance is provided by the homeowners association.

Interiors of the luxurious garden homes have a formal living room with a wood-burning fireplace equipped with a gas outlet, most have raised tile entries and a family/dining room and some have a formal dining room. A den or bedroom option is available to buyers and all major areas have quality wall-to-wall carpeting.

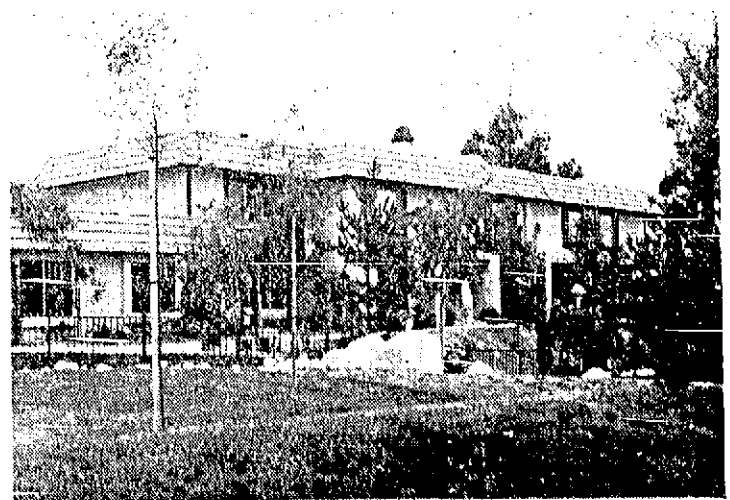

KITCHENS have luminous ceilings, ceramic tile countertops, a large pantry and a pass-through window for easy service to the patio. Built-in appliances include a range, continuous-cleaning eye-level oven, dishwasher and disposer in the double sink. Cabinets are of natural wood and most plans have a breakfast nook.

Individual laundry service areas are located in each garage and there is direct access to the interior. Attached double garages have automatic door openers for convenience and security. Tile roofs are standard and each plan has a private patio.

To see the country-quiet garden homes of Huntington Creek, exit the San Diego Freeway at Beach Boulevard (Highway 39) and drive south to Ellis Avenue.

Turn right toward the ocean at Ellis to the furnished models on display daily between Ellis and Delaware Streets in Huntington Beach.

GARDEN HOMES REFLECT QUIET SECLUSION

Visiting lady gets red rose

Peacock Ridge, an exclusive village of 44 townhomes is celebrating the opening of its model by presenting all ladies who visit today with a lovely red rose.

An IDM Corp. development, Peacock Ridge is the only community of its type on the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

The townhomes and penthouses of Peacock Ridge are unusual two-level and tri-level homes. The one bedroom and den plan as well as the three bedrooms and a den plan have open mezzanine-like upper levels.

This unique level can function as either an open, airy bedroom overlooking the living room or a supplementary entertaining area.

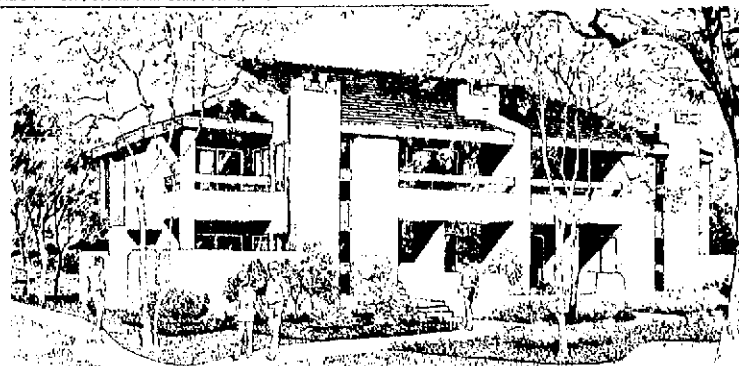

The model entry is located on the second level and is accented by a stained quarry tile floor. The impressive entry steps down into a massive living room with 20 foot cathedral ceilings.

Also located on the entry level are sliding glass doors which lead to a balcony featuring breathtaking views of Los Angeles, the Palos Verdes Peninsula, Malaga Cove and the Santa Monica Bay.

NATURAL greens, yellows and whites form the basic color scheme of the two bedroom, mezzanine, three bath model tri-level penthouse. These colors are used collectively in the plush wall-to-wall carpeting, much of the custom wall coverings and the specially matched drapes, bedspread and canopy covering in the master bedrooms.

Peacock Ridge is a fully secured community located in a cul-de-sac on the very peak of one of the highest hills on the Peninsula. Prices are from the $50,000's to the $70,000.

Peacock Ridge townhomes are located at 5987 Peacock Ridge. To reach the models, take Hawthorne Boulevard to Highridge Road. Turn south on Highridge to Peacock Ridge where you turn right to the cul-de-sac and the models.

SEA HARBOUR is the newest development in the master-planned Huntington Harbour community. Homes are set amidst heavily landscaped gardens, just two blocks from the ocean. Prices are from $33,900.

Mariners Cove West for adults

Mariners Cove West in Huntington Beach is an exclusive $2 million, 50-unit townhouse project designed for the utmost in privacy and quiet for young adult living.

All residents must be over 16 years old.

Featured are two and three bedroom, one and two story floor plans from $35,450 to $40,650.

The maintenance-free community is enclosed by boundary walls limiting access to residents and their guests only with one entrance containing a security gate system that works via a home phone.

One perimeter street allows each unit to overlook landscaped green belt areas.

ALL UNITS have fenced garden patios, laundry facilities, double garages with direct access to units, fully equipped kitchens. Double party wall construction affords sound proofing and privacy.

For recreation there is a club house, swimming pool, sauna, Jacuzzi and the Pacific just a mile away.

It's an easy cruise to Mariners Cove West. Take the San Diego Freeway to Beach Boulevard, south to Atlanta Avenue, then left to Lochlea or Newland and turn right. Or take Pacific Coast Highway to Beach, north to Atlanta and turn right.

Builder is Bud Harris of Continental Development Corp.

The project is open daily from 10 a.m. 'til dusk.

Kendall announces construction of The Landing

Opera up

Kendall Development Co. Inc. has started construction on The Landing, a $9-million, luxury-home development in Huntington Beach, according to A.P. Skip Lench, president of the Newport Beach-based homebuilding firm.

The 121-home project is located on 28.3 acres in Huntington Beach, 1½ miles from Bolsa Chica State Beach.

Lench expects a mid-March opening for The Landing, which will mark Kendall Development Company's entrance into the luxury home market.

Architects Ian Harrison and David Lorenzini of Newport Collaborative in Newport Beach designed four dramatic floorplans for the project, ranging in size from 1,701 to 2,633 square feet. Prices for the three- and four-bedroom homes are expected to range from $61,990 to $75,990.

AMONG THE top quality features included in homes at The Landing are wood-burning fireplaces, nylon shag carpeting, cedar shake and shingle roofs, energy-saving insulation, rear lot-line fencing, and concrete driveways and walkways. Kitchens will feature deluxe ranges and ovens; trash compactors; waste disposers; three-cycle dishwashers; luminous ceilings; and ceramic tile counters.

Baths have been given such luxurious accents as step-up tubs, built-in planters, double lavatories, and DuPont Corian vanities.

Located in the rapidly developing Bolsa Chica section of Huntington Beach, The Landing is within a mile of the 400-acre state wildlife refuge and the 167-acre Huntington Central Park.

Floor plan designs and renderings of The Landing may be viewed at the Kendall Development Co. sales office from 10 a.m. until dusk every day, located less than a mile from The Landing. The temporary sales office can be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Springdale exit. Drive south on Springdale, then turn right on Slater and follow the signs to The Landing.

NEW YORK (AP) — More than eight million Americans attended live opera performances between September 1973 and September 1974, according to a survey sponsored by the Metropolitan Opera National Council.

Rent-while-you-buy at La Linda

In a grand close-out program that literally amounts to rent-free living, La Linda Villas is currently enjoying excellent response to its "try while you buy" program, reports the developer, Bob Main.

Buyers may move in immediately and no down payment or closing costs are required now.

"In addition," he said, "buyers may move into their choice of a beautiful patio-style unit on a rental basis for six months. After that, the money paid in rent is applied to satisfy the down payment and closing cost requirements. It's like living literally rent free in your own luxurious unit." Main added.

"PERFECT for the young executive on the way up, the patio styled units consist entirely of preferred single-story patio homes," he said.

This feature offers a privacy not normally associated with today's condominium living.

Prices range from $29,950 with conventional financing available. Main said that residents' privacy is the keynote. "The units include private enclosed patios and large areas of landscaped greenbelt that separate the building clusters.

"When these six units are sold," he added, "there will be no more built at this location. The quality and workmanship, evident throughout, cannot be duplicated at these low prices," he said.

FEATURES include all of those which have now become standard in most new homes, such as carpeting, draperies, forced air heating, dishwashers, baths with pullmans, extra large mirrors, and complete kitchen built-ins. In addition, however, La Linda also offers some features which are truly extras. Convenient kitchen trash compactors are capable of reducing an entire week's trash to a small, compact bundle which can be handled easily.

Every home has an individual gas barbecue on the patio and all of the garage doors are automatic.

Largest plan is No. 4, a three-bedroom home with a den, two baths, formal dining room and kitchen. Both the den and the dining room open through sliding doors onto the private patio. This is ideal for the professional man who does all or part of his work at home.

Plan 3 also has three bedrooms. It has two baths, living room, kitchen and dining room.

LA LINDA Villas are located at 5300 W. First Street in Santa Ana, at the southwest corner of First and Euclid Aves., close to the Garden Grove Freeway and the entire system.

The condominium concept of leisure living is also provided at La Linda Villas, with complete exterior maintenance, landscaping and care of the recreational facilities provided by a professional firm.

The Walker & Lee sales office and model complex open daily at 10 a.m. Visitors may reach the site by taking the Euclid Avenue exit off either the Garden Grove or the San Diego Freeway.

Realtors opposed to condo bills

Jaye L. Hunter, president of Long Beach's District Board of Realtors, has announced that another attempt by government which would authorize cities in California to deny condominium conversion, where 1,000 or more units are involved, is being met with strong opposition by the 78,000-member California Association of Realtors.

The bills, SB 65 and 219, were heard last week in Sacramento and moved from committee with a "do pass" recommendation.

CAR President Richard Farrer of Hayward said that opposition from his association was mounted because "a condominium represents a form of ownership and these bills give local government the right to deny ownership in a particular form irrespective of the physical aspects of the project.

"Housing is not a public utility nor should it be," Farrer concluded.

The Last of the Elegant Ones

Results are what count, so we'll avoid adjectives and let the facts speak for themselves: In the past four years, 1204 families have purchased Presley homes in Cerritos. Now there are only four luxury homes left. We've listed them below, and they all include shag carpeting, fireplaces, mirrored wardrobes, hardwood ash kitchen cabinetry with built-ins, ceramic tile in kitchens and baths, cast-iron sinks and tubs, full shake roofs, concrete driveways, complete fencing, cultured-marble bathroom vanities with oversized mirrors, and a host of other no-extra-cost amenities. So... without fanfare, this is your last opportunity to invest in a luxury home in Cerritos at a sensible price.

PLAN 42A - 2 story, 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, 2268 square feet. Second fireplace in king-sized master bedroom suite; three-car garage. Lot 2. $60,350.

PLAN 102D - 2 story, 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, 2330 square feet. Wet bar in both family room and upstairs recreation room; two-car garage. Lot 1. $61,450.

PLAN 102F - 2 story, 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, 2330 square feet. Completely finished recreation room with balcony. Two wet bars; three-car garage. Lot 6. $62,000.

PLAN 102G - 2 story, 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, 2330 square feet. Cathedral ceiling with soaring fireplace. Recreation room, balcony, two wet bars. Lot 4. $62,000.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITIES

UNUSUAL PRIVACY FOR ALL HOMES

Coco Palms West adapted for quiet, adult living

Sales at Coco Palms West, the adult garden home community on the border of Anaheim and Stanton, have exceeded 60 per cent in 2½ months according to George Liohos, vice president of marketing and sales for Covington Brothers. Priced from $18,990, the air-conditioned two bedroom, two bath garden homes are ready for immediate occupancy.

"Coco Palms West is particularly adapted to adult living," states Liohos. "All parking is on the perimeter with no through traffic, there are two recreation centers which are planned to increase social contact between neighbors and the location is one of the best available for working singles or couples. The grounds are quiet and each garden home enjoys unusual privacy."

Single story and studio plans are grouped in clusters among the landscaped greenbelts. The warmth of California ranch styling blends with the exotic shrubs and trees shading the walkways, entries and lawns. Heavy wood shake roofs, wood and stucco siding and expanses of windows distinguish the exteriors.

A PATIO entry introduces the single story floorplan. A large living room, formal dining room, modern kitchen with a built-in planning desk, an immense master bedroom with a private bath and a second bedroom are complete with wall-to-wall carpeting balanced by vinyl tile flooring.

Built-in kitchen appliances include a gas range with vented hood and exhaust fan, an oven, dishwasher, disposer in the double sink, and a large kitchen pantry. A large patio in the studio plan opens from the living room and there is a powder room in the first level in addition to the two full baths upstairs.

Each bedroom in the studio plan has a deluxe bath and the master bath is compartmented. Double wardrobes serve the large master bedroom suite which overlooks garden vistas.

Residents have the use of two separate recreation centers within the grounds.

A HUGE swimming pool with sun decks and a covered cabana adjoin a Jacuzzi, shuffleboard court and a fire pit. The other center contains two shuffleboard courts, a badminton and volleyball court and a barbecue area next to a parklike open area.

All maintenance of the pools and recreation facilities, the exteriors of the garden homes and the landscaped grounds is provided by the Coco Palms West Homeowners Association. Residents have additional leisure time and the security from knowing that uniform property care supports their property value.

To see the furnished model on display at 10773 Magnolia Avenue, exit the Santa Ana Freeway at Magnolia and drive south to the development. From the Garden Grove Freeway, exit at Magnolia Avenue and drive north to Coco Palms West which is open daily.

Hawkins expands franchise regions

Herbert Hawkins Realtors plans immediate expansion into a fourth franchise region in the Long Beach, Lakewood, Downey and Cerritos areas. Rush Williams, director of franchise, has appointed Robert Irish, 33, of Cerritos as its new manager for Region IV.

Irish will have offices temporarily in the firm's Orange County regional headquarters at the City Financial Center in Orange. He is a member of Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors and is well known in realty circles, having formerly been vice-president and general manager of another large realty firm there. He is a graduate of Santa Ana College where he earned an Associate in Arts degree in Real Estate and also has an extensive background of management and franchise experience in the oil industry.

Several area brokers have indicated an interest in the Hawkins organization and Irish is now interviewing prospective broker-associates and salespeople. He has announced plans for the first Herbert Hawkins Realtors office in Cerritos to open soon. For further franchise information, Irish can be reached at (714) 534-4161.

Noise level key factor in buying

Townhouse living has many advantages—not the least of which is price. With less land needed, and some walls combined, developers can afford to offer more of the features you want at a price within your reach.

But noisy neighbors and a sense of reduced privacy can lower your enjoyment of your new home. It doesn't have to be that way, says the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute (ARI).

Learn a few things to look—and listen—for as you shop for the right townhouse for you.

Los Coyotes CC Homes allow plenty of room

ROBERT IRISH

HHR has over 50 offices throughout Southern California and Colorado, with administrative offices in Temple City.

The firm has served Southern California for 27 years and is a full-service realtor with escrow, mortgage loan, insurance and termite company divisions.

An "open country" environment is a popular feature of the Los Coyotes Country Club Homes neighborhood located in the Bellhurst area of Buena Park. The 27-hole golf course of Los Coyotes Country Club winds throughout the exclusive community.

All of the spacious executive homes are built on large lots of over 10,000 square feet with large spaces allowed between the residences for maximum privacy. The rural atmosphere is enhanced by the absence of sidewalks and a favorite activity of residents is evening strolls along the private roadways.

The homes are arranged at various setbacks and angles on the lots to avoid the straight line appearance of less luxurious developments.

Lighted tennis courts, a swimming pool, luxurious clubhouse and other amenities are available within the community for those who wish to join the prestigious private country club.

WITH ONLY 11 homes remaining in the current third phase, the available selection of Los Coyotes Country Club Homes sites and models is on a "first come, first served" basis, according to Gerry Davis, sales representative for Emblem Development Corp., builders of the fast-selling project.

Prices begin at $75,500 for the remaining one and two story and tri-level homes with three or four bedrooms and from 2,218 to 3,342 square feet of living area.

Among the luxurious appointments are formal dining rooms and breakfast nooks, large family rooms, dramatic living rooms with fireplaces, and elegant master suites with both tub and stall shower in private baths.

Select plans feature huge upper level bonus rooms (convertible to a total of seven bedrooms in one home), valuted ceilings, second fireplace in master suite and wet bars.

ALL INCLUDE deluxe built-in kitchen, air conditioning, intercom system and garage door opener, tiled entry hall, three baths and generous patio slab.

Model homes are open daily from 10:30 a.m. to dusk at 8665 Los Coyotes Drive. The development is within 20-minutes commuting distance of business centers of Los Angeles, Whittier, and Long Beach and may be easily reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to Beach Boulevard in Buena Park, then drive north to Los Coyotes Drive, just south of Rosecrans, and up the hill to Los Coyotes Country Club Homes.

TV health show gives good feeling

NEW YORK (AP) — A new television series on health is already working wonders for its producers. They've gone from merely being alive and well to actually feeling good. However, they didn't plan it that way.

Pacific Gardens ready now

High environmental standards have created a lush garden park with more than one third of the total land in open space at Pacific Gardens, the new townhome development in Garden Grove. The community is adjacent to the 40-acre municipal park for additional family recreational opportunities.

Priced from $30,450, the two and three bedroom townhomes are ready for immediate occupancy. Residents have the use of a complete recreation center provided for families living at Pacific Gardens. A swimming pool and children's play area are conveniently located.

All maintenance of the recreation facilities, exteriors of the townhomes and the landscaped grounds and open spaces is handled by the Pacific Gardens Homeowners Association. More leisure time and at-home recreation is beneficial to families.

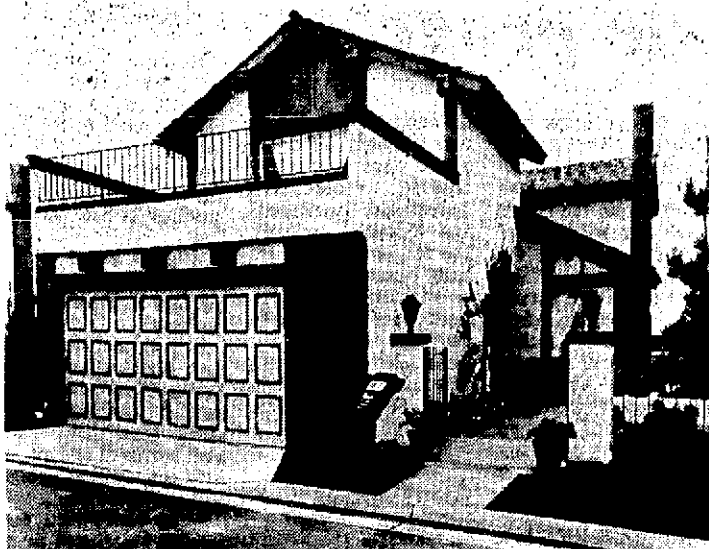

ALL LEVELS of schools are within walking distance of the luxurious townhomes. Bolsa Grande High School, the junior high and elementary schools are close by and working members of the family have easy access to freeways leading to Long Beach, Los Angeles and all Orange County metropolitan centers.

"A full line of built-in luxury features ease moving day for our new buyers," states Marty Jenson, sales representative for Forest E. Olson, Inc., Realtors, sales agent for the $3.3 million development. "Wall-to-wall carpeting, drapes, a range, self-cleaning double oven, dishwasher, disposer and trash compactor are included."

Each townhome has a private patio and a pass-through serving window opens from the kitchen. Patios are plumbed for gas for a barbecue connection. Double enclosed garages are standard and each is equipped with outlets for a washer and dryer.

FURNISHED models display the floorplans and features of the one and two story townhomes. There are five basic floorplans with 1½ and 2½ baths in three different elevations.

Pacific Gardens is easily reached by taking the Garden Grove Freeway to Magnolia Avenue and driving south on Magnolia to the corner of Westminster Avenue. The new garden park is open daily.

THIS STORY, three bedroom Bedford model is one of six decorator furnished patio homes at S & S Construction's Cypress Village Greens community. It has opened a new unit of 26 two, three and four bedroom patio homes available for immediate occupancy. The patio homes offer the privacy of a single family home with the recreational amenities of townhome living.

Cypress Village Greens opens 24 patio homes

Featuring quality detached patio homes midway in size and price between single family homes and townhomes, Cypress Village Greens has opened a new unit of 24 patio homes available for immediate occupancy.

The 196-unit community, located in Cypress, has been developed by S & S Construction principal subsidiary of Shapell Industries, Inc., of Beverly Hills. The lath and plaster patio homes, offered in spacious two to four bedroom plans, are priced from $38,950.

"Our patio homes have proven popular with buyers seeking the privacy of a detached home combined with all the recreational amenities and maintenance-free advantages of a townhome," stated Mark Bader, vice president of S & S. "These factors and our luxury features make Cypress Greens patio homes an extremely good value in today's market."

Also included in the price are wood shingle roofing, ceramic tile in kitchens and baths, marble pullman tops, all electric kitchens with dishwasher and disposal, automatic garage door openers, and hand-finished natural wood cabinetry from Shapell's General Cabinet Co. subsidiary.

Also included are cast iron tubs and sinks, concrete driveways, complete exterior sidewall and attic insulation, natural stone or brick fireplaces, and extensive use of wood and brick trim exteriors. Quality wall to wall shag carpeting and vinyl tile flooring are also featured.

Residents have full use of the recreational facilities located within the community. Private clubhouses feature lounge areas and kitchen facilities. Swimming pools and Jacuzzi whirlpools are located throughout the landscaped greenbelts and children's play areas.

Homebuyers at Cypress Village Greens may take advantage of the services offered through Shapell's Decorating Studios, which offers a complete line of home furnishings and accessories, as well as free professional decorating counsel to aid in custom interior design. Shapell's showroom is located in Westminster.

Six decorator furnished models are open to the public seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., at Cypress Greens, located on Orangewood, just east of valley View.

CYPRESS GREENS is one of three distinct villages within Cypress Village, which also offers single family homes and townhomes. The entire community is conveniently close to schools, shopping, recreation and employment. The Garden Grove and San Diego Freeways are only minutes away.

Shapell, one of the nation's largest homebuilders, has developed more than 20,000 homes throughout California over the past 20 years. The company, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, has received numerous awards and recognition from homeowners associations, civic and state government, and the United States Congress for superior quality construction.

Shares go up

RIVERSIDE.—Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc., a leading manufacturer of mobile homes and RVs, said Friday that its sales were $220 million for a net of $3.2 million or 28 cents a share for the 39-weeks ending Jan. 26. This was an increase over a similar period last year when shares were 10 cents.

Riviera Huntington—immediate occupancy

All Riviera Huntington condominium units are available for immediate occupancy, reports marketing director Bob Reilly.

"Many of our homes are already occupied," Reilly said, "and all other homes are available for immediate occupancy on approval of credit."

Riviera Huntington, an F.A. Jones Enterprises community, features one, two and three bedroom units, with one, two or 2½ baths. Prices range from $23,950 to $35,500, with excellent conventional financing terms.

"Our prices are very low for the Huntington Beach area," Reilly said. "We consider it extremely unlikely that homes of this quality can ever be built again at these prices."

One small monthly maintenance fee covers all exterior maintenance, landscaping and care of the recreational facilities. The rec center includes a large clubhouse, heated swimming pool, hot water whirlpool jacuzzi, putting green and tennis court.

LUXURY EXTRAS included at RH are a private patio and enclosed garage, deluxe-equipped all-electric kitchen with self-cleaning oven.

The sales office and model complex is located at 16771 Bolsa Chica Ave., at Pearce Avenue in Huntington Beach. The site is reached from the Bolsa Chica exit off the San Diego Freeway, south to the homesite.

All visitors who bring a Riviera Huntington ad or news story to the sales office will receive a complimentary gift from the builder.

Spyglass Hill offers home trade program

Spyglass Hill, the prestige development of John and Bill Lusk in Corona del Mar, now offers new buyers an exclusive "trade in" on their present home through Lusk Realty, a division of the company.

"For most people, selling their old home is the hardest part of buying a new one," says Bob Hall, general sales manager. "To make things easier, when a family selects a new home at Spyglass, Lusk Realty will handle the transaction for them, enabling them to use their equity as the down payment on their new Spyglass Hill home."

"This means that many families can move into Spyglass Hill for a lot less than they might have thought," Hall said. One- and two-story homes in this prestige view-oriented community are priced from $116,000 to $208,000.

"Those buyers who have already used this plan seem pleased at how smooth a transaction it can be," Hall adds.

THE SIX-HOME model complex was decorated by Carole Eichen Interiors and is open to the public daily from 10 until dusk. Take McArthur Boulevard from either the San Diego Freeway or Pacific Coast Highway to San Joaquin Hills Road. Go east up the hill to the site at 15 Bodega Bay Drive.

The architectural plan for each of the six floorplans takes into consideration the remarkable view of Balboa, Newport, the Catalina channel and miles of coastline. Wherever possible, the major living areas of each home are arranged to capture the views. Kitchens, family rooms, master bedroom suites and living and dining rooms feature large window areas with sliding glass doors leading onto view-oriented patios.

The magnificent views captured from the homes stretch for hundreds of miles up and down the coast and out to sea. "The beauty of the site is even more appreciated when you realize that development of most of Southern California's available prime ocean view property has already taken place, making communities like Spyglass a scarcity," says Hall.

"SPYGLASS HILL is a culmination of the nearly 30 years of home-building experience of John D. Lusk & Son," adds Hall. Luxury design features include picturesque staircases, large formal entries, individually designed wood-burning fireplaces in family rooms and living rooms, and exposed beam or vaulted ceilings.

One exciting detail of the master bedroom suite is the tiled planter area which is inset beneath the window near the sunken Roman tub.

Wet bars and fully equipped kitchens with pass-through windows are included for easy entertainment. Some plans have a bedroom and bath located near the kitchen and service area, designed for a housekeeper or to be used as a guest room.

Spyglass Hill is located in the Irvine Co. master planned village of Harbor View. The entire 83,000 acres of Irvine Ranch were master planned in the early 1960s by the Irvine Company for a balanced environment including residential, recreational, commercial and industrial facilities. The residential areas are being carefully developed to establish distinct villages with ample open space and parks. The sales office is open daily at 15 Bodega Bay Drive, Corona del Mar. Phone (714) 644-1321.

Apartment seminar on legalities

The "Legal and Ethical Aspects of Renting Apartments" is the theme of a symposium Saturday at the Anaheim Hyatt House Hotel.

A panel of attorneys will cover all laws, new and current, that apply in the ownership and management of renting apartments and dwellings.

Featured speaker is Robert Watson, Orange County agent of the California Department of Industrial Relations. Watson will explain the state and federal laws applicable to managers and employees of apartments and condominiums.

In addition, all facets of landlord-tenant relations will be defined by the four-member legal staff of the Apartment Association of Orange County, a non-profit organization.

Open to the public by ADVANCE reservations ONLY. Call (714) 638-5550 for details.

Mould Gets VP post

Melvin L. Mould, a Long Beach realtor, was installed as a regional vice president of the National Association of Realtors during the association's annual mid-winter meetings in San Antonio, Tex.

Beachwalk
Huntington Seaciff

The long awaited center unit of Beachwalk Homes rises on broad, winding greenbelts at the very heart of the community. We're holding to our usual high landscaping (average 11 trees to every home). And, of course these are the same feature-loaded townhouses that have been setting sales records since we first opened. Today, close to 300 value-wise families have bought in Beachwalk. An independent survey shows that over 93% would buy here again tomorrow! And that's the kind of testimonial money can't buy! If you've been to Beachwalk, come again. Until you've seen Unit V, you'll never know how good townhouse life can be.

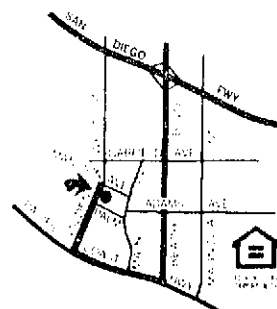

BEACHWALK - THE BEACH IS ONLY PART OF IT.

The location is ideal - just an easy stroll to the beach, and Huntington Beach's Golf Club is directly across the way. Beachwalk is virtually next door to schools and to night-lighted tennis courts. And ownership includes two private clubhouses, fabulous recreation, and seven swimming pools. See Beachwalk now... you'll not see it like again!

LIGHTING IT ALL IN HALL

Design for People

Halls have use for decorations

By EMILY MALINO

Halls can be handy places. Most people waste their halls, abandoning them altogether or making a half-hearted attempt to treat them as an extension of another room.

Halls are almost always compact, self-contained spaces that can be converted, with a bit of imagination and foresight, into individual and useful spaces.

I've seen narrow halls doubling as libraries, for example, lined with shallow shelves for books and small objects d'art; I've seen wider halls where shallow cupboards have been built to take the place of a linen closet or extra storage for an adjoining bedroom. I've seen small square halls where a handy extra closet was built for out-of-season clothes, and I've seen halls that double as galleries for fine art or family photography.

No matter how you use your hall, however, it is essential to light it properly. In most halls there are one or two small and insignificant ceiling lights.

LIGHTING fixtures today are versatile enough to illuminate just about any part of a hall. There are recessed ceiling fixtures that virtually disappear, where the source of the light is concealed by the recess, but where the walls or floor are evenly lighted or dramatically spotlighted.

If you cannot recess your lights, there are fixtures that do the same lighting job but are mounted on the ceiling surface. Some of these are even more flexible — like a surface-mounted track light, which you can attach to one existing outlet and run in four-foot connected sections the length of your hall, with many different lights to choose from which can swivel or adjust laterally and vertically for the greatest possible flexibility.

With this kind of arrangement, you can spotlight a variety of wall-hung treasures in the narrowest of halls.

There are plug-in lamp lights as well. If you have a baseboard receptacle, you can use a simple floodlight encased in an unobtrusive cylinder that stands on the floor, lights the ceiling and thus provides an indirect light that is dramatic and clear.

In a long hall I worked on, I decided to drop the ceiling enough in the entry area for a recessed fluorescent fixture. Four feet square, it looks like a giant skylight and makes a pleasant transition from outdoors to indoors as well as lighting a whole cluster of elegant black and white drawings and the inside of the coat closet I carved out of the hall while I was dropping the ceiling.

WHERE THE original ceiling remained, I attached a track to the existing ceiling outlet and ran eight feet of track with six fixtures attached. I used the smallest fixture I could find — basically just a sleeve on an adjustable bracket fitted with a baby floodlight.

'Boom or bust' end sought

A program aimed at revitalizing the depressed housing industry and restoring consumer confidence in the national economy has been outlined by newly elected President J. S. Norman, Jr. for the National Association of Home Builders.

"This industry has hit bottom," Norman, a Houston builder, told the NAHB's 31st Convention/Exposition in Dallas. "From here on we're going to be moving up."

In tackling the problems of recession, inflation, and consumer confidence, Norman resolved to:

- (1) Search for solutions to the "boom or bust" cycles in the mortgage market.
- (2) Promote sensible growth policies instead of the no-growth attitudes which have hampered the industry.
- (3) Identify the inflationary pressures which have driven 60 per cent of American families out of the housing market.
- (4) Develop a strong consumer relations approach through the Home Owners Warranty Program.

In a policy statement the NAHB board of directors urged that the President, Congress, and the Federal Reserve Board bring mortgage interest rates within the reach of middle-income Americans.

Century 21 brokers to install Friday

Brokers Council executive committee members will be installed Friday at the Saddleback Inn, Santa Ana, during the annual awards banquet for the Orange County Region of Century 21 Real Estate.

Officers will be Larry Schley, Huntington Beach, president; Jack Lane, Los Alamitos, vice president; and Sue Pearson, Huntington Beach, secretary-treasurer.

Serving as area representatives on the executive committee will be Jim Emery, Brea, North Orange County; Gerry Gritters, Garden Grove, West Orange County; Elma Remalia, Anaheim; Joan Green, Huntington Beach, Huntington Beach; Dotte Kemp, Mission Viejo, Saddleback Valley-South Orange County-Laguna; Doug Minery, Santa Ana, East Orange County; and Dan Wallentine, Newport Beach, Newport Beach-Costa Mesa.

The first members of the region's new Million Dollar Club will be introduced and presented with awards.

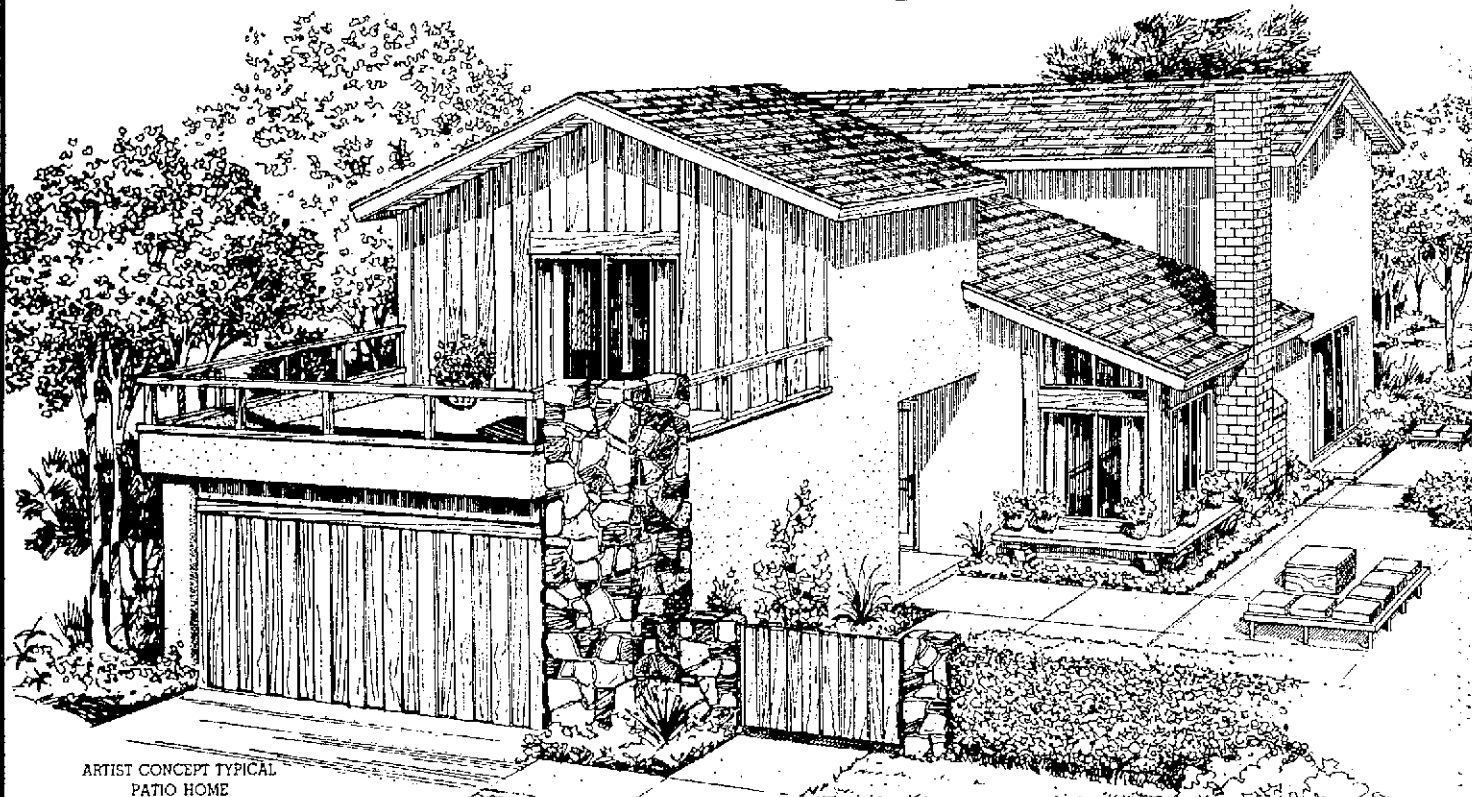

The awards banquet also will include the observance of the third anniversary of the opening of the first Century 21 offices, which were 17 Orange County offices. Now the organization has more than 60 offices in Orange County and more than 1,000 in the United States.

LARRY SCHLEY

Schley is a partner in Century 21 Surf Realty, which has two offices in Huntington Beach. He is on the board of directors for the Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley Board of Realtors and is following a term as the exalted ruler of Huntington Beach Elks Lodge 1959 by serving as a trustee.

Broadmoor masters the master suite at Fullerton

MASTER SUITE HIGHLIGHTED BY VAULTED CEILING
Six Floorplans Offered at New Residential Neighborhood

"The master suite has achieved a new pinnacle of excellence at Broadmoor Fullerton," according to Glen Brengle, executive vice president for Broadmoor Homes, Inc., builder of the 125-home neighborhood.

"Here, the master suite has become an artistic creation," he said. "From the sunken Roman-style tubs to the mirrored dressing areas, Broadmoor Fullerton master suites create an atmosphere of exciting elegance."

In each of the six plans available, the master suites are lavishly appointed. Such fine detail items as faucets and door handles have been carefully selected to harmonize with the overall aesthetic scheme of the suite and the entire home as well.

THE BEDROOMS are spacious with romantic sloping ceilings in some plans. The dressing areas are large enough for the comfort and convenience of two people and feature double basin cultured marble pullman tops.

Broadmoor Fullerton offers three one-story and three two-story floorplans, ranging in size from 1,852 to 3,127 square feet with prices ranging from $86,990 to $128,000.

The "Cedarcrest" offers three bedrooms and two baths, while the elegant "Castlegate" has five bedrooms and three and one-half baths.

Three of the plans have four bedrooms and one has four bedrooms and a den which can be converted to a guest room or a fifth bedroom.

Each of the plans features a large open-garden kitchen with the latest in General Electric appliances. The sunken living rooms have stained wooden beam ceilings, massive fireplaces and sliding glass door "walls" leading to yard areas.

MODEL HOMES are now open daily from 10 a.m. until dusk.

Located at 1752 N. Hale Ave. in Fullerton, the fully furnished models, decorated by Saddleback Interiors of Irvine, may be reached by taking the Yorba Linda Boulevard off-ramp from Freeway 57 (the "Orange" Freeway) and traveling west a mile or so to the Broadmoor Fullerton community entrance at State College Boulevard.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Building your own home: Realize your limitations

By DON G. CAMPBELL

Whether it's mounting a butterfly, making a pot-holder out of an old pair of blue jeans, or fixing a non-functioning door bell, there's a great deal of satisfaction in doing it yourself.

But if the butterfly's a little crooked, the pot-holder's a bit thin, or if the door bell still conks out occasionally, it's no big deal. It's in the major projects where real trouble lurks for the do-it-yourselfer.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

We live in a very nice, four-year-old, three-bedroom house with family room which, because of an increase in family size, is getting small for us. We could just add a bedroom and large family room onto this house, but we are also dissatisfied with living in a subdivision and would like to live on a country lot. We should have about $20,000 cash from the sale of this house and would like to build a house ourselves, subcontracting what we cannot do. We think this would be an ideal way to save money. In fact, we probably couldn't afford to buy the size house we need at today's prices.

My husband has never worked at building houses, but is fairly handy at many things, doing plumbing and wiring jobs in the family, and is now taking an adult education course in Advanced Carpentry. He plans to do all the carpentry himself with the help of friends. I should mention that my husband has an income of $15,000 a year and will be able to work on the house four days a week.

As this is still in the talking stage, there are some questions we have: Is it feasible? Is it possible to get some kind of loan from a bank while in this house while we build the new one (it might take a year)? Or must we sell this house first and work with our own money? What about a second mortgage? Are there other ways of doing these things? Mrs. M. M. (Buffalo, N. Y.)

ANSWER: I admire your spirit but, as a man who is still nursing a blackened fingernail from a hammer mishap two months ago, I shudder at the thought of such a project.

Yes, it's feasible, although in today's climate of tight money it's going to be tougher, much tougher, than usual to get financing for it.

The normal course of action is to float a "construction loan" from a lender, which is simply an agreement under which the lender supplies all or part of the funds to erect the house and usually provides that the builder (that's you, in this case) erects the structure to specifications that have been carefully spelled out — and, therefore, is subject to periodic inspections by the lender. The lender advances the money in installments as the building progresses, each installment bearing interest from the time it's advanced.

Loans like this normally continue until a definite time after completion which gives the builder time to convert the agreement into a permanent loan, or to refinance it with a conventional mortgage.

Frankly, my banking friends tell me, this sort of construction loan is primarily a device to provide interim financing for the professional home builder and, as amateurs whose ability to do the job satisfactorily is an unknown quantity (nothing personal, you understand), you are very likely to run into some opposition here and may find it necessary to go the second mortgage route.

There's one other thought I might throw out: have you thought about going the "pre-cut" or "shell house" route? These are firms that construct on your lot a house — from a wide variety of stock floor plans — that is just what the latter name describes, a "shell." Since all of the interior work is left up to the buyer, it's an inexpensive way for the handy man to put his talents to work

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

Our building consists of Own-Your-Own apartments, the kind where the gross taxes are included in the monthly maintenance fee. When interviewed by the secretary who was the representative for the owners in the building, I agreed to pay a monthly maintenance fee to cover all expenses outside of my apartment, insurance, taxes and water.

I was hardly in my apartment when the treasurer told me I was expected to both pay the maintenance fee and do maintenance work. It's also in my escrow papers regarding the agreement I made. The state real estate commission wrote to me and said it felt it was my duty to obey the By-Laws and Covenants. Nothing in the By-Laws says we have to both pay for all expenses outside of our apartments and, at the same time, do the work for them free.

Should I just ignore the treasurer in this situation, or any other situation not in the By-Laws?

Ms. E.L.R. (Long Beach.)

ANSWER: I think you might be asking for trouble in simply ignoring the treasurer in this case. And, of course, the real estate commission is right in suggesting that you obey the By-Laws. The problem is that someone — either you or the officers of the apartment (a cooperative, I assume) — is either reading something into the By-Laws that isn't there, or is ignoring something that is.

Rather than getting into something that could be both unpleasant and costly, I think I'd take the By-Laws to an attorney and get his interpretation of what they actually say before making any waves. — from a wide variety of stock floor plans — that is

Paradise via advertisement

James Hilton and Franklin Roosevelt called it Shangri-la, the ancient Polynesians Hawaiiki, but there are a million names for it. "A piece of land I want to buy up in Oregon." "My place in the mountains." The place where a person may live in harmony with nature and with himself. The lost Garden of Eden.

It is a longing we all share — and one that has been exploited by unscrupulous real estate promoters. Offers of cheap land in Hawaii turn out to be barren lava. Idyllic vistas in Utah turned out to be tumbleweed terrain far from roads or water.

We have learned, most of us, that Paradise cannot be regained for a few dollars placed in the hands of a glib real estate promoter. We have learned never to buy land unseen.

Most of us.

It comes as a shock then to find a couple of successful, hardheaded California businessmen who bought land 6,000 miles away on the basis of a newspaper advertisement and found a paradise.

It helps, of course, to be in real estate yourself and knowledgeable about land as were Portola Valley businessmen Doug Tuck and Grant Culley. Some years ago they had sailed the Caribbean together and out of that trip had come a desire—only partly serious—to own an island.

One day in 1968, Tuck was reading the Wall Street Journal and happened to see an ad offering a plantation estate in Fiji for sale. He thought about it a while, then called Culley.

They checked out the broker, a Seattle man, who aside from specializing in exotic properties like islands, was reputable. They looked at pictures of the property, a place called Namale Plantation, and they bought it sight unseen.

And so enthusiastic were they that a Portola Valley neighbor, a banker type name of Pete Hammond, successfully demanded to buy a piece of the action.

I happened to meet the three recently while my wife and I were staying at Namale on Fiji's second biggest island of Vanua Levu, and they flew in on a quick trip.

You come to Namale as James Hilton's adventures came to Shangri-la—there is a steep ridge, you climb over it, then suddenly you are descending much too fast into this lovely, hidden valley. Only you come by airplane.

Namale is a working plantation, producing copra and food crops, but it also takes in guests to a maximum of 20—sort of a South Sea dude ranch.

The plantation takes its name from a high point that juts into the sea at the head of a bay fringed with white sand beaches and palm trees. The guest bures — Fijian thatched-roof bungalows—are scattered about the grounds, each with a view of the sea.

The property was originally owned by a couple whose hobby was horticulture and who brought to the plantation all the flowers and plants of the Pacific. It is maintained like a garden.

"We have to keep it up," manager Robin Mercer explains. "If we ever let the jungle get ahead of us, it would take tremendous effort to chop it back." He showed me one path that had been last cleared a week before. Already the foliage was closing over it.

Mercer, born in New Zealand, came to Fiji at the age of 5. His wife, Lynnette, is the daughter of Methodist missionaries in the islands. Under their management, Namale is Fiji — which is to say that it is a little bit Melanesian, a little bit Polynesian, a little English and a little Indian with just a dash of American.

Tuck says the three partners have put some $35 million into the plantation but that their primary objective is not to make money but to meet expenses with revenues from the plantation's production and from the resort operation. Guest charges are reasonable. A bura for two costs about $22.60 a day in American money. Meals come to $12.60 a day per person.

Soaking in the freshwater pool under the shade of palm trees whose coconuts have been carefully removed—falling coconuts are a serious source of accidental injury in the Pacific — one begins to get a whole new perspective on those real estate ads promising paradise.

Q: In almost all recent pictures I've seen of Elvis Presley, he's shown touching his wedding band. Is this some kind of signal he misses his ex-wife? — Mrs. Ruth Richards, Washington, D.C.

A: "I guess at best the picture of Elvis touching his ring must mean his finger itches!" diplomatically surmises Col. Tom Parker, Presley's alter ego and mentor.

Q: What President vetoed the greatest number of congressional bills? And of the total, how many of the vetoes were sustained? — R. McNally, Long Island City, N.Y.

A: Between 1933 and 1945, Franklin Roosevelt returned 371 bills to Congress unsigned, plus 263 pocket vetoes. Of his 371 regular vetoes only nine were overridden by Congress.

Q: If Barry Newman of TV's "Petrocelli" the same Barry Newman I met at Brandeis University where he earned a degree in anthropology? — Patricia G., Shreveport, La.

A: Yes. From Brandeis the actor, who plays the role of the battling barrister in "Petrocelli", moved to New York, for graduate work at Columbia. Bitten by the acting bug when he visited the workshop of Lee Strasberg with a pal, he gave up studying law to win a degree in acting. Not surprisingly, his first starring role was in the film "The Lawyer."

Q: Of all the leading ladies of Hollywood John Wayne has played opposite, has he any favorite? — Gunilla Svenson, Las Vegas, Nev.

A: "I'd say Maureen O'Hara's my favorite," the Duke said. "She's a big, lusty wonderful gal. My kinda gal. She doesn't care if she's messed up if it'll help the picture along. We did a scene together where I had to drag her through a lotta pig manure. I looked at her, laughed and she said, 'You're not going to do anything else are you?' Well," Wayne said, "I aimed a playful kick and she went sprawling in the manure. The cameras were still rolling and the director, Jack Ford, said, 'We'll use it.' I wouldn't dare do that to most actresses," the actor grinned, "It'd ruin their performance for the rest of the day." As an after-thought he added, "We've been friends for 30 years — and still are."

Q: Settle a bet. My father insists the original Matt Dillon of "Gunsmoke" was William Conrad. What about it? — G. Meiken, Phoenix, Ariz.

A: Father knows best. The future Mr. Cannon was the big shot of "Gunsmoke" when it was on radio. Jim Arness re-created the role for television.

Q: I'm curious. Who's the tallest of the network talk-show hosts? — Miriam Slovnick, Minneapolis, Minn.

A: Tom Snyder — the host of NBC's increasingly popular "Tomorrow" show is 6-foot-4, weighs around 200 pounds.

John F. Wilson, 53, of Manhattan Beach is a tool-design engineer at McDonnell Douglas Corporation. Robert and Charlene Harwick of Hemet used to own a Palm Springs restaurant. Hiram Scovel of Santa Barbara is an organic gardener. Marvin Taft of Costa Mesa is a public accountant. Alvin Olson is a janitor at the New Robinson Hotel in Long Beach. Del Hungerford teaches special students at Lakewood High School.

What they have in common is that they have all become involved in an ancient enterprise which is now experiencing its biggest boom in history.

It is the sort of business one can practice on a ranch or in a back yard. It demands little time, and promises handsome returns for relatively small investments.

And on top of everything, it promises to solve the international food and environmental crisis.

The name of this game is the breeding and raising of earth worms. Until recently, a few large outfits monopolized the worm business. Most of the worms were sold for fishing bait. One grower in Georgia, for example, sells over 25 million worms every year to fishermen.

But the growing public interest in organic farming and chemical-free foods has changed all that. Earth worms, once known primarily as those wiggly things one threaded on a hook, or occasionally turned up in the flower bed, are rapidly becoming a much sought-after commodity in the organic market as a prime soil conditioner and the source of top-quality natural fertilizer.

The organic market is so lucrative, that one large Southland operation decided to stay out of the fishing bait market altogether. Backyard worm farms are rapidly becoming a popular retirement business. Young people view worm ranching as a business opportunity with unlimited potential.

A few months ago, Del Hungerford founded the Long-Beach-based Worms and Organic Ranch Materials Society (W.O.R.M.S.). When he called the first meeting, over 80 people showed up. The new organization already has more than 100 members, and its first convention is scheduled for November at the Disneyland Hotel. The City of Anaheim is considering a proclamation of "Earth Worm Week" for that event. The worms' big attraction is money. "There is practically no competition in the field," says Jim Bickers of the Fontana Worm Ranch (FWR). "We cannot get enough worms to keep up with the demand on our sales outlets, and the market getting bigger all the time."

The FWR buys worms from affiliated growers for $2.50 a pound, then sells them through mail order houses for up to $19 per pound. The ranch also raises worms for their castings (manure). Forty pounds of worms can produce 1,000 pounds of castings each year. The castings retail for about $1.50 a pound, and are instantly grabbed by home gardeners starving for anything organic.

The FWR provides a strong rebuttal to the frequently-heard charges that ecology is bad for business. Its unique success story was made possible by the organic revolution, much like those of the Rodale Press (publishers of Organic Gardening and Farming Magazine), and the various manufacturers of anti-pollution equipment.

It was founded two years ago by two young Ontario residents, Steven Fiorentino and Peter Stella, who became attracted to worms while working for a local grower. They are 20 years old now. When they started their business, they were still in high school. They were joined by Jim Bickers, then sales manager for Pioneer Development Company, who put up the money. Today all three of them work full-time at the FWR.

They bought a small ranch in Fontana, and purchased the entire stock from an old worm ranch in Ontario. But the key to their growth (next year's projected sales are in excess of $1.25 million) was not the ranch itself, but an extensive network of growers they launched and trained as future suppliers of worms.

They sold the growers worms for $380 per bed. A bed is a low wooden frame measuring four by eight foot, containing some 100,000 worms. The worms propagate fast, doubling their number in less than two months. Once the grower reaches the number of beds he wishes to keep, he can sell excess worms back to the FWR for $2.50 per pound (the FWR has a buy-back guarantee, but the grower can sell the worms directly to bait-and-tackle shops, nurseries, or private fishermen if he so wishes). The FWR offers the new growers an eight-week course on raising worms.

John F. Wilson of Manhattan Beach bought seven beds early this year. Today he has 19, and hopes to reach 100 before starting to sell his worms back to the FWR. Since each bed can produce 120 pounds of worms and 100 pounds of castings each year, Wilson is looking forward to a handsome retirement income.

"You cannot get rich on it, but the money will come in handy," he says. "Besides, I like working with my hands in the open air."

Del Hungerford started his worm farm last spring with four beds. Now he has a dozen. He also has an organic garden at his Claremont home, and already talks about moving out of town to a farm where he can expand his worm and gardening operations.

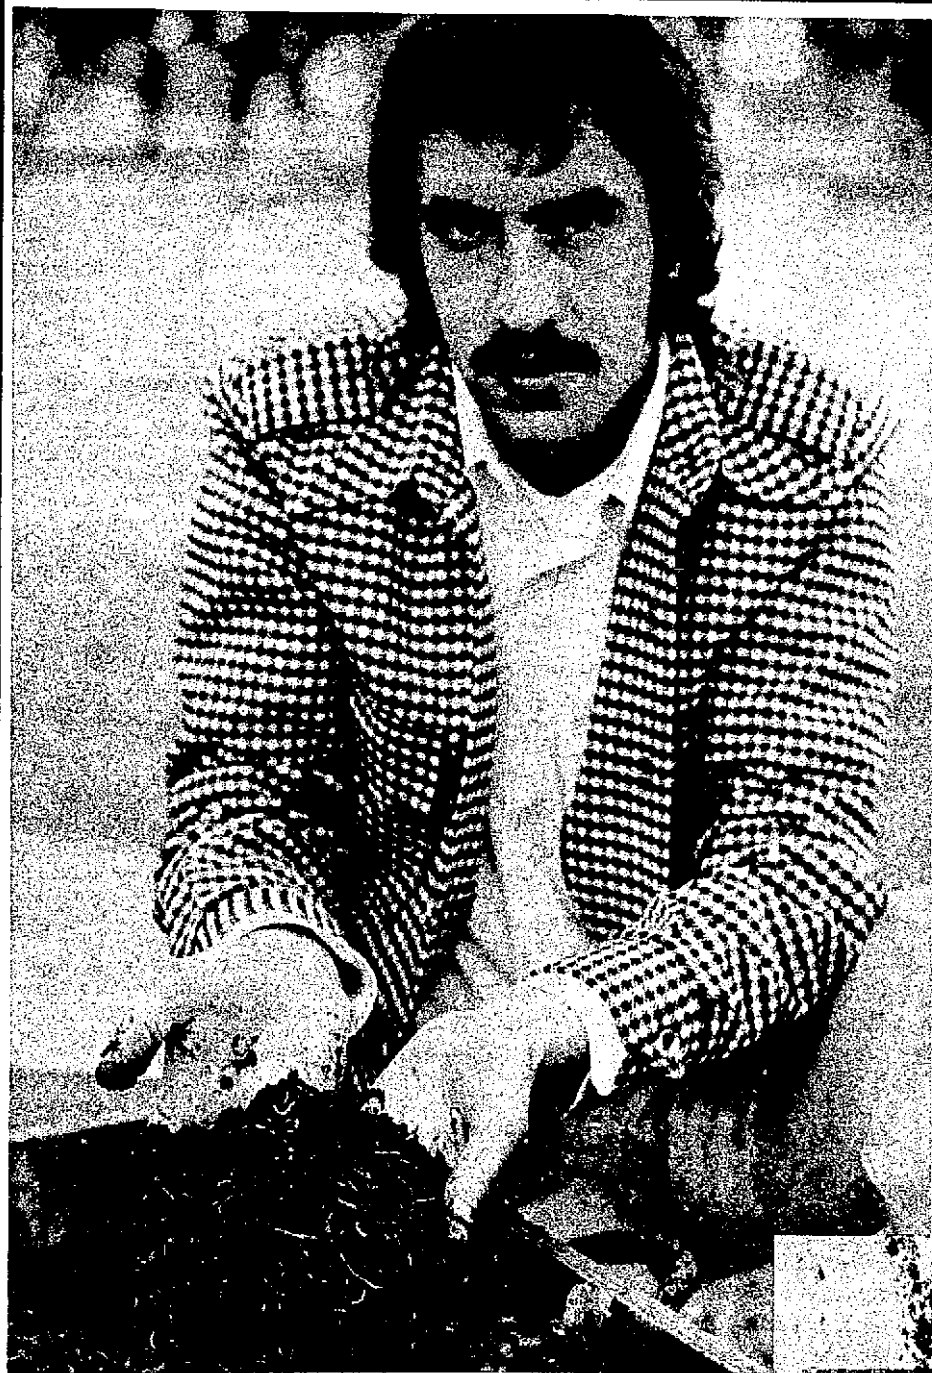

Jim Bickers is another story. "I was born and raised a cowboy back in Texas, then spent seventeen years trying to get out of it by climbing up in the corporate world. Only when I started with the worms I realized that all I really wanted was to get the dirt back under my fingernails, to get out in the fresh air and work the soil."

"I've just had it with the pressure of appointments and sales, the martini lunches, and airline schedules. Now I can take my appaloosa to horse shows, be my own boss, and feel good again." It is a long way from Texas cattle to California worms, but Bickers seemed content the other day as he strolled around the small Fontana farm in faded Levi's and cowboy boots.

The ranch was a far cry from a Texas

WORMS

*It is the sort of business

Steve Fiorentino, co-founder of the Fontana Worm Ranch, displays one of the most common varieties of worms — the Red Wigglers.

An old vintage truck marks the Fontana Worm Ranch . . . one of the largest in Southern California.

spread. True, it had a small corral on the side with a few horses, but most the area was taken with an old orange groves lined with worm beds, and a large pile of manure. If one stuck his hand into the bed and scooped the material, the manure and wood shavings mix seemed crawling with worms.

What makes them such a coveted product? As any farmer knows, the quality of the soil increases with the amount of earth worms in it.

Worms live on organic matter — decomposed leaves, manure, compost, and decaying plant roots. They move endlessly through the soil like rubber hoses with two openings, taking food through one and releasing castings through the other. Obviously, they cannot add anything to the soil that was not there to begin with. But their digestive system changes the composition of the soil in several important ways.

First, it makes such valuable elements as nitrogen, phosphorus and calcium more readily available to the plants. More importantly, the worms excrete matters that change the structure of the soil itself, tying it into soft aggregates that allow air to move freely through heavy adobe soils, and enable sandy soils to retain more water and nutrients.

As a result, plants grown on organic fertilizers in worm-rich soils are stronger, and more resistant to disease and pests than those nurtured on chemicals.

With fertilizer shortages, stemming from the fuel crisis, just around the corner, worm growers see a growing demand for their product as a cheap and effective means of improving soil productivity.

According to Bickers, worms may prove the solution to the hunger and starvation in countries such as Biafra, Bangladesh and India. These countries cannot afford expensive fertilizers, and their only chance to raise food production capacity is by improving the soil with natural means. He says that Japan, where capital is abundant but productive land is scarce, is increasingly aware of this problem and that the FWR is now in the process of negotiating a sizable worms and castings transaction with a large Japanese firm.

But, he adds, the worm's contribution to solving the food crisis is not limited to producing fertilizers. "Worms, after all, are almost pure protein, and are easy to grow," he says. "They can prove to be a great source of cheap food. After all, why are they any different from snails? Most people dislike snails. But if you call them escargot and put them in a fancy dish they become a delicacy. If a bed of worms can produce 10 pounds of pure protein each month, we cannot afford to overlook it as a source of food."

Obviously, raising worms these days is no longer limited to digging them up in flower beds or compost piles. New types of worms are being bred, and growing methods are getting more sophisticated every year.

Most of the worms grown today are Red Wigglers (or Wrigglers), hybrid relatives of the common earth worm. They are 2 to 3 inches long, easy to raise, and multiply rapidly.

Other growers specialize in Meal Worms, which are smaller and used mostly for bait, or the various kinds of Night Crawlers (African or Canadian), which reach six inches in length but are more difficult to breed. Night Crawlers are grown extensively in Canada. That country even has a Night Crawlers Pickers Union, which went on strike some time ago, claiming that picking worms at night was a skilled and difficult job that deserved proper compensation.

Much study is being conducted in the area of worm feeding. The best worm food by far is rabbit manure, but it is increasingly scarce. Cow manure can be used after being treated

IT'S AN OLD FAMILY NAME

Many times today, an old family name is not an asset in business. Some people call it old fashioned and a father/son operation. Well, at Sheelar/Stricklin Mortuary, those people are right. We are old fashioned when it comes to offering traditional personal service. We are a father and son operation except that we have added a select qualified, professional staff to it. Sometimes success is measured in dividends and stock prices, but we feel success is really measured in the satisfied families we have served. Our dividends are the words of praise we receive and the many friends we make — family to family. So, if you are a little old fashioned, would like personal service and want to be assured of the finest in traditional funeral service, remember that old family name — Sheelar/Stricklin Mortuary.

with time. It was recently discovered that chicken manure if treated with a certain bacteria, can make an excellent nourishment for worms. Horse manure, on the other hand, can prove fatal if the horses were de-wormed shortly before the manure was gathered.

If is this sort of information that led Hungerford to search for a worm growers association, and, when he found out that none existed, to start his own.

The enthusiastic response to his efforts proved his point. Members of W.-O.R.M.S. comes from all parts of the nation.

"People are learning how harmful foods grown with chemicals can be, and are looking for ways to live more naturally," Hungerford said recently. "Raising worms today is part of this new awareness."

The possibilities of the new business seem endless.

Not long ago, a Southland lady won a prize at the Los Angeles County Fair for her worms-and-oatmeal cookies.

At the Chino Youth Authority, young offenders who were entrusted with taking care of a bed of worms (given to them as a present by the FWR) showed such a marked rate of improvement that their sentences were reduced. The Florence Nightingale School in Long Beach is considering using worms in their programs for retarded children.

"There is so much to do in this field," Steven Fiorentino of the FWR sighed the other day. "When we started everybody laughed at us. Now they are no longer laughing — and things are getting better and better all the time." □

By COLIN DANGAARD

Alfred Hitchcock packed a lot of horror into "The Birds" and "Marnie". Nobody knows that better than beautiful blonde actress Tippi Hedren. She was the star of both films.

But the kind of horror Tippi knows best is not the brand that gets whole theatres screaming and stops old hearts.

Horror to her is holding a 10-months old, six-pound baby in her arms and feeling it starve to death.

Tippi Hedren has done just that in the burning deserts of Mauritania, Senegal, Nigeria, Ethiopia and Northern Kenya.

She did it in Bangladesh in 1972, when war and famine ravaged the land, and she did it in Honduras, when an earthquake levelled cities and buried whole towns.

"Do you know," she says, sitting now in her Los Angeles home, "that 12,000 people starve to death every day. And can you imagine what the figure might be when the world population doubles in the next 25 years."

She goes silent a moment, gently stroking Pharaoh, her pet cheetah, then adds quietly: "That to me is the real horror — global starvation."

In a town of make-believe, Tippi Hedren stands out as somebody who "gets her hands dirty", somebody with the courage to turn and fight hunger, disease and death.

Thus she lives in two worlds: one week making movies, clinking champagne glasses with the Beautiful People, the next tramping through mud in South America, following the cry of a homeless child.

And somewhere in between she would be found on her California ranch, caring for 85 lions, tigers and leopards, one of whom recently opened her scalp while "playing with her head."

As she says: "I'm fortunate on two counts. I believe in God — and I have a very understanding husband. Otherwise, none of what I do would be possible."

Tippi is married to Noel Marshall, executive producer of "The Exorcist" and has three children, the eldest a 17-year-old daughter who is also an actress.

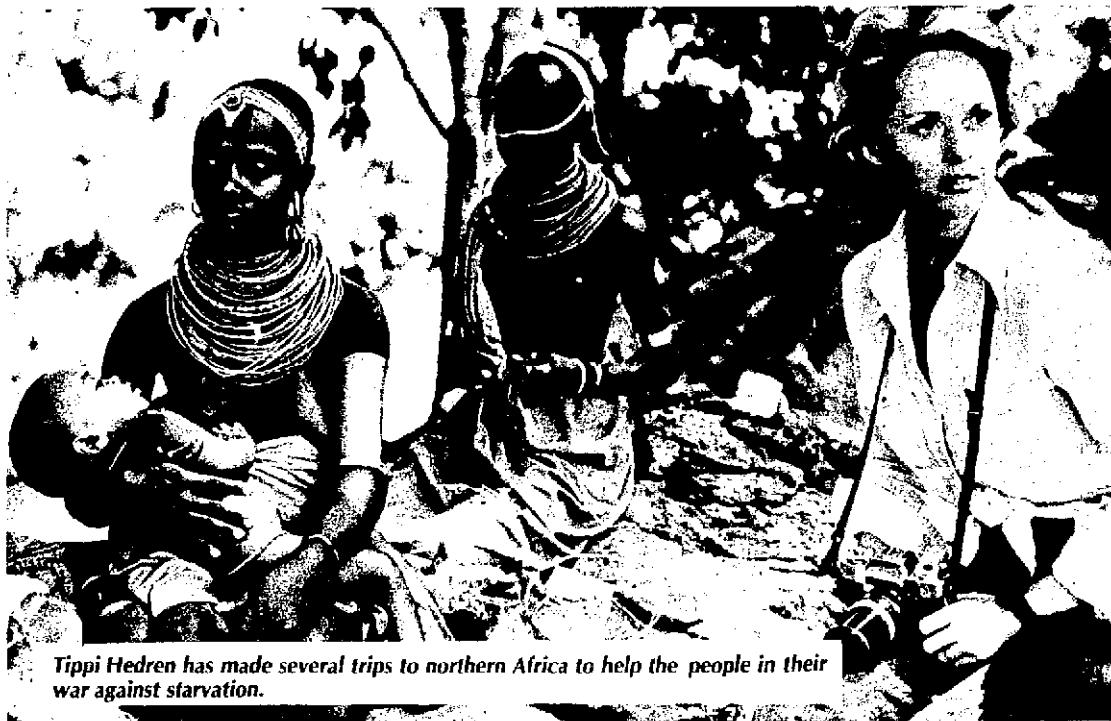

Once she made movies because she wanted to. Now she makes them to get money so she can spend time working for nothing in countries most people in Hollywood don't know exist.

And at every opportunity she uses her name: to talk to people at home, to press into service a foreign official who recalls her face from "The Birds", and might otherwise not be helpful.

"I'm so caught up in what I'm doing," she says, "that I'll use anything. The situation is critical."

Tippi first became concerned with world suffering when, in 1955, she went to India for a three-week visit. Seven days she paced her hotel room, unable to face the death and disease in the streets.

Then she flew back home to plunge into charity work.

Tippi Hedren has made several trips to northern Africa to help the people in their war against starvation.

Film star Tippi Hedren:

She's a ray of hope to the world's hungry

Star of Alfred Hitchcock's "The Birds", Tippi Hedren, turned to cheetahs when it came to pets ... Pharaoh is one of her favorites.

Tippi labored for multiple sclerosis, cancer, the Channel 28 Women's Council, The Heart Association.

When God and guns delivered death to Bangladesh in 1972, Tippi was invited on a television show to speak about the disaster. It was her husband who suggested she should first go visit the country so she might talk "with authority".

Arriving, Tippi did more than take notes. She helped deliver supplies. She organized air lifts. She brought medicine to the sick. She became involved.

She was quickly discovered by Food For The Hungry Inc., a non-profit relief organization in Glendale and became a committed volunteer.

She followed Hurricane Fifi to Honduras — already one of Central America's poorest nations — and joined President Somoza in bringing help to the homeless.

Accompanied with Food For the Hungry president Dr. Larry Ward, she flew supplies into the jungles in a DC3. When the pilot became ill, the co-pilot put her in his seat and said: "Now, you're going to learn to fly."

Says Tippi: "I clocked 16.5 hours in that plane, and I'm now going for my license. We flew 33 missions all over Honduras, dropping 200,000 pounds of food and medication. We picked up supplies in Tegucigalpa and flew them to wherever they were needed."

She laughs, a delicate, vital woman, and adds: "I'm probably the only lady in the world who started her flying lessons in a DC-3 in the middle of nowhere!"

She stayed home long enough to unpack, look over movie scripts, they fly to Haiti, where the average life expectancy is 32 or 33. On her way home she took in the San Blas islands, off the Atlantic coast of Panama.

This year she was in northern Africa, viewing death coast to coast.

Later she went to Peru, another place, another language, different people, the same old problem: hunger.

During October and November she was home just seven days, finishing up in Rome as a delegate to the World Food Conference, where, she promised: "I'll fight to get the world grain exporters to take another look at distribution."

Tippi has learned much in her crusade. Like many Americans she was under the impression the United States was already doing "more than its share." But she has since discovered the United States is placed 14th among 17 developing assistance countries. In 1972 the United States gave .29 per cent of its Gross National Product. In 1973 it dropped to .23 per cent. By 1975 it is expected to be placed 15th on the list. At the top will be Sweden, with .88 per cent, and the Netherlands with .68 per cent.

As Tippi sees it, a whole new order of thinking is due.

"There's something seriously wrong," she says, "when most people in America are concerned about eating too much, most people in the world fret about eating too little. Americans eat enormous quantities.

"Look at Thanksgiving dinner — three times what's needed! Look how we stuff our children with candy and ice cream. Somehow, food has become a 'fun' thing, not a necessity of life. We're living to eat, while others are eating to live."

Tippi feels a sense of frustration in trying to get her message across at home, but out in the hunger fields, there's hope with the tears.

"I now know," she says, "that every little bit helps. Any assistance is great assistance."

With the possible exception, she admits, of the country that sent ski underwear to parched Africa, and another that shipped sugared cocktail cherries to earthquake victims of Nicaragua.

"The problem is enormous," she says, "but not so enormous that it's not worth attacking. Hunger can, and must, be beaten."

While Tippi has been appalled at the seriousness of world food supplies — down from a reserve of 90 days to 26 days — she has been equally amazed at the band of devoted people working quietly on remote, front lines. In northern Kenya she found a young couple "who could have been having fun anywhere in the world" laboring night and day. In another African nation she found missionaries caring for lepers. When she asked about concern over catching the disease, she was told: "We're not worried. We'd just take the medication."

Tippi now makes six overseas trips a year. Her itinerary looks like a page from a Kissinger peace plan, as she homes in on trouble spots to organize the inflow of aid.

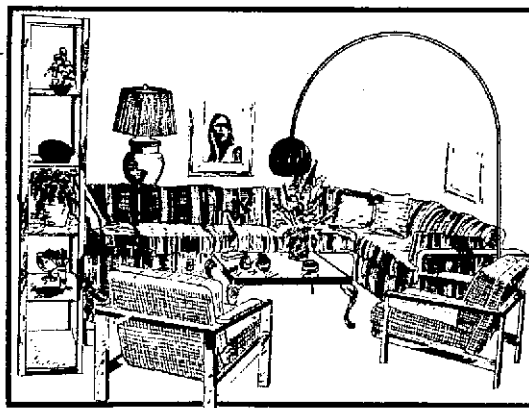

"But most important," she says, "I look beyond the immediate crisis and put in motion some kind of program that will feed, house and educate. Too often countries give and then forget."

"The hungry areas of the world are littered with machinery that no longer runs, and new trucks rusting where they broke down. Follow up action is vital."

To the argument that hungry nations have brought it upon themselves through overpopulation, Tippi answers: "Nobody alive asked to be born. Look how long it took the developed nations to accept birth control. Besides teaching contraception, you must follow up and give alternatives for entertainment when the sun goes down. Even electricity is a boon to family planning."

And for those who think Tippi Hedren doesn't get her hands dirty, there's Dr. Larry Ward, who says: "Anyone might make a one-shot ego trip effort at helping, but Tippi has been absolutely tireless. She has ridden for hours in a jeep over some of the roughest roads in the world, flown in little planes in Africa that just sort of drop off the sides of mountains when they take off, stayed in the most humble homes and missionary outposts around the world — and has been personally responsible for securing huge donations of food and medicines."

Skywriting - a high-flying art

BY BOB SHUMWAY

It was a dark, stormy night in the heart of the Midwest when a lone skywriter, Greg, was called upon to write a message in the sky. The message was "Not bad Greg, now we need a ram's head." The skywriter, Greg, was a man who had spent his life in the sky, and he was a man who had a unique talent. He was a man who had a unique talent, and he was a man who had a unique talent. He was a man who had a unique talent, and he was a man who had a unique talent.

He belongs to an exclusive fraternity of men who have played tick-tack-toe in the miles in the air and won. And one evening, not long ago, he spent his time writing out the Zodiac over Griffith Park, while his client, a man who fancied himself an "artist," maintained radio contact on the ground. "Not bad Greg, now we need a ram's head."

If the day of the million-dollar skywriting contract has fluttered into the realm of the dodo bird, a skywriter's job is no less unique today than when a derring-do pilot sported a pencil mustache, a white silk scarf, leather helmet and goggles. Greg's flair flashes through his modish clothes and the blood-red Sting Ray he drives. The 36-year-old flyer breathes the same old sparks-and-fire enthusiasm into every conversation about his unusual livelihood.

He may be describing the jet plane future of his business—depicting the spectacular orange hues some future sunset will cast on a vapor trail message; or explaining why he refused to fly into the empyrean and embellish it with an obscene phrase for a movie company. But his intensity rarely flags.

Greg Stinis has been flying a long time. While some magazine articles fix the age of his first flight at five and others are more conservative, Stinis doesn't quibble. "I suppose you could say I started flying when my mother got pregnant!" Reg's father Anthony, who began Skywriting Corporation of America in 1934 with a $400 investment on an old Jenny, occasionally took his young wife up for a spin. But Greg acquired his first official pilot's license when he was 16.

At today's prices Stinis can offer an individual message of about 20 letters for approximately $500. But on a single flight he will often feature several different clients. For instance New Year's Day Rose Parade crowds saw him inscribe Pasadena skies for ABC-TV, Western Airlines, the U.S. Army and Mercury Outboard Motors. "If the price sounds steep, the message can be seen 20 miles in any direction. That's blanket coverage of 400 square miles," he explains. On a good day over a metropolitan area, Stinis figures each message is seen by at least three million persons, which works out to less than 20 cents per 1,000 persons.

Stinis' first engagement on the West Coast in July of 1965 for Laura Scudders called for him to misspell two letters of the company's name before the millions of heat-relief seeking bathers assembled on Southern California beaches from Los Angeles to San Diego. The promotion, begun two weeks earlier with a saturation campaign on radio, urged people to pick up entry blanks and predict what letters would be misspelled. The promotion ran six consecutive weekends.

"The publicity was tremendous," said an executive for Laura Scudders. "We got our name before millions of consumers in a favorable, fun-filled and exciting way." Locally Stinis Air Service has also puffed out ads for Coppertone Suntan Oil, every major U.S. automobile maker, many soft drink manufacturers, tobacco companies and major banks.

"This is a father-to-son thing," Stinis says about his occupation. "It's the most secretive damn business I've ever seen. An outsider knows nothing about it. If a guy knew how to skywrite he wouldn't tell you anything, and it takes years to really learn."

A 50-gallon tank, fitted into the rear cockpit of each T-6 contains the paraffin-based chemicals which are injected into the massive exhaust manifold to produce the smoke. An off-on switch, in the cockpit, is controlled by the skywriter to emit the smoke easily enough; the only problems arise in shaping the letters.

That aspect of skywriting takes lots of practice. For one thing the writing must be done upside down and backwards so that ground bound spectators can read it right side up. "Wind currents have to be reckoned with too," explains Stinis. "You may go into the turn for an 'O' and start sliding—that can really distort your letter." Another difficulty to be avoided is the prop wash from the T-6. It can blow a neatly formed letter into marsh-mellow nonsense if one isn't careful.

The slightest miscalculation can cause a skywriter massive embarrassment and Stinis remembers one goof he endured as the result of a mission in San Francisco for singers Simon and Garfunkel. "I guess I was making the letters too big because by the time I got to the end of the message it read SIMON AND GARFUNKEL... I was out of smoke. But I was lucky because they were well enough known that it helped more than if I had done it right. But that's the stuff that makes for skywriting nightmares."

Though published accounts vary, skywriting apparently came into being during World War I, when British RAF Maj. John C. Savage saw commercial potential in the smoke screens used to camouflage troops and ships. In 1922, he puffed "THE DAILY MAIL" across a limpid English sky over Epsom Downs Racetrack, soliciting for a popular newspaper of the time.

A year later a World Series crowd at the Polo Grounds in New York watched "HELLO USA" billow out high over the outfield. After the plane returned to add "CALL VANDERBILT 7200", hundreds of people did phone the headquarters of the first American skywriting company and aerial advertising was soaring in this country too.

Pepsi Cola, furrier I.J. Fox, the American Tobacco Company, and many other big businesses bought ads. Before the end of the year the company had over a million dollars worth of orders on its books. One early account of the industry affirmed that America had indeed gone skywriting nuts. Politicians knew a good gimmick when they saw one. During the Wilkie-Roosevelt presidential campaign in 1940, a Wilkie partisan reportedly had "NO THIRD TERM" enscribed over Manhattan.

But Stinis has learned to be discriminating about his political assignments. He remembers the job his father refused during the Cold War when an unidentified patriot plunked down $10,000 in cash on his counter for him to write "KRUSCHEV IS A LIAR" in New York skies during the premier's first visit to this country.

He's proud of the thank you note on White House stationery he received from former President Nixon after he'd decorated Rose Bowl skies in 1969 with "WELCOME HOME DICK AND PAT." But he did refuse to fly over the Western White House recently for a liberal who wanted him to write "IMPEACHMENT."

He's hung aerial script in several languages. "I once did a job for a Japanese company that nearly drove me crazy. They changed the copy seven or eight times. I could hardly tell the difference, but once we did it they thought it was fine. It eventually became a commercial for Japanese television."

Skywriting at night was one of the brief innovations tried in the early days. "I remember the night my father delivered a night message when the acid in the phosphorous smoke we used leaked through the tank. That plane used a skid instead of a tail wheel and the phosporous caught fire from the sparks. The rooster tail of fire followed him everywhere he went. But he got out alive and we put the fire out too without much damage done, but we never did any more night messages."

Colored dyes were touted as another innovation, but there are problems with the dyes too. "We still do work with red occasionally, but it's really concentrated and it's very messy to work with. Invariably it would get on the plane and just couldn't get it off. It finally got so bad we decided to paint them all red."

Weekends, holidays and especially during the summer months are the busiest times of the year for Stinis. Unlike many parts of the country where grey skies can make skywriting like working with invisible ink, Southern California is noted for its hospitable skies among the aerial scribblers.

In the past couple of years business has been rather good, according to Mort Arken, who heads Stinis' New York office. "Our clients are interested in grass roots promotion. They're tired of canned ads on TV."

Television was the medium that decimated skywriting in the first place. In the early fifties big advertisers defected in droves, lured by TV's national advertising capacities. As bookings got leaner more and more skywriters were grounded. By the early 1960's only a half-dozen were still working in the U.S.

One of the most revolutionary innovations in sky signs is skytyping, developed by Stinis' father in 1949, but only recently beginning to catch on. Skytyping is relatively simple from a pilot's perspective, involving little of the artistry and skill of skywriting. Five planes fly in formation while the center plane releases programmed computer signals to receivers in the other four. The signals automatically open the smoke valves in all five planes, releasing staccato puffs that form "typed" letters.

Many ex-military pilots fly with Stinis on a part-time basis for his skytyping missions. Several are former flight instructors and one is a former Navy Blue Angel.

Skytyping is much faster than skywriting. Stinis says it takes him an average of 90 seconds per letter in skywriting. In that same time his T-6 trainer planes can type 17 letters. About 80 per cent of his West Coast business and almost all in his New York division comes from skytyping.

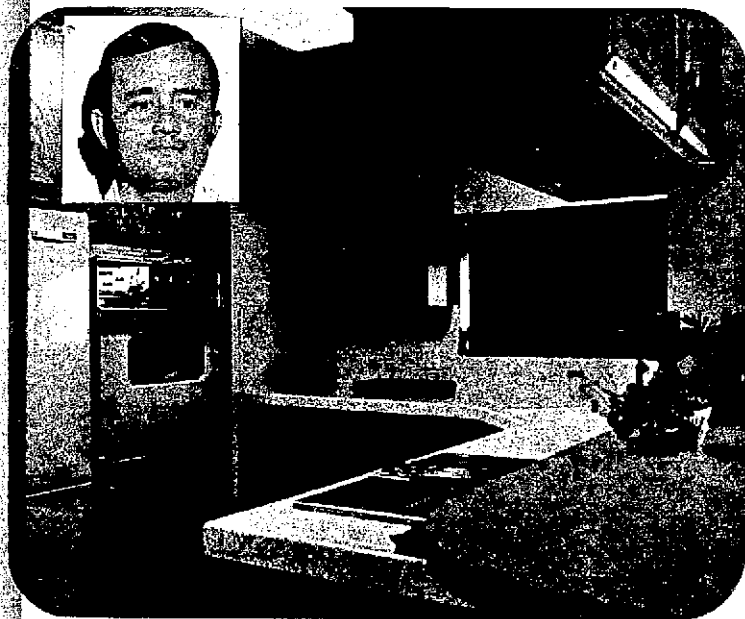

If some persons think of mile-high advertising as a thing of the past, Stinis doesn't. You can't say his eyes exactly glaze over when he starts talking about the future of his business, but he's definitely abandoned his 10,000 foot ceiling.

"We'll be in jets, flying at 40,000 feet. With only one sign we will be able to reach 10 million people. Can you imagine? Instead of local and regional, we'll be able to offer national ads on vapor trails. Magnificent . . ."

Babies are being bought and sold in Southern California today.

Although the concept of baby-selling sounds like it belongs in a fictional horror story, it is as real as the infants themselves who are being marketed for from $5000 to $50,000 apiece. Children's agency officials estimate that there is one baby sold on the so-called "black market" for every 20 that finds a home through normal adoption procedures.

In most cases, the buyers of these infants are married couples who have been unwilling or unable to adopt a child through legitimate channels. The illegal transactions are most often arranged by unethical lawyers who are becoming wealthy through their high-priced dealings.

"We're now faced with a bad situation which may become even worse," explains Joseph Reid, director of the Child Welfare League of America. "The baby business is growing all over the country, run by profiteers who are using any method they can to find newborn infants and the couples interested in buying them."

Here is how the black market usually operates: A couple interested in adopting will learn that they may have to wait several years to obtain a child through a county adoption agency. Unhappy with such a long delay, they will seek out an attorney involved in illegally-selling children, who they may learn about from friends or associates. After they meet with the attorney, he will attempt to find a pregnant woman willing to relinquish her baby. He will learn about such women through contacts on high school and college campuses, in doctor's offices and maternity homes. The attorney will usually offer the expectant mother about $2000, plus childbirth medical expenses, for her baby. For a woman with no intention of keeping the baby or marrying the child's father, the money is particularly attractive.

Some of the cases of black-market sales have taken on a particularly bizarre nature. There was a celebrated case of a couple who gave their baby to a broker for a used automobile. One attorney actually placed an ad in the classified section of local newspapers:

"Young people wish to adopt baby at birth. Will pay doctor and hospital bills. Replies confidential. P.O.B."

Although prosecution has been rare in black-market adoptions, it is occurring more frequently now. Not long ago, a former Los Angeles County crime commissioner and one-time candidate for local district attorney was arrested and charged with 14 counts of selling infants in an international black market baby ring. The accused individual, Ronald Silverton, allegedly sold the babies through his own unlicensed organization, Save a Life Adoption Agency, and arranged for the falsification of court documents to make the transaction appear legal. He was charged under a seldom-used statute known as "slavery prohibition", as well as under laws against illegal child placement and the filing of false documents.

"His price tag for babies ranged from $10,000 to $15,000," according to Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney Richard Moss, who presented the case to the grand jury. "He made contacts and did some advertising in Mexico and Canada, and he offered to send pregnant women to the Caribbean to have their babies."

Silverton was also arrested recently in Palm Springs on a separate incident on suspicion of conspiracy to sell one person to another. The arrest came after Silverton's secretary allegedly took $11,000 from undercover officers who were posing as a couple interested in buying a baby.

The recent increase in incidents like these has been blamed on the current shortage of children available for adoption through legal channels. And as Joseph Reid says, "Whenever you have a shortage of anything, whether it be potatoes or babies, a black market is going to arise to fill the void."

In the Southland, the Los Angeles County Adoptions Department placed just 839 children in the fiscal year ending last June 30. That compares with 1217 that the department placed in 1971-72, and 2503 in 1967-68. It is not uncommon for an approved family to wait three years for an Anglo baby to become available, compared to just a few months delay in the late 1960s.

Changing social trends have brought about this baby shortage. The increased availability of improved contraceptive devices for unmarried women, for example, has been one of the major contributing factors to the infant scarcity. Teenage girls, who once provided the largest number of adoptable babies, now become pregnant far less frequently than in previous times.

Also, more unwed mothers are keeping their babies because of society's fading disapproval of out-of-wedlock births. In the past seven years, the number of families headed by unwed mothers has almost doubled, and totals over 713,000 nationwide. The increasing availability of low-cost day care centers is making it feasible for unmarried mothers to maintain custody of their children and still work.

Another factor in the baby shortage is the liberalized abortion laws, which now allow women who are pregnant with an unwanted child to obtain a legal abortion with relative ease. Some 130,000 women had abortions in California in 1973, the most recent year in which such statistics are available. By comparison, there were only about 8000 legal abortions performed in the entire nation in 1965.

As long as such trends continue, local adoption officials foresee no dramatic increase in the number of infants being adopted through traditional channels. And unless and until this situation changes, the black-market will probably continue to flourish.

Parents who have used the black-market say they have little alternative. They contend that there is no other way for them to obtain a healthy white baby anymore without undergoing a long waiting period.

Most adoption agencies report receiving an increasing number of phone calls from couples who desperately want an infant, and are willing to pay any price for it. In California, state law sets a $500 maximum fee for adoption through a public agency. But when a baby is obtained via the illegal black market, the fees can be 10, 20 and even 100 times as much.

In one documented case not long ago, a local Jewish couple contacted an attorney who they heard handled such transactions. They asked him for a Jewish baby, a rare commodity in the adoption world these days. Within two weeks, the lawyer had found a baby for them in Florida. They flew to Miami after paying a $15,000 fee in cash, and returned home the same day with their infant.

Sometimes parents are willing to wait nine months in order to have their baby "custom-made". One childless California couple learned through friends of an attorney who could supply them with a baby "made to order". The attorney visited the couple's home, and showed them photographs of attractive single young men and women, and asked the couple to choose who they wanted the parents of their baby to be — for a $10,000 fee.

The attorney told them that when the woman they selected was about to give birth, she would be checked into a hospital under the adoptive mother's name, and thus the birth certificate would bear the name of the adoptive couple. Consequently, no formal adoption papers or clandestine altering of birth certificates would be necessary. The couple agreed to the proposed arrangement, and it was carried out successfully to its conclusion.

Most unscrupulous attorneys have had little problem finding young women willing to bear a child for someone else — particularly when they are already pregnant. According to Julian Brantley, director of the Children's Home Society of California, located in Los Angeles, the black-market lawyers pay students at local universities to find single, pregnant women on campus for them. For each pregnant woman referred to the baby broker, the student is usually paid about $25. And if the attorney persuades the woman to sell the baby, the students receives a bonus.

Baby brokers also have placed ads in underground and campus newspapers, although the ads usually appear to be promoting legitimate adoption agencies. However, once the pregnant woman answers the ad, only then does she learn the type of arrangement in which she is being asked to participate.

There have been many reported instances of nurses in public clinics who have been paid $50 for each name of a pregnant unwed woman they supply. Lawyers engaged in black-market adoptions also hear of babies from obstetricians, who get a kickback fee for their referrals. A Los Angeles obstetrician recently told police about baby brokers who had offered to pay him $1000 for every adoptable infant he could refer to them.

Ursula Gallagher, an official in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's office of child development, says that legitimate adoption agencies simply cannot compete with baby brokers who offer pregnant girls large sums of cash for their infants, plus the payment of all medical bills. "Often a licensed agency will work with a girl for months, only to lose her just before birth to someone who is obviously paying her bills down the line," explains Mrs. Gallagher. "But it's all very sub rosa, of course."

Adoption agencies are now publicly warning of the dangers of the black market, in hopes that law enforcement officials will deal more forcefully with those involved in it. They contend that there are real risks to the infants bought and sold through the underground.

"Most black-market attorneys make no attempt to screen the adoptive parents, other than to determine whether the couple can afford their exorbitant fees. The character of the new parents is never checked, and it's doubtful that all of them have made desirable parents. There have been reports of babies turned over to alcoholics and even sex deviants.

In one case, an infant girl was sold to two psychotic parents, who frequently beat her. This unhappy situation was not discovered until the child was six years old, when the parents happened to become involved in a legal proceeding and the court ordered a social welfare agency to report on their home conditions.

But even after the circumstances of the child's home life were discovered, the court decided to leave the girl in her adoptive parents' custody. Since the youngster was six years old when the situation became known, the court felt it would disrupt her emotional well-being more if she were removed from the only family she ever knew than if she remained. The parents were ordered to seek professional counseling for their problems.

In another incident, a Los Angeles couple desperately wanted to adopt a baby after their only son suddenly died. They contacted a black-market attorney, who made a-range-ments for them to obtain a boy in Georgia.

The father flew to Augusta to pick up his new son, and they returned home to hopefully pursue a normal life together. However, as the ensuing months passed, the father began to reject the boy and soon wanted him out of his house. So he simply passed the youngster on to another couple, who in turn passed the child on to a third couple. The boy was eventually institutionalized.

Black-market adoptions have also created problems even for those adoptive parents who have conscientiously striven to be loving and reliable providers. A study under the auspices of the Russell Sage Foundation found that natural mothers sometimes insist upon visiting their children years after giving them up in a black-market transaction. Since there is rarely any special effort made toward confidentiality in black-market adoptions, such "reunions" often occur without the consent of the adoptive parents.

The study also found cases in which the biological mother pleaded to have her child returned to her, on the premise that she had been pressured into relinquishing him. There were even cases of natural mothers trying to extort money from adoptive families to allow them to keep the child. In one incident, a mother tried to coerce the adoptive parents into "buying" another child of hers, by threatening to tell the police about the first such underground transaction.

When the California legislature held hearings not long ago on adoptions, many witnesses predicted that the black market would continue to flourish, despite growing warnings against it. As Julian Brantley says, "Of course I react negatively to it. We did away with buying and selling people after the Civil War."

Earthquake!

Patrolman Leonard Ingham had had the dream again Monday night: a recurring nightmare in which he saw the heart of his native San Francisco engulfed in fire.

That did it: he bought a $2,000 insurance policy on his house the very next day. He slept soundly that night only to be awakened about 5 a.m. the next morning — April 18, 1906 — by a milk wagon horse prancing nervously.

Across town at the Palace Hotel, touring Metropolitan Opera star Enrico Caruso was sleeping off a night on the town during which he had been entertained at Zinkand's Restaurant by a young pianist named Elsa Maxwell. Nearby at the St. Francis Hotel, actor John Barrymore was also entertaining in his room — a young lady, assisted with several bottles of champagne.

What the horse seemed to sense — dogs, too, often howl in premonition — several people actually witnessed. "I could see it coming up Washington Street," said police sergeant Jesse Cook. "It was as if the waves of the ocean were coming towards us."

Atop Russian Hill, highest point in the city, artist Bailey Millard awaited dawn to begin work on a landscape of San Francisco at sunrise which he had already entitled "When Alturia Awoke." Instead, at about 5:12 a.m., he is flung to the ground and sees the whole city beneath him "rocking and rolling. Each crack would be the signal for more chimneys, more spires, more cornices to be snapped off."

The city was writhing under a force greater than all the explosives used in World War II, a force that overwhelms with instant terror when the very foundation of humankind, the earth, betrays and goes mad with a noise "like thousands of violins, all at a discord."

Church bells clanging wildly. Buildings shaken like a dog's prey before crashing into their own dust. Doomed homes creaking in their agony as though all their nails were being pulled out at once. And then, after earthquake, fire.

For three days San Francisco burned, its water system dropless from main breaks. The Nob Hill mansions of the mighty, the sleazy saloons and warehouses of the Barbary Coast, Chinatown—all went in the inferno that burned almost five square miles and was only stopped by a dynamited fire break.

Then it began to rain and patrolman Ingham returned home to find his house still standing and his new insurance policy safe in the kitchen.

But as many as 700 had died, 250,000 were homeless and the fatal flaw that underlies the city — the San Andreas fault — remains, leaving the question: not if history would repeat, but when? □ steak . . lobster . . gourmet combination fish dinners . . and such a la carte temptations as crab or shrimp louie salads . . fresh clams on the half shell . . cracked crab with special sauce . . and steamed clams, in season . .

Those are some of the highlights from the dinner menu at Cigo's, a paradise for sea food devotees at Pacific Avenue and Ninth Street in San Pedro. Owned by Emmett Parsons, a sea food connoisseur who has lived in the harbor area since 1927, Cigo's has fresh (never frozen) ocean delicacies, such as Pacific red snapper, a fine white fish served with a mild sauce. It's $3.95 on Cigo's imaginative dinner which pleases the palate with a variety of tastes, including antipasto of salami, cheese and marinated garbanzoes; marvelous, creamy Boston clam chowder AND salad with rich dressing; baked potato, mostaccioli pasta or French fries, hot cheesebread, coffee or tea.

Cigo's serves its dinners nightly, including Sundays, starting at 4. The restaurant is also unusually popular at luncheon, because sea food devotees know that its two top chefs, Ralph Hedge and Tony Madrigal, offer a big variety of wonderful entrees at sensible prices. Among Cigo's originals are the cobachi burger, $1.45, or the abalone burger, $1.75. Cobachi is well-seasoned Yugoslav sausage. They are served with mostaccioli or French fries.

Cigo's luncheons — Monday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. — also emphasize the French dip sandwich au jus, $1.75 (superb) and such entrees as charcoal-broiled squid, $1.95; Mexican cabrilla, $2.25; abalone steak, $2.50, and fried scallops or oysters, $2.25. The latter come with soup du jour or green salad, mostaccioli or potatoes and coffee. Another great luncheon favorite is cioppino, $2.95, with the same side dishes.

GUIDE

HOW DO THEY do it? How do the 10 Ray Weidemann Kentucky Fried Chicken takeout restaurants keep their quality so consistently high that they win awards when competing with hundreds of other Southern California KFC shops?

Last year, the Weidemann shops — located in the Long Beach, Lakewood and Bellflower area — won three of the top 10 awards in a competition among 300 Kentucky Fried Chicken shops throughout Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego, Riverside, San Bernardino and Ventura counties. The awards were based on food quality, service, cleanliness and other factors. Weidemann employees won trips (for two persons) to Japan, Acapulco and Las Vegas. A fourth employee won a top cash prize.

One of the secrets behind the success of the Ray Weidemann shops is an investigative service used by Ray and his two top supervisors, Keith Nuttall and John McQuillin. Ray pays the service to make unannounced, incognito visits to his shops to check the food quality and service. The investigators deliberately confuse the clerks while making their purchases. Then they send written reports to Ray and his executives, telling how well the various shops filled the orders and making many other evaluations.

As a result of such "spy" reports, Ray, Keith, John and other executives in the Weidemann organization are able to maintain unusually high standards of food quality and service in all 10 of their local takeout restaurants. They buy the finest, plumpest, juiciest chickens from farms in the South. The chickens are shipped in ice (never frozen) to maintain their fine flavors. They are cooked according to the celebrated Colonel Sanders' recipe, turning out the finest, most savory southern-fried chicken prepared with 11 herbs and seasonings.

Housewives know that KFC chicken is less costly than chicken prepared at home. One of the top values is the bucket, $6.79, including 15 pieces of fresh, hot chicken, a pint of gravy and five delicious rolls.

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Jogger's heel is the latest side effect of the physical fitness craze, a radiologist says.

Dr. Tom W. Staple of St. Louis describes jogger's heel as a painful heel calcification. It stems from compression of bone or the laying down of new bone and appears on the X-ray film as a "cloud of density in the heel."

The condition results from the repeated stress of flat-footed trotting.

Dr. Staple, professor of radiology at Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology, Washington University, comments:

"You see jogger's heel in the 40-year-old guy who is gung-ho and planning to get back into shape or in the young guy who has done nothing all winter and wants to impress the coach at the spring training turnout."

The report is in Medical Tribune, a newspaper for physicians.

Development of high-energy neutron centers in the United States and Canada may produce one of the most dramatic changes in treatment of cancer in the history of the disease.

The prediction appears in a news release from the American College of Radiology.

One doctor is quoted as saying that some of the best results with the new-type treatment have been achieved in tumors of the salivary glands.

Twelve patients with very advanced, inoperable tumors have been treated with fast neutrons, and pain and ulceration have been relieved in every case. (Fast neutrons are high-energy particles.)

Advanced tumors of the mouth have also done well. Twenty-one such patients have been treated, and complete regression of the tumor has occurred in 17.

Neutron centers are located at only a few major medical centers in the United States at the present time.

Three children aged 6 to 11 suffered temporary paralysis of the legs following infection with Type B influenza, researchers report.

Medical investigators at Bristol Children's Hospital in England say that recovery was complete in all three within 10 days.

The doctors, reporting in the journal Lancet, say that the frequency of neurological complications of flu is uncertain — "but they may be more common than is indicated by most textbooks."

A doctor suggests how to ease a patient's anxiety when the patient is a child with a sliver to be removed.

Says Dr. Earl J. Carstensen, a family physician of Oregon City, Ore.: Anesthetize the area by gently massaging it with an ice cube.

His suggestion appears in the journal Patient Care.

Dr. Adam G. N. Moore, a Boston family physician, has a suggestion on how to make removal of sutures easier when the patient is a child.

Tell the child you are going to take the stitches off instead of out, the doctor says. This subtle semantic phrasing makes the procedure sound less threatening.

"And it's not really a lie," says Dr. Moore. "The knots are just on the surface."

Methoxyflurane, a valuable and potent anesthetic used in labor, can be used without fear of producing kidney failure if it is used in low doses and short duration, a doctor reports.

The agent has been widely used for conscious analgesia (pain relief) before delivery and also as a primary anesthetic for women requiring a cesarean section.

As a conscious analgesia it allows the patient to breathe an adequate amount of vapor to relieve most of her discomfort and still not blunt her protective amount of vapor to relieve most of her discomfort. It is preferred over some other anesthetic gases because it does not relax the uterus (womb) or lead to increased uterine bleeding.

However, there have been reports of kidney failure produced in some persons given methoxyflurane.

Dr. Steven R. Young, chief resident in anesthesia at Indiana University school of medicine, says that short-term use of the agent did not cause kidney trouble. His report was made to the American Society of Anesthesiologists.

Women taking low-estrogen contraceptives run practically the same risk of developing dangerous blood clots as do those on high-estrogen pills, researchers report.

Estrogen, a female hormone, is a component of many oral contraceptive preparations.

The risk of developing clots is 5.6 times greater than it is for women not on the Pill.

Most of the risk occurs in the first month on the Pill, investigators disclose.

The research was conducted by a team at Johns Hopkins University school of hygiene and public health and reported to the preventive medicine section of the American Medical Association. A report appears in Medical Tribune.

Robert Fuller— a TV star with something extra

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Robert Fuller, who stars as Dr. Kelly Brackett on NBC's "Emergency!" tries to be especially nice to the extras who work on the series.

"My door is always open to them," he said. "They're always welcome to a cup of coffee and a little conversation."

Bob knows what it's like to be an extra.

"I must have been in 2,000 movies as an extra," he told me at lunch the other day at the Hollywood Brown Derby. And even if he exaggerated a bit, he was an extra long enough that he'll never forget it.

"I appeared in movies with all of the top stars of the time (the early 1950s), and, let me tell you, a lot of them were bums in their treatment of extras," Fuller said.

He declined, however, to name the bums.

BOB SAID he got started as an extra at age 17 after meeting some extras while working as an usher at a Hollywood movie theater. In addition to just standing around in a number of films, he also worked as a stuntman in Westerns and as a chorus dancer in some movies.

"I danced with Marilyn Monroe in 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes,'" he pointed out.

In the same year — 1953 — one of the films he appeared in was "Latin Lovers," starring Ricardo Montalban and Lana Turner.

"There were 12 of us in the chorus," Bob recalled. "Ricardo met us one day and the next day he remembered all of our names. He treated us great. I told myself at the time that if I ever became a star I was going to try to be like him."

"But isn't it quite unusual for an extra to become a star?" Fuller was asked.

"Yes, it's very unusual," he replied. "In fact, there are just a handful."

He came up with the names of John Wayne, Dennis O'Keefe and Kent McCord — and they were all he could think of at the moment.

FULLER'S CAREER as an extra was interrupted when he was drafted into the Army to serve in the Korean War (he became a sergeant). After getting out of the Army in 1955, he returned to Hollywood and started studying acting at night from Richard Boone. He again worked as an extra, and his first speaking part — one line — came in the 1956 movie "Friendly Persuasion," starring Gary Cooper.

Boone got him to go to New York to study with his former teacher, Sanford Meisner. And Bob's first major acting experience came as a member of Boone's repertory company. Roles in TV programs and films followed.

"One night I was at a Hollywood fan magazine party and I met Burt Reynolds, who was a young actor like myself," Bob told me. "I think Molly Bee was the biggest star on hand, and there was a hayride involved, only Burt and I rode on horses. Anyway, we sort of hit it off and before the night was over Burt told me we'd both have our own TV series a year from then."

"Sure enough, it worked out the way he predicted. I started doing 'Laramie' the same day he started doing 'Riverboat.' I can remember we had lunch together that day and talked about it."

HE AND Reynolds have remained friends over the years.

"My wife, Patty, and I play tennis with Burt and Dinah Shore and see a good bit of them," he said.

He disclosed, on questioning, that Dinah's "a better player than either Burt or me."

Bob has appeared a few times recently on the afternoon "Dinah!" series, and was a guest on the "Tonight" show when Burt filled in as host for Johnny Carson one night.

He also has been making appearances on the daytime and evening "Hollywood Squares" programs.

"But I don't attempt to be a comedian," he said.

"EMERGENCY!" is through shooting for the 1974-75 season, but Fuller feels it's "99.9 certain" the series will return in the fall. He likes the series and his role as the chief doctor of the Emergency Division of Rampart Hospital and would be happy to see it run five more years or longer. He's even satisfied, he says, that his relationship with chief nurse Dixie McCall (Julie London) "is on the order of Matt Dillon and Kitty."

ROBERT FULLER... good man in 'Emergency!'

The series has managed to survive — and has knocked off a number of competing shows — even though it has been up against TV's most popular series, "All in the Family," in its first half hour ever since making its bow in January 1972.

Both of the earlier TV series in which Fuller starred were Westerns. He gained fame as Jess Harper in "Laramie," which hit the air in 1959 and ran for four years ("It was the No. 1 show in Japan and Germany," with the voices dubbed in, he told me.) After "Laramie" went off, he had a starring role as scout Cooper Smith on "Wagon Train" during the last two years of that long-running series.

BOB FEELS a strong responsibility toward young viewers as a TV series star, he told me. "If there's a hell or a damn in Dr. Brackett's dialogue, I get them to take it out," he said. "Maybe the parents of some of the young viewers don't use such language, but the kids could say, 'But Dr. Kelly Brackett said that.'"

The actor, who was born in Troy, N. Y., and lived in Chicago, Miami and Key West, Fla., before coming to California, dropped out of school in the ninth grade. "Please emphasize, though, that it's not something I'm proud of," he told me. "Children should finish school and even go to college if they can. I have just been extraordinarily lucky myself."

Fuller invests time and money in helping blind children. An avid outdoorsman, he takes them fishing and also reads to them.

Bob and his wife, who have just expanded and remodeled their home in the Toluca Lake section of North Hollywood, have three youngsters of their own, a boy 10, a girl 9 and a baby boy, who was born prematurely a few weeks ago and was still in the hospital when I interviewed Fuller.

"Dr. Brackett" visits the baby often. He feels right at home in a hospital.

Doris Day brings her mellow songs and her sunny personality back to television with a special on CBS (Channel 2) at 9 p.m. Wednesday.

"Is this a comeback?" she was asked at a recent session with interviewers. "Comeback?" she replied. "I haven't been away."

Not for long, anyway.

Her weekly television show went off CBS in 1973, at her own request. "I'd had enough," she explained. "There are other things in my life."

FOREMOST among the other things is her devotion to animals: she has been a guiding force in two organizations, Actors and Others for Animals and Holiday Humane. Besides keeping a small menagerie of her own animals, she constantly worries about other people's.

She had just received a phone call from a total stranger, a rich woman who wanted to travel and hence wanted to get rid of a 9-year-old Afghan.

"Isn't that awful — 9 year-old dogs are so hard to place," Doris grumbled. But she admitted she would try.

DORIS WAS convinced to return to performing by her son, Terry Melcher, who suggested as producer George Schlatter, who turned out "Laugh-In."

The result was a love-in, she becoming enamored of Schlatter's offbeat production firm. The show is called "Doris Day Today," and the guests are John Denver ("we had good vibes immediately"), Rich Little ("he plays all my leading men"), Tim Conway and a dance group from Watts, The Lockers.

She is not returning to work because she needs the money, as gossip columnists have reported. Such reports may have arisen because her former business manager, Jerome Rosenthal, misappropriated her earnings. She won a $22 million judgment in Superior Court.

"I HAVEN'T collected on the judgment, but I hope to," said the actress. "At any rate, I have earned money since then. He took a lot of the money up-front from the TV series, but I got the rest."

"The idea of saying that I have to go back to work is outrageous. And even if I was broke it wouldn't matter. I can still earn a living. Most important of all, I still have my health. That's all that really matters."

Doris, 50, hasn't appeared in a movie since the 1968 "With Six You Get Eggroll," and she indicated she is in no hurry to do another one. Some of today's films don't exactly turn her on.

"I went to see 'Last Tango in Paris' with Billy DeWolfe, and I couldn't believe it," she remarked.

"MARLON BRANDO is a great actor, and it could have been a very moving film except for the sex scenes. They weren't necessary, and I don't think people find them sexy. They're just dirty."

Admittedly she is no swinger, but she objects to her reputation as a por-trayer of virgins in films.

"How can they say that?" she inquired. "In my second picture I was the mother of a 5-year-old, then I went back to playing Gordon MacRae's 18-year-old sweetheart. I had plenty of children in 'Please Don't Eat the Daisies,' and I certainly was no virgin in 'Love Me or Leave Me.' And I had three children in my last picture."

The most noted crack about her is attributed to the late Oscar Levant: "I knew Doris Day before she was a virgin."

Her comment: "I doubt that he ever said that. Oscar and I were very good friends."

EARTHQUAKE

Can You Be Safe?

How much have we in Southern California learned since 1971? A lot.

All this week Dr. George Fischbeck, a science instructor for 25 years, will present a special series of reports exploring the ground you walk on.

He will show films of the biggest temblors of the past and will talk with the people who assess the timing and degree of the next one to hit your area.

And most importantly, he will show you the safest place to be— whether at work, on the highway or in your home— if another big quake hits.

We think that you will definitely feel much better about it all.

STACY KEACH (left) and Carl Franklin star as a special investigative police team operating in the Caribbean in the series "Caribe," premiering Monday night on Ch. 7.

'Caribe' provides logistics lesson for Stacy Keach

MIAMI (Special) — Stacy Keach, the accomplished young actor who plans also to become, in time, a director, is getting a fine education in the complex problems of location filming logistics from "Caribe," the new Quinn Martin Productions series for ABC-TV.

"We're filming all over the Caribbean so you can imagine the headaches of mobility," said the star of the action-adventure series that premieres on Channel 7 at 10 p.m. Monday. He continued:

"Moving the cast and crew to distant locations is relatively easily accomplished by commercial airlines or charter flights. But the heavy equipment — the generators, the lights, cameras, props and the rest — is the problem.

"FOR INSTANCE, we wanted to start filming in Puerto Rico, but found there was a four-week back-up in shipping. So plans were quickly changed to begin in St. Thomas, in the U.S. Virgin Islands, which had only a two-week delay.

"This, of course, meant that arrangements for housing, caterers, trucking and all the other essentials of filming had to be switched overnight. In a situation, like this, you have to get all new locations to fit the script, and the director has to readjust his thinking and filming plans.

"Rain changes the best laid plans, too. In filming a feature movie with a long shooting schedule, you can wait out the weather for awhile. But in television, when you only have seven days to shoot an hour episode — you shoot, rain or not.

"Our producer, Anthony Spinner, says 'Caribe' is logistically the most difficult assignment in television today and I sure can't dispute that.

"But we're getting it done, which is a tribute to the planning and flexibility of the production staff. And the fact is that real locations add beauty and dramatic values to a show. Such shows look so much more real. 'The Streets of San Francisco' is a perfect example."

IN ADDITION to the Virgin Islands, sites so far have included the Florida Keys, Puerto Rico, Miami Beach and at sea in the Gulf Stream, Keach pointed out. Jamaica, Haiti and the Bahamas, as well as the Everglades, are under consideration as future sites.

"We are doing an action series that stresses movement in the scripts and the Caribbean offers a beautiful backdrop. And our problems in filming it all won't show on the screen when 'Caribe' starts on the air, Keach said.

"But do you know some generators weigh a ton or more? Try hassling that from the mainland to a faraway island!"

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Isn't it true that the Central Intelligence Agency keeps actress Jane Fonda, her husband Tom Hayden, and Sen. George McGovern under constant surveillance? Doesn't the agency have thick files on each including their sex lives?—G.L., Venice, Calif.

A. It is safe to assume that the CIA surveillance of Jane Fonda and her husband has been extensive and that up-to-date files are kept on their activities. As regards Sen. George McGovern (D., S. Dak.), he says: "Knowing what we now know about the CIA, it would come as no surprise to learn that the CIA had me under surveillance. After all, I was a Presidential contender. I did go to Paris in 1971 where I talked to the North Vietnamese representatives. Perhaps the CIA trailed me then. But I made a report of my talks to the State Department, and I discussed them with Henry Kissinger. Whether the CIA has a file on me now, whether they keep tabs on me in Washington—I don't know. But it's quite possible. I suspect the CIA will hardly tell the truth about it. Richard Helms [former CIA director] is not the most truthful man we've had before our Senate committees."

TOM HAYDEN & JANE FONDA

Q. I see that the New York critics have voted Amarcord, directed by Federico Fellini, as the best film of 1974. Is it true that Warner Bros. turned down the picture for release in the U.S.? If so, why?—Edwina Crawley, Albany, N.Y.

A. Warner Bros. rejected the picture for release in this country because some of its executives thought that Federico Fellini's screened reminiscences of boyhood in an Italian village would have no commercial appeal. Some Warner Bros. executives have no taste.

BRENDA SYKES

Q. Who is the prettiest black actress in Hollywood?—Jennie Carpenter, Washington, D.C.

A. One of the prettiest is surely Brenda Sykes, star of the forthcoming Mandingo.

Q. Who or what is "Smersh"?—Leon Gordon, South Orange, N.J.

A. "Smersh" is an acronym derived from the Russian words Smert Shpionian (death to spies). "Smersh" was a branch of Soviet counterintelligence. Its members were assigned to protect the forward areas behind the Soviet lines from Hitler spies. It was most active on the Eastern fronts during the 1943-45 period.

Q. Congressman Wilbur Mills admits he's an alcoholic. How many other alcoholics are there in Congress? Wasn't former Sen. Harold Hughes of Iowa in charge of the U.S. Senate branch of Alcoholics Anonymous?—D.K., Denver, Colo.

A. There are probably fewer than 10 alcoholics in the Congress. The U.S. Senate has no branch of AA, although Hughes, a reformed alcoholic and a man of deep compassion, helped several legislators or their wives to recover from their addiction to alcohol.

Q. Isn't The Towering Inferno with Steve McQueen and Paul Newman a movie filled with technical inaccuracies? My dad, who's an engineer and architect, says the movie is a joke.—George Jones, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. The movie is a spectacle which takes great dramatic license. As regards accuracy, it is ridiculous. For example, the one million gallons of water on the roof which are released to extinguish the fire at the end of the film—that amount of water would weigh 4000 tons to say nothing of the tanks to hold it. No architect in his right mind would design a skyscraper with 4000 tons of water on the roof or gas lines in a staircase.

Q. I can't believe that my favorite screen star, Esther Williams, was recently jailed in California. Can that be true? If so, for what reason? I'm sure there must be some explanation. —Mrs. Jane Daugherty, Worcester, Mass.

A. Several weeks ago a California highway patrolman stopped Miss Williams in the vicinity of Ventura, 50 miles north of Los Angeles, for speeding and "weaving." She was given a sobriety test which she failed. The 51-year-old swimming star was thereupon jailed for 90 minutes before her husband, actor-director Fernando Lamas, came up with the $300 bail.

Q. In April, 1975, when John Connally, former Governor of Texas, goes to court on a bribery charge in Washington, D.C., how come he will not be represented by his own prestigious, Houston, Tex., law firm of Vinson, Elkins, Searls, Connally and Smith? Who, in fact, will represent "Big John"?—R.F., Pasadena, Tex.

A. Former Governor Connally prefers to be represented by the Washington, D.C., law firm of Williams, Connolly and Califano. His chief counsel will be Edward Bennett Williams, who will ask for a jury trial.

Q. When Ryan O'Neal was married to Leigh Taylor-Young, did she actually support him and their son, Patrick?—Terry Taylor, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. Before he struck it rich in Love Story, actor O'Neal was unemployed for 18 months during which time his wife's acting career burgeoned, and she became the family breadwinner.

Sandy Hill, who appears on today's cover, is a former Miss Washington. Her first TV job was as a newscaster in Seattle; now, she co-anchors the evening news at KNXT in Los Angeles.

Connie Chung, CBS correspondent, is among the ablest, as well as most beautiful women reporters on the air. In landing her TV job, she says, "It didn't hurt to be young or decent looking."

Pia Lindstrom, a general assignment reporter for WNBC-TV in New York, worked previously as an actress in Italian films, a panelist on game shows, and hosted her own interview program.

Royal Kennedy, urban affairs reporter for WKYC, the NBC affiliate in Cleveland, Ohio, is graced with looks, brains, and a perfect screen name. She says, "You can't make it in TV on looks alone."

Newswomen and Television— Beauty on the Tube

by Connecticut Walker

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Almost imperceptibly over the past five years there has grown up in this country a new breed of journalist— young, well-educated, articulate, personality-laden, and photogenic—the woman TV reporter.

Every city of any size has several, as do each of the networks. They have come to be considered basic components of the news staff. No TV station can afford to be without one.

But is a woman TV reporter just a pretty face? When did you last switch on your nightly news to find a plain Jane rattling off the latest unemployment figures or reviewing the day's Watergate testimony? Are youth, good looks, and personality the essential prerequisites for a TV woman journalist?

Will the current crop of female newscasters remain on the air when they become middle-aged, or will they, like airline hostesses, be nudged towards quick retirement? Would any network hire a woman reporter with the shape of Charles Kuralt, the nasal twang of Irving R. Levine or the unabashedly funny features of Gene Shalit?

If you put these questions to TV network executives who do the hiring— mostly men, incidentally—they protest, perhaps too much, and explain that they're in charge of running news programs, not beauty contests.

Bill Small, a CBS vice president who's hired almost all the women newscasters on his network, declares, "It's our job to produce the best newscasts we can. We employ the most competent and experienced reporters we can find, not pretty faces."

Adds a member of ABC-TV's management: "I don't care if a girl is glamorous, sexy or stylish. We put journalists on the air who know how to get a story, organize it, and present it effectively."

"To tell you the truth," admits the program director of a West Coast station, "The Justice Department and the Equal Rights Amendment have something to do with the new crop of women newscasters. We not only have to hire women but also blacks and other minorities, so that at license renewal time the management is not accused of practicing race or sex discrimination."

Female audience

"The other important factor," he explains, "is that at least half your TV audience consists of women—the daytime audience is primarily women—and it takes one to identify with one."

Which is exactly how and why Sandy Hill (on our cover today) came to be hired as a TV newscaster. Phil Corvo, program director at KGTV in San Diego, who occupied that same position at KIRO-TV, Seattle, says, "I realized in 1969 that there was no female TV newscaster in Seattle. I knew that was a large mistake, because the same situation existed in Sacramento when I worked there. We would have a noon newscast without a female newscaster. Then we added one, and the audience on our station, KXTV, shot way up. We knew then that we had an audience of intelligent women who wanted some of the hard news delivered by a woman, so we started to use a female as a co-host."

"When I went up to Seattle," Corvo continues, "I decided to introduce the same system there. I advertised in the newspapers and the local universities for a young woman with some journalism or stage experience to co-host our noon news. We held 102 auditions and finally chose Sandy Hill, a young married who'd been working at a local bank."

Was Sandy Hill chosen because she was a demon reporter with an extensive background in journalism? Was she the most qualified young woman in Seattle for the position, or one of the most qualified? Or was she chosen because she had been a Miss Washington beauty contest winner?

"We chose Sandy Hill for the job," Corvo says, "because she was vivacious, effervescent, and she'd been Miss Washington. Also, she could write, she knew Seattle and the local politics, and she was a graduate of the University of Washington. Moreover, she could ad lib and communicate with people. TV is, after all, a visual medium, and Sandy was pleasant to look at, so Jim Topping, the news director, and I began to train her. We signed her at scale, I think it was $180 a week, and we taught her how to read, how to project her voice, how to emphasize some words and soft-pedal others.

"She was married at the time to Craig Hill, still is, I believe, and she could concentrate on her work, didn't have to worry about boyfriends. She was an apt pupil and inside of six months we had her doing the weather, interviews and the news. Eventually she became anchorwoman or anchorperson for the station's Eyewitness News."

Down to L.A.

Last July, KNXT, Los Angeles, one of CBS-TV's flagship stations, brought Sandy to Los Angeles, where for approximately $22,000 a year she co-anchors the station's two-hour early evening news program.

If you ask all-American-looking Sandy why she thinks she was originally hired in Seattle, she says defensively, "Because they thought I could do the job. What happened was that I was working in the First National Bank up there with not very much of a future, and my husband saw this advertisement in the paper and suggested that I answer it. I got lucky and was hired."

Sandy, who majored in Spanish at the University of Washington, does not like to admit that her pretty face and appealing personality featured significantly in her hiring. "I can assure you," she says, "if I didn't or couldn't do the job, I wouldn't last very long. I agree that looks may have had something to do with my getting the opportunity, but I think the same thing applies to men. I don't see TV program managers hiring men newscasters who aren't good-looking or personable."

And yet Bill Slout who co-anchors the news over Channel 2 in Los Angeles with Sandy could hardly be called good-looking. His forte is 25 years of news-gathering experience.

For females who plan to enter TV journalism, a photogenic face and a trust-inspiring manner are indispensable assets. Ann Compton, 27, a dramatic-arts graduate from Hollins College who was recently appointed full-time White House correspondent for ABC News, remarks, "Most news directors pose questions about a woman TV reporter's competence after those concerning her attractiveness, her femininity and her youth."

Royal Kennedy, urban affairs reporter for WKYC, Cleveland, says, "You can't make it in TV on looks alone, but if two women reporters are equally talented, and one is pretty, the pretty one is bound to get the job."

The traditional way

In Washington, D.C., Connie Chung, 28, CBS network correspondent and a most beautiful, exotic-looking TV reporter, explains boldly, "The networks are reluctant to put ugly women on the air whereas they use a number of men who are fat, bald, or not very handsome. It's been this way for years."

Ruth Ashton Taylor of KNXT, Los Angeles, one of the first women in this country to carve out a successful career in broadcast journalism—she was the only woman in the original CBS documentary unit under the late Edward R. Murrow—recalls that when women were first brought into TV, "they were assigned strictly to women-type stories, fashions, cooking, child-rearing, that sort of thing. But now," she notes, "the picture is very different. Hiring female TV reporters is the stylish thing to do. The problem is that many of the women in TV are hired not because of their education or experience. It's more like casting a show."

"A woman has to have youth and good looks, and I certainly wasn't all that ugly, but I wasn't hired because I was good-looking. CBS got me out of the Columbia University School of Journalism in the 1940's, and I went on the first TV news program in 1951 after working with Bob Trout and Ed Murrow."

Hair and makeup

"Looks," says Mrs. Taylor, "is something I have to think about all the time. There's no use my trying to compete with the young girls that are coming into TV, because I'm not their age, and there's no fooling about that. But I do have to get my hair done several times a week and be careful of my makeup."

By and large, it seems, TV viewers are more critical of the appearance of women reporters than their male counterparts, and network hiring practice reflects this double standard. Richard Lobo, news director for the NBC affiliate in Cleveland, explains "that while TV stations may not want raving beauties or sex symbols, they're aware that their women reporters must please a wide audience. Some stations, particularly those catering to smaller, less sophisticated markets, may opt for looks over ability; they have a tendency to hire the blonde, wholesome-looking, unaggressive, yet still glamorous girl, but in larger stations you can find some talented women reporters who seem, at least to me, a bit frumpy."

The fact is that TV station managers are well aware that beautiful women attract audiences, and they use them as drawing cards.

A question of ratings

"What the executives do," says Ruth Ashton Taylor, "is to employ the analytical approach. They hire a public opinion research outfit to figure out what sort of personality the audience wants. Then they audition girls and check to see if they have the desirable characteristics. It's all very scientific and sales-oriented. What kind of ratings will one type of girl generate as opposed to another type of girl. The most important factor in TV is to attract a large audience, which in turn attracts the advertisers."

Sometimes, of course, there are subsidiary reasons for hiring females, says Connie Chung. "I was hired by CBS in October, 1971, when they were searching for women as well as other minorities to fill their employment quotas. In my case, being Chinese and a woman with some broadcasting experience, if only two years, was of greater advantage than being young and decent-looking. Those two assets didn't hurt, but the fact that I was a double minority was, I think, a more important factor in my getting the job."

"But being a woman and 'Oriental,'" she points out, "was also distracting to TV-watchers. When I first became a TV reporter after working as a copygirl and secretary for a local Washington station, I used to wonder sometimes whether I wasn't competing with my story for the audience's attention. I know their initial response was, 'Look she's Chinese.' But now after three years I think they're listening to what I say."

Many women TV reporters feel that their femininity, their looks, their figures prevent them from being taken seriously, that these characteristics detract from the substance of their reporting.

"Until your audience gets to know you and your work," says Ann Compton of ABC, "they're overly conscious of the visual image you present. First, they're struck by your face, your hair, your clothes. When I was telecasting in Virginia not a night went by without my getting a phone call, usually from a woman who asked, 'Why do you wear the same dresses so often?' Or from someone saying, 'I like your hair short.'"

Or someone else saying, 'Why don't you wear brighter colors?'

"Viewers are more demanding of women than men, and so are some stations. I know some women reporters who were ordered by their bosses to get their hair restyled, who were given money for new wardrobes, who had a total makeup job done and were ordered to wear false eyelashes. It's never happened to me. I've been treated as a professional who knows the rules and requirements of the medium. I don't wear white, busy jewelry, or scarves around the neck or washed-out pastel colors and so forth."

Replace anchormen?

The overwhelming majority of women in TV journalism are 10 to 20 years younger than the men. It remains to be seen whether station executives will permit this situation to reverse itself. Will women reporters gain in network status what they lose in looks? Is there any chance that one day an experienced TV woman will replace the likes of Walter Cronkite or Howard K. Smith? Is there the possibility that some TV network will develop a Dorothy Thompson of TV journalism?

Or is it more probable that as they age, today's female TV newscasters will be relegated to radio or off-camera work?

"In my own case," remarks Connie Chung only half-kidding, "I think I'll stay on the air longer than most, because Chinese people don't age very fast. My youthful looks will survive the disastrous forties and fifties. Chinese women hold their age well. They keep that quality Americans call inscrutability."

"More generally," she adds, "I think this present generation of women reporters will last as long on the air as men have in the past. Ability becomes more and more important as a reporter reaches middle age. If a man is a general assignment correspondent and hasn't attained some sort of star status or specialty by his forties, he'll languish regardless of his looks, and we women will, too."

In the future

Many station executives believe that the futures of today's women TV newscasters depend on how quickly the attitudes of TV audiences change.

"The important word," says Bill Eames, former news director of KNXT, Los Angeles, "is 'authority.' It is more difficult in our society for women on TV to project authority than it is for men. The TV audience gets the feeling that the woman is doing little more than reading. Yet there are women reporters who are excellent writers. It becomes a question of audience acceptance. As the audience becomes more accustomed to women newscasters on TV, the women become more acceptable, more credible, more authoritative. In 15 or 20 years, who knows?"

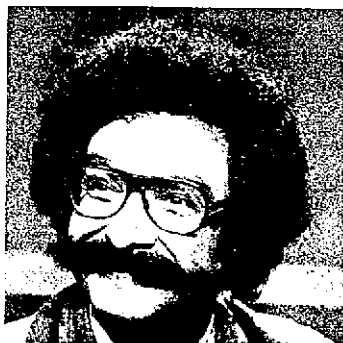

Expertise Above All—Four Male TV Reporters

Daniel Schorr, a former newspaperman, joined CBS in 1953. Incisive reports, especially on Watergate, have brought both plaudits and criticism.

Irving R. Levine, 24-year NBC veteran, has served in Rome, Moscow, Tokyo, and London bureaus, is now economic affairs correspondent in Washington.

Gene Shalit, panelist on NBC's Today show, began his journalistic career as a free-lance writer, got a radio job, moved to TV as a movie reviewer.

Charles Kuralt, 18 years with CBS, is best known for his "On the Road" series of unusual Americans; he's traveled the world making TV specials.

By authority of the National Governors' Conference,
The Franklin Mint presents

The Official Flags of the States

IN SOLID STERLING SILVER

INGOTS SHOWN APPROXIMATELY ACTUAL SIZE.

An historic and valuable American heirloom collection... 50 finely detailed miniature silver ingots commemorating the heritage of each of our 50 states.

To be issued in a single strictly limited edition.
LIMIT: ONE SET PER PERSON.
Orders must be postmarked by February 28, 1975.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA is one of the few major nations that gives great power to its member states. As a result, the official flags of our 50 states are both emblems of authority and symbols of each state's proud heritage. Together, they reflect the confidence and determination of a nation determined to fulfill its destiny.

It is more than fitting, therefore, that the National Governors' Conference—whose members are the Governors of all 50 states—has designated The Official Flags of the States as the basis for a permanent tribute to the sovereignty of every state.

This tribute will take the form of a dramatically beautiful heirloom collection portraying all 50 of these historic flags in the distinctive form of solid sterling silver miniature ingots. The collection will be minted and made available to Americans by The Franklin Mint, America's foremost private mint, acting under authorization from the National Governors' Conference. It will be the first Mini-Ingot collection to honor all 50 state flags.

Proud banners that tell our country's story

The designs of our 50 state flags vary tremendously. Some are intricate, others dramatically simple. Yet few other symbols tell our country's story so well.

It is a story of unity and diversity and above all—of the achievements of the American people. Together, the 50 silver ingots in this impressive new collection will form a tribute to America that is as meaningful as it is beautiful.

INGOT SHOWN ACTUAL SIZE.

Many of our state flags feature elements that refer to the days when our nation was born. The Palmetto tree on South Carolina's banner, for example, dates back to 1776 and the heroic defense of a fort built with palmetto tree logs that absorbed the cannonballs fired at them. And New York's banner proclaims that state's pride in our national independence through a crest on which a global map of the New World is surmounted by the American eagle.

Several state flags honor the American Indian, or reflect the influence of the frontier in other ways. The Massachusetts flag, for instance, includes the figure of an Indian as it first appeared on a seal granted to the Plymouth Company in the early 1600s. And the flag of Kentucky, the first "western" state admitted to the Union, shows a frontiersman and a city-dweller embracing in friendship.

Among the state flags that date from the period after the Civil War, those of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi are all based on the "Stars and Bars" of the Confederacy. A great many others incorporate either stars or the American eagle as symbols of union.

And the flags of Texas and Hawaii are virtually the same ones that flew when those states were independent nations.

Exquisite craftsmanship in silver

As befits a work authorized by the National Governors' Conference, these Mini-Ingots are extraordinary examples of the minter's art—minted with great precision and as accurate as they can be.

The master craftsmen of The Franklin Mint—famed throughout the world for their artistry in silver—have captured here the spirit as well as the substance of all 50 flag designs. And the total effect of the complete collection is one of dazzling beauty, inspiring admiration and awe.

A limited edition of assured rarity

The Official Flags of the States Mini-Ingot Collection will be issued only as a complete set, in a single, strictly limited edition. There is an absolute limit of one set per person, and the total number of sets to be minted will be forever held to the exact number of orders entered by the closing date of February 28, 1975. After those sets are minted, the special dies from which these Mini-Ingots are struck will be destroyed—and this collection will never be issued again.

The original issue price for the complete collection of 50 solid sterling silver Mini-Ingots is $250, and you may charge the collection to your BankAmericard or Master Charge account, or pay for it on a convenient monthly basis.

To protect and display your complete collection, moreover, a deluxe hardwood case will be provided at no additional charge. This case includes a transparent top, so that the entire set can be proudly displayed even when the lid is closed. An authoritative history of our state flags will also be provided.

An important and distinctive collection

The flags of our 50 United States are as important as they are fascinating. They stand as proud and stirring symbols of our great American heritage. And this collection of The Official State Flags deserves an honored place in your home. It is a treasure of American commemorative art that will inspire your children and their children for generations to come.

Subscription deadline: February 28

Please remember that this is the only time The Official Flags of the States Mini-Ingot Collection will ever be offered. To acquire this impressive and very meaningful collection, be sure your order is postmarked by February 28, 1975.

MALPRACTICE INSURANCE

Most doctors in the U.S. carry medical malpractice insurance, paying annual premiums that range from $3000 to $35,000. Anesthesiologists and surgeons pay the highest premiums because they incur the highest risks.

Since patients these days are more quick to sue, and juries are more quick to vote them million-dollar awards, the insurance companies which once issued medical malpractice coverage no longer wish to write such policies; they lose money on them.

Within the next year 50,000 physicians in New York, California, Illinois, and other states may be unable to find malpractice coverage. What are they to do?

One solution, offered by Gleeson Payne, former California State Insurance Commissioner, calls for the organization of a no-fault, state-sponsored medical malpractice insurance system. In such a setup all the liability insurance companies would be required by the state to contribute to a malpractice pool. A patient who claimed he was the victim of medical malpractice would file a claim against the pool and settle for an amount according to a previously set schedule of benefits.

If doctors become uninsurable, they may be forced to have each of their patients sign a release, prior to treatment, holding them unaccountable.

SEX CLINICS

Most of the sex therapy clinics in the United States today are "institutions operated for money by pure charlatans." So declares Dr. William H.

Masters, director of the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation in St. Louis and possibly the world's best-known sex therapist.

Masters, who with his wife, Virginia, co-authored "Human Sexual Inadequacy," contends: "Out of the 3500 to 5000 sex therapy clinics operating in the U.S., not 50 — by any stretch of the imagination can be considered legitimate. The public is being incredibly bilked."

Sex clinics are relatively new and were founded to treat sexual dysfunction among married couples. To be effective they should be staffed by well-trained sex therapy teams.

"If every patient," suggests Masters, "demanded information on the educational background of his or her therapists, this would immediately close half the sex therapy clinics in the United States."

TWIGGY AND BOYFRIEND MICHAEL WITNEY

IN LOVE AND FAT

Lesley Hornby, the attractive paper-thin London model better known as Twiggy, is having problems with her boyish figure. Once the idol of a whole generation of girls, Twiggy says, "I've never been so fat. I weigh more now than I've ever weighed before — 105 pounds."

Love is responsible for Twiggy's new roundness. She's in love with Michael Witney, 43, a Hollywood actor she met when she was working in California. They plan — so says Twiggy — to get married soon.

THE TOP 10 FILM EARNERS

Of all the films made to date, "The Godfather," starring Marlon Brando, ranks as the all-time box-office champion with a net profit at the end of 1974 of $85,747,184. So reports Variety, the show business weekly.

"The Sound of Music," the number-one box-office attraction until "The Godfather" replaced it in 1972, ranks second with a net of $83,891,000.

"Gone With the Wind," produced in 1939 and re-released half a dozen times, has netted $70,179,000 and ranks third.

A newcomer to the fourth spot is "The Sting," a production in nostalgia, starring Robert Redford and Paul Newman as two con men. "The Sting," released in late 1973, netted $68,450,000 at the end of December, 1974.

In fifth position is "The Exorcist," by William Peter Blatty, which netted $66,300,000 in its first year.

The remaining five in the first 10 are "Love Story" (1970), "The Graduate" (1968), "Airport" (1970), "Doctor Zhivago" (1965) and "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" (1969).

REQUIRED WEARING

In 1971 Australia introduced compulsory car seat-belt usage. It reduced the casualty rate by 25 percent. Today those Australian drivers and passengers who don't hook up are fined a minimum of $20 each.

Starting this year, Sweden has made the wearing of seat belts in the front seats mandatory. Those who don't obey the law are fined 50 krona ($12).

In France, motorists in the front seats must wear seat belts for highway driving during the day, and from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. for in-city driving.

In Spain a compulsory seat-belt law goes into effect in April. It is just a question of time before some state in this country passes a law making mandatory the wearing of seat belts. It will save countless lives.

NOW... You can get $10,000 Life Insurance for as little as $4.84 a month

(male age 26)

...and this low monthly premium is guaranteed not to increase for a full 20 years.

The Gerber baby—a symbol of quality and dependability to parents all over the world.

Gerber Life knows how tough it can be to squeeze out a few dollars for insurance with today's cost of living so high—and going still higher. We also know that most people don't have enough insurance, especially while they're young and need it most. That's why we offer this comprehensive, low-cost 20-Year Term Life Insurance Plan to people on the way up—people whose income and savings have just started to grow.

Low Monthly Premium is Guaranteed for 20 Years

You might expect the Gerber Life policy described in this ad to cost a whole lot more than it does. Happily, you can have all this valuable coverage for no more than $4.84 a month at age 26. Unlike many other term policies, the face amount of this Gerber life policy never decreases, and the low monthly premium never increases—for a full 20 years.

Then, you have the absolute right to automatically renew your coverage every five years up to age 65—without a physical examination—at the low monthly rate for your age at the time of renewal.

No Physical Examination is Needed to Apply One of the special features of your $10,000 20-Year Term Policy is that you don't have to take a physical to apply for it. All you have to do is answer the few brief questions on the application below; then, return the completed form with just $1 to our Home Office. If we find you're in average good health—and almost 90% of the people who apply are—we'll promptly issue your policy, and your $1 will cover you for the first full month. After that, you only pay the low monthly premium, as shown below, for your age now.

You Have 10 Full Days to Examine Your Policy Without Obligation

You not only enjoy the full protection of your $10,000.00 Term Life policy (TTP-701) for just $1 the first month, you also enjoy the privilege of examining it in your home for 10 days without obligation.

GUNS IN THE SOVIET UNION

Recently "Krasnaya Zveda," the Soviet Army newspaper, which rarely prints crime stories, published "The Case of the Lost Pistol." It told about a criminal character, Yurchenko, who fired a revolver at his friend, killed him, was caught, and sentenced to death.

For the past several months Moscow has avidly followed its own crime story involving a local Jack the Ripper who violates, then murders women. Crime in fact is rapidly becoming the hottest subject of discussion among the majority of law-abiding Soviet citizens.

The rise in the Soviet crime rate is rapidly affecting popular thinking. Theoretically everyone in the Soviet Union has the legal right to practice self-defense, but in practice the permissive limits are dangerously vague. Many people have been jailed for overstepping them.

What is basically involved is the subject of weapons. No one in Moscow or Leningrad or Kiev wants to fall prey to a robber or a rapist, but no suitable weapons for self-defense are available in Soviet shops.

Even hunting rifles can be purchased only by members of legitimate hunting clubs. The result is that the average Russian builds his own weapon from the simplest truncheon to the sharpest file, many of which are "borrowed" from local factories. Taxi drivers in Moscow are particularly vulnerable to holdups. Many of them now ride with a hammer or a car jack beside them.

Among black market items whose prices have risen markedly in recent weeks are police whistles, starting pistols, and manuals for karate and judo.

In Russia anyone who needs a gun regards the army depots as their only source. Soldiers in trouble who need money will on occasion steal a revolver and sell it. "Krasnaya Zveda" blames the carelessness of high-ranking army officers for allowing such situations to develop. It calls upon enlisted men and officers to help the Soviet police in checking the latest crime wave.

Other newspapers have adopted the same theme. "Trud," the trade union publication, a few weeks ago ran "A Pistol for 10 Rubles," a story in which bank robbers in Rostov-on-Don fabricated their own guns from materials used in a local factory. The workers who assisted the thieves wanted money for drink and were glad to earn an extra few rubles.

Gun control in the Soviet Union is exceedingly strict. Even so an estimated eight to 10 million unregistered hunting rifles are in private hands, and a black market in guns thrives. Fear in the Soviet Union is the omnipresent, all-pervasive, dominant emotion.

STEWART'S RABBIT

What does a famous film actor do when he reaches age 65 and can no longer play romantic leads? He can try television or TV commercials or settle for small character parts in the few remaining films Hollywood produces each year.

But suppose none of those alternatives works? Then, if he's James Stewart, he returns to his first love, the stage. Which is exactly what Stewart will do. Come April, Stewart will fly to London and for six months star in Harvey, Mary Chase's whimsical play about a delightful rabbit.

This will mark the sixth time Stewart has played Harvey. He twice, in 1947 and '48, replaced the late Frank Fay as Elwood P. Dowd in the original Broadway version. Then he starred in the Universal screen version in 1950. Twenty years later he returned to Broadway and worked Harvey with Helen Hayes, following up with a TV version in 1972.

Whenever things go slack for him in Hollywood, Jimmy Stewart pulls the rabbit out of his hat. Harvey is always there to fall back on.

JIMMY STEWART IN THE MOVIE 'HARVEY'

CIA INVESTIGATIONS For the next few months the President's commission as well as several Congressional ones will delve into the Central Intelligence Agency, investigating charges of domestic spying.

Whatever these commissions discover — and the chances are good that they will discover much — they must not in the process destroy the reputation or irreparably damage the foundations of an institution which on balance has served the nation well.

The basic problem of the CIA in a democratic society is one of keeping that agency accountable. If there has been any dereliction of duty on that score, one should look for explanations to Senate and House CIA oversight subcommittees headed by "Honest John" Stennis (D., Miss.) and Rep. Lucien Norbert Nedzi (D., Mich.), two men whose misguided faith may have permitted the CIA to stray too far in its basic mission of gathering and assessing intelligence.

swiss gold bar pendant

IN 24K GOLD ELECTROPLATE
OUR "PERFECT COUNTERFEIT"
INCLUDES 24" GOLDEN CHAIN

Look and feel like a million dollars in our fabulous Swiss Gold Bar pendant. Inspired by the solid gold ingots that are stashed in the legendary vaults of Swiss Banks. A great conversation piece — a stunning piece of jewelry — a fantastic gift idea.

For those who would like the look and feel of a solid gold bar, markings and all, for a fraction of the price, we have created our "PERFECT COUNTERFEIT" gold bar pendant. It is identical to the same genuine gold bar pendant we have actually sold for $260! Electroplated with real 24K gold, so it has the same rich look of burnished gold . . . the same heavy, rich feel. Includes a generous, richly woven 24" golden chain. But hurry — with the price of gold fluctuating the way it is, we don't know how long we can offer it at this bargain price.

SUNFLOWER sole

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

High in the sky, America's airlines are catering to the increasingly sophisticated tastes of their passengers by serving appealing dishes like Sunflower Sole. Here's our easy-to-follow version of this airline recipe.

Sunflower seeds are easily obtainable at health food stores and some supermarkets. No mention was made in the original recipe about what to do with the perfectly delicious broth in which the fish was poached (about 1 1/2 cups), but we found that it added a wonderful flavor to seafood soup or chowder.

SUNFLOWER SOLE

6 tablespoons raw, shelled sunflower seeds	1 1/2 teaspoons savory salt
1/2 cup chicken broth	1 1/2 lemons, juice
6 pieces fillet of sole* (about 1 3/4 lbs.)	1 cup medium white sauce
6 tablespoons butter or margarine	3/4 cup half-and-half
3/4 cup dry white wine	Salt and pepper to taste
1 1/2 tablespoons minced onions	1/2 cup whipping cream
1/4 teaspoon thyme	Chopped parsley

Simmer sunflower seeds in chicken broth 10 minutes. Fold each piece of sole lengthwise; place in shallow pan with butter, wine and onions. Add seasonings. Cover pan with foil; bake at 325 degrees for 10 minutes. Meanwhile, combine lemon juice, white sauce and half-and-half. Stir in sunflower seeds and broth in which they were cooked. Heat; season to taste with salt and pepper. Whip cream, stir in. To serve, spoon sauce over sole; sprinkle with chopped parsley. Makes six servings.

AC-N16

It started in the 6th grade: Tennis champion Billie Jean King has named Richard G. Bamrick (r) to receive annual teacher-of-the-year award. He's still, in Long Beach, Calif., teaching 6th grade.

1975 Golden Key Award Winner

Billie Jean King's Favorite Teacher

by Herbert Kupferberg

DALLAS, TEX.

Billie Jean King, the women's champion tennis player, has just gotten even with her sixth-grade teacher, Richard G. Bamrick. She's named him as 1975 recipient of the Golden Key Award, given annually to a teacher who has helped shape the career of one of America's most prominent citizens.

The presentation will be made next Saturday night in Dallas, Tex., at the annual convention of the American Association of School Administrators, which, with six other national education organizations, sponsors the award.

Billie Jean says she vowed her "revenge" on her teacher at the age of 11 when he called on her to make a speech in class. Recalls Bamrick, who's still teaching the sixth grade: "She said: 'Well, Mr. Bamrick, you put me on the spot. Someday it'll be my turn.' She was right—but I never dreamt it would be making an acceptance speech as teacher of the year in Dallas."

Billie Jean says she's grateful to Bamrick for helping her get over a fear of giving oral reports in class, which had plagued her through the first five grades of elementary school.

"He understood things like that," she remembers. "He encouraged me to talk about something I really liked, like baseball. By then I had figured it couldn't be any worse than it had been the year before, and when I spoke I found that other kids were genuinely interested in what I was saying because I was, too. I found out I was really communicating. From baseball I went on to dirigibles and everything was pretty okay after that.

"That was also the year I started to play tennis and began having to deal with total strangers. Those two things—tennis and Mr. Bamrick—helped me to get out of my shell."

His first class

What Billie Jean didn't know then was that Mr. Bamrick himself had some problems to overcome in that class at Los Cerritos Elementary School. He was 26 years old, just out of the Air Force, and was teaching his first class.

"I was a little hazy about what tactics to pursue in a classroom," he says. "But Billie Jean was the kind of student who supports and helps a teacher. You can tell in two days those students who are with you and those who are against you, just by the way they ask questions. I remember her as a shy, quiet, withdrawn girl who was reluctant to participate in discussions. But we had a policy of giving speeches in classes, and I told her how to look around during a talk, make eye contact with listeners, and things like that. I encouraged her to be herself. And that's how she found she could communicate."

Bamrick remembers Billie Jean as a student who even then was noted for her love of sports. "She played on the softball team," he says, "and was a fine natural athlete. I knew she was starting tennis and encouraged her, but I can't say I really had anything to do with it. In after years, I used to tell my family as a kind of joke, 'Well, I taught her everything she knows except tennis.' And of course they would answer: 'What else is there?'"

Bamrick himself is a transplanted Californian originally from Rockwell, Iowa. When his girlfriend Patricia moved to Long Beach, he moved right after her and married her. Now they have six children ranging in age from 23 down to five.

"In the Air Force we learned to make six copies of everything," quips Bamrick.

Bamrick, who is 46, has taught sixth grade ever since he started with Billie Jean's class, moving around three different schools in Long Beach. Right now he's at the Theodore Roosevelt Elementary School.

"There's been considerable change in sixth-graders over the last 20 years," he says. "The kids today are much more alert and more aware of what's going on in the world. They also have a lot less confidence and trust in their country's leaders than was true in the 1950s. Billie Jean went to what I call a 'country club' type of school. I'm now teaching in a central city school, where youngsters are inclined to be more suspicious of strangers. It takes them a while to get to know you."

Bamrick believes that wherever they're going to school, children today are getting a better education than their predecessors two decades ago.

"Teaching is better," he said. "Twenty years ago they were taking practically anybody who applied for a job. Today there's much more of a choice among fine young teachers. Teachers' training is much better, and materials are greatly improved. I also think there are more top-quality students, of the Billie Jean type."

Likes the work

"It's a rewarding kind of work, no matter what school you're teaching in. I'm the only person I've ever known who's been paid for 20 years for having the time of his life. That's most days, of course—not every day."

"When you receive an award like this, it's difficult to say what's in your heart. Over the years you forget the specific incidents—who said or did what. But you remember the good warm feeling you have in your heart from the kids you've known and worked with."

Joining the American Association of School Administrators in sponsoring the Golden Key Award are the Council of Chief State School Officers, Education Industries Association, National Council of State Education Associations, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, National School Boards Association, and National School Public Relations Association.

Keeping Up... With Youth

No Heroes

When the Gallup pollsters recently interviewed a cross section of the American people—1517 adults, 18 and older—and asked them to name a man they most admired and a woman they most admired, 47 percent were unable to name such a man and 57 percent were unable to name such a woman.

The pollsters, however, finally came up with lists of the 10 most admired men and women. Perhaps "publicized" should be substituted for the word "admitted."

7. RALPH NADER
8. HENRY JACKSON
9. POPE PAUL VI
10. BARRY GOLDWATER

You will note that most of the men listed are politicians. Yet Gallup Polls have long held that politicians in American life are generally held in low esteem.

Of the men who appeal, the youngest is Ralph Nader, who will be 41 on Feb. 24, 1975. Nader did not make the 1974 Gallup list. But when PARADE recently asked 250 youngsters, 18 and under, to name the man they most admired, they voted Ralph Nader their No. 1, Henry Kissinger No. 2, and Elvis Presley No. 3.

As regards contemporary heroines, more than 90 percent of the 250 youths PARADE queried were unable to name a single woman they admired most. Many of them finally resorted to "my mother," and those who could find a name, offered Billie Jean King, Judy Collins, and Helen Reddy. It is obvious that most young Americans lack present-day heroes, and most frequently identify with sports and entertainment personalities.

Before: "When you're 180 pounds, you have to grin and bear it—or do something about your weight."

After: "125 pounds! As you can see, I did something about my weight."

She had five children and lost 63 pounds.

How Shirley Badders got fat having 3 babies, took it off, then slimmed down even more having twins.

By Ruth L. McCarthy

Shirley is quite a woman. You could even say she's a knockout! Poised. Articulate. Clothes-conscious. Happy with her husband. Proud of her five children. Why, she's even eight pounds slimmer and almost one inch taller since the last time I saw her. Perhaps because she's standing straighter these days. Whatever the reason, Shirley Badders has come a long way in the past three years.

At our first meeting, she had lost 55 pounds—or what she liked to call her "shame fat." You see, Shirley had come from a large family, so she had learned to cook enormous meals. When she married, in her teens, she had a dreadful time getting used to cutting down on the amount of food she cooked. If it wasn't all eaten, she'd feel so ashamed about wasting good food that she'd stuff herself with it.

As a result, each time she became pregnant, she had to wear maternity clothes in her second month. By the time her third child was born, Shirley was carrying around 180 pounds—mostly from the waist down. Why it was almost impossible for her to find pantyhose to fit. So she wore regular stockings with the fat bulging over the top.

Actually, it was a party joke about her "hangover" knees that finally jolted Shirley into doing something about her weight. Luckily, she remembered that her mother had once used those reducing-plan candies, Ayds®, and with great success. So Shirley picked up a box of the vanilla caramel kind at a drug counter and started on the plan. She took one or two Ayds before each meal with a hot drink and they really helped her cut back on what she ate. They even helped free Shirley from the late-night sandwich trap, and she was able to go from 180 to 125 pounds.

Although Shirley said little about her marriage during that first meeting, there were problems. Unfortunately, they didn't go away even after she'd slimmed down. So eventually Shirley and her husband separated.

During my recent meeting with Shirley, I learned she had married again. And happily so to Larry Badders. When I admired the way she'd kept her weight down, Shirley smiled and said that Larry had never seen her heavy, except when she was pregnant with their twins. And even then, she apparently had held her weight down. Because Shirley told of a sight-seeing trip to Rock City when she was seven months "big," and she was still able to squeeze through Thin Man's Pass.

Interestingly, Shirley weighed only 121 pounds the day she left the hospital (in Muncie, Indiana) with the twins. And at this writing she is now a trim 117 pounds. "I no longer have to worry about willpower," said Shirley. "Thanks to the Ayds plan, the willpower is 'there' now."

Your words certainly are an inspiration to all of us, Shirley. With five children and a figure as trim as yours, you've got to have something going for you. Must be those Ayds!

Now: "As the mother of five, I decided to put on a body shirt so you could see my slimmer-than-ever figure—117 pounds."

Style It Yourself

Looking for an economical, attractive way to enhance your family's wardrobe and accessories? Who isn't, these days?

PARADE is offering to its readers a useful, handy, 50-page booklet called Crochet With Squares—a step-by-step instruction manual which can repay many times its cost of only $1 plus 25 cents mailing.

Crochet With Squares shows you how to make such items as capes, ponchos, shawls, toppers, jumpers and hats. These aren't just ordinary articles of clothing—but colorful, imaginative, original items that will leave your friends envious and wondering where you obtained such lovely things.

You'll also find you can make such accessories as handy tote bags, pillows, boots, afghans—even your own cozy sleeping bags.

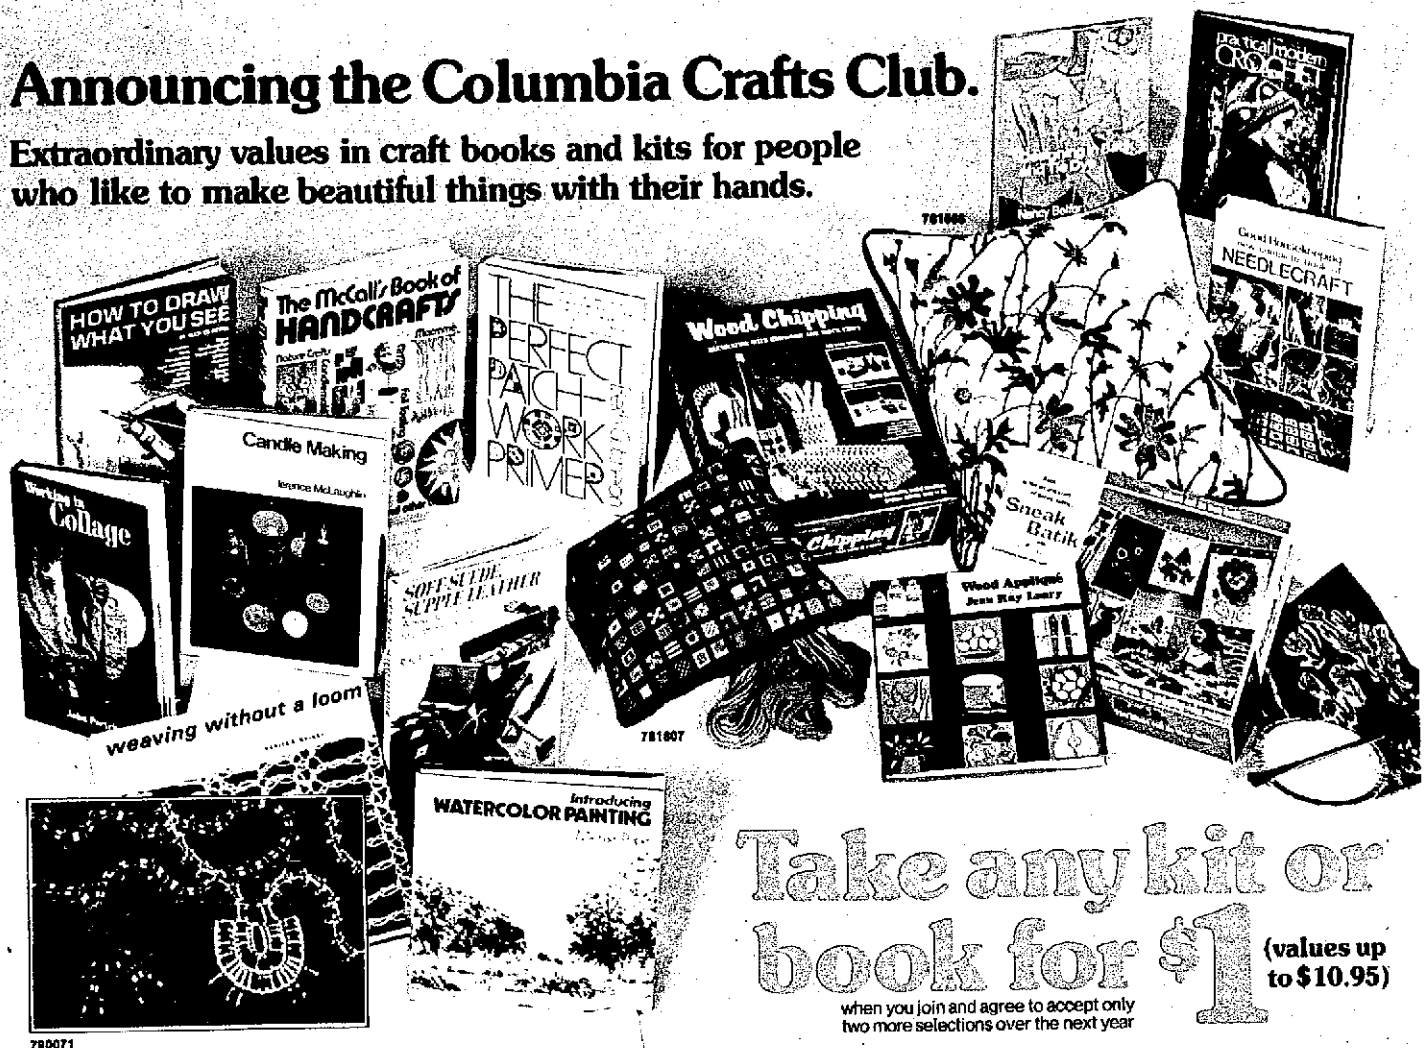

Even for those acquainted with the art of crocheting, this is a book that will expand their skills and open the way to many new products. The Crochet With Squares technique is basically simple—but it can be turned to many amazing uses.

The book, illustrated with full-page photos and many diagrams, is written in a practical, useful way—with instructions that are clear and easy to follow. For a modest investment, Crochet With Squares will bring a new level of fashion enrichment to you and your entire family.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "Crochet With Squares" to PARADE, P.O. Box 4, Dept. CC, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H®—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

Make It Easy For the Kids When You Move

by Noel Humphreys

You may very well change your residence soon, and your children may suffer from it. That's the word from Dr. Gerald Weinberger of Columbia University's Teachers College who studies the psychological problems of children.

Moving may make a child return to old, nearly forgotten habits, like thumb-sucking or bed-wetting. A teen-ager may become a chronic complainer or mope endlessly.

These kinds of problems are important. More than 36 million Americans move every year, about half of them under 18.

Particularly vulnerable, Weinberger says, are children in families that are already tense, either from problems between the parents or between parents and children. "A move, especially an unwanted one, can tear a family open," says Weinberger.

Weinberger offers these suggestions:

1. Give a child time to prepare himself. "Administer the move to the child like an inoculation, a little at first to prepare for more later," Weinberger says.
2. Let there be full discussion about feelings. Parents can talk over both sadness about leaving friends and excitement about the new place. "Make moving an acceptable topic of conversation," Weinberger says.
3. Parents should familiarize children with the new place through visits to the new house, the new school, and, perhaps, the new teacher. If the distance is great, parents should show children pictures of the new area, including the new house. Subscribing to the newspaper in the new area can be helpful. "The child can learn what the comics look like in the new place, or a teen might see what movies are playing or how the high school football team is doing," Weinberger says.
4. Children should help with the packing. Not only is it a "together" family activity, but it gives the kids a sense of continuity.
5. Younger children (say, under 10) depend on their surroundings. Even a 3- or 4-year-old can be included in decisions about what to keep and what to leave.

"For example, be sure to take his bicycle, unless he wants to get rid of it," Weinberger says, "because even though he'll be riding in a new neighborhood, he'll know he'll still be riding the same bike."

© Cowles Communications

6. Younger children's friends are more easily replaceable than their surroundings. It's the other way around for older children. They cope better with the new surroundings and miss their friends more. Therefore parents need to help the children ease out of old relationships and into new ones.

For instance, after a few weeks in the new place, parents can allow their children to go back to spend a weekend with a friend. Even better, says Weinberger, is to invite the old friends to come for a visit.

Likewise, teens need support in going out to find new friends.

7. Parents should talk to a child's teacher(s). The child feels reassured that the parent cares, and the teacher gets information and can then help the child settle in.

8. The best time of the year to move children, Weinberger says, is as soon as school recesses for the summer.

Moving during the school year burdens the child scholastically, because the new classes are probably at a point in the curriculum different from the old school. A move just before the new school begins fails to allow the child to develop patterns in the new locale before having to cope with schoolwork.

9. There apparently is no "best age" at which to move children, but a move just before a youngster's senior or junior year in high school is probably the worst time. "Unless a girl is gorgeous or a guy is a great athlete, it'll be hard for the kids to break through the established cliques," says Weinberger.

Weinberger says that if a child's discontent with the new place lasts more than a month or two, there may be something wrong. Likewise, if a child has no new friends in a month, the parents and child should talk about it.

"Moving can exacerbate problems or it can be a period of family growth, an exciting, shared event. Much depends on the parents," concludes Weinberger.

my FAVORITE jokes

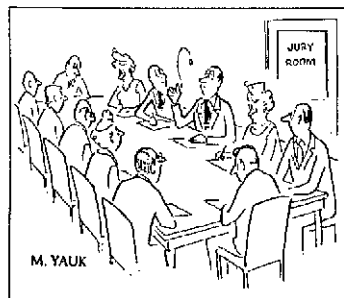

by bob sydney

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bob Sydney's been in show business since World War II, when he was in an army show. He's performed at top clubs, including Palumbo's, Philadelphia; Playboy circuit; Holiday House, Pittsburgh, and hotels in Miami Beach. He makes his home in New York City where, he says, "I live in a luxury apartment house, but it happens to be in a bad neighborhood. I'm the only guy who was ever mugged on his terrace."

But Sydney feels that the stage is his "natural habitat" no matter where that leads him—he'll travel by land or sea in order to entertain. This sometimes entails making special adjustments to recreate his home environment. "When I'm on a cruise," he says, "two days before we dock in New York I hang around under the smokestack—I want to get used to the air in New York."

Here are some of Bob Sydney's jokes:

Two racketeers were backing a singer, and they put him into a big nightclub. He had a great wardrobe, superb arrangements, but the first song he did was awful. Everybody was cringing in their seats. The second and third songs were even worse. During the fourth number one of the gangsters walked onto the stage and said: "Forget it, kid; we're going to make you a fighter."

A fellow applies for the Olympics and the interviewer asks him what he can do. He says: "Well there's a lot of pluses and a lot of minuses." "Give me the pluses," says the interviewer. "Well the pluses are I can run the 100-yard dash in 6½ seconds; the world's record is 9. I can throw a discus 500 feet, the world's record is 225, and I can swim 100 meters in 30 seconds and the world's record is 50." The interviewer says: "That's marvelous, what are the minuses?" The guy says: "I exaggerate a lot."

A New York couple with a prosperous business had a do-nothing son who refused to work. They finally sent him off to Europe where he wouldn't be an embarrassment to them.

Every month they sent him money, and 10 years later they got a letter from him saying he'd become a great violinist, was a success all over Europe and was coming home.

Well, the parents went bananas. They rented Carnegie Hall so their son could give a concert and reserved the ballroom at a nearby hotel to give a banquet for friends and relatives. If the concert was a flop, however, the banquet would be called off.

It's the night of the concert, and the hall is packed, jammed tight with relatives. The son walks out on stage, the dicky of his tuxedo flies out and hits him in the face, and he falls into the orchestra pit on top of his violin and crushes it.

His father immediately dashes out of the hall, runs to the hotel to cancel the banquet and as he walks into the main ballroom he sees an aunt and an uncle sitting there, dining on caviar, pheasant under glass and champagne. He says, "What are you eating for? I told you that the dinner would take place only if the concert was a success. The concert was a failure!" So the uncle looks up and he says: "We liked it!"

I'll tell you what a loser is. A loser is a Cuban prisoner who spends two months digging his way out of prison, another month in hiding, another month building a raft, sails it over to Miami, boards a plane to New York and gets hijacked to Cuba.

THE TRUTH ABOUT ARTHRITIS PAIN

• Backache
• Circulation
• Nervous Tension
...and how you can now get Blessed Relief

Doctors know that no cure for arthritis has yet been discovered. However, a method has been developed to ease the minor pain of arthritis whenever it occurs. Indeed, this same hospital-tested method also helps increase circulation, soothes nagging backache, even eases simple nervous tension to help bring restful sleep without drugs.

You'll discover a new joy in living

Imagine firm, but gentle, "fingers" massaging you where it hurts...in three separate directions: now up and down, then sideways, then in a circular motion. Couple this with controlled warmth penetrating your muscles and joints—and those minor aches and pains of arthritis and backache just melt away, circulation is increased, nervous tension is eased from your body in just minutes. You have to feel it to believe it!

Ask your doctor—proven effective in hospital tests

Fifteen years of hospital tests and over a million dollars in research prove that used as directed Niagara's unique combination of welcome warmth and 3-way massage help give temporary, repeatable relief from minor aches and pains, tension and fatigue. Your life may become active and full again. Peace of mind returns with a remarkable feeling of well-being. Sleep is natural, without drugs or pills. Almost instantly you discover a new joy in living.

Crack open a Zane Grey book and ride into a vast, rugged land with no fences to limit a man's freedom—or diminish his dreams.

It's a world where broken-nosed, bullet-scarred men ride hard, hunt bravely and shoot straight—or die early.

Where the Indians still don war paint to collect scalps and the buffalo roam in thundering herds. Where the land is still up for grabs—waiting for men with courage enough to tame it.

If this is the world you would like to explore, let us send you—for only $1—three of the greatest books Zane Grey ever wrote:

The Thundering Herd. Tom Doan sets out to find Millie Fayre, a petite beauty imprisoned by desperadoes, but finds himself trapped between rampaging Comanches and fifty square miles of stampeding buffaloes.

Riders of the Purple Sage. Probably the most popular Western ever written. In the midst of fiery action, a mysterious rider and the girl he loves gamble their lives in the winning of the West.

Wild Horse Mesa. A Western "Moby Dick" that portrays a man's desperate search for the King of the Horses.

These handsome, hardbound books are clothed in sunset red, desert tan and cavalry blue, and stamped in genuine gold. They're the first of what could be a library of Western classics you'll be proud to own.

And to introduce you to The Zane Grey Library, we'll send you all three books (regularly $13.17) for only $1.

We think you'll be impressed.

And you'll want to own others in the series as they become available.

They will include: Wildfire, Fighting Caravans, The Hash Knife Outfit, Maverick Queen, Thunder Mountain, The Vanishing American, Dude Ranger, and many more.

Because we print in large quantities, and because we sell directly to the public, we can offer our subscribers beautifully bound Zane Grey books for only a fraction of what you'd expect to pay—only $4.39 each plus postage and handling.

Send no money. Just mail the coupon to get The Thundering Herd, Riders of the Purple Sage and Wild Horse Mesa—the whole shooting match—at the special introductory price of $1 plus postage and handling. The Zane Grey Library, Roslyn, N.Y. 11576.

Go back with Zane Grey to where the buffalo still roam.

Zane Grey Library

Roslyn, N.Y. 11576

Please enroll me as a subscriber and send me at once my three hard-cover Zane Grey classics. I enclose no money now. After a week's examination, I will either keep my books and pay $1 (plus postage and handling) or return them.

Also reserve for me additional volumes in The Zane Grey Library series. As a subscriber, I will get advance descriptions of future volumes. For each volume I choose, I will pay $4.39 (plus postage and handling). I may return any book at the library's expense for full credit and I may cancel my reservation at any time.
